Report claims West German industrialist has been slain

PARIS (AP) — A communique received by an extreme leftist Paris newspaper Wednesday said "the existence of Mr. Hanns-Martin Schleyer has been ended." Schleyer, West German industrialist, was kidnaped by German terrorists Sept. 5.

The communique was signed "Commando Siegfried Houssner R.A.F."

That was the name of the German terror group that said it kidnaped Schleyer and threatened to execute him unless the West German government released 11 terrorists from West German jails and flew them to the refuge of their choice with nearly half a million dollars in ransom.

The government has not met the demands.

Earlier, police in Mulhouse in eastern France said they had received telephoned tips that Schleyer's body was in the trunk of a car. They said they were checking the car for booby traps and awaiting the arrival of the local district attorney to witness the opening of the trunk.

Police were alerted to the car by several telephone calls. An officer said one caller claimed he was from a news agency and another said he was German. This immediately raised suspicions that Schleyer, kidnaped Sept. 5, or his body could be in the trunk.

Schleyer, 62, was kidnaped by West German terrorists who threatened to execute him unless 11 of their jailed comrades were freed and flown to a refuge of their choice with nearly half a million dollars in ransom money.

Several deadlines for a West German government response went by without word as Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and his aides dealt with the hijacking of a Luftansa airliner commandeered in apparent coordination with the Schleyer case.

The hijacking ended at Mogadishu, Somalia, in the darkness Monday night with an assault and rescue of 86 hostages by specially trained West German anti-terrorist commandos.

But this left hanging the fate of Schleyer, executive in the giant Damlier-Benz automotive combine and president of the West German Employers' and Industrial Association.

Earlier rumors had circulated in France and West Germany that his body was found in the Seine River in Paris. This reflected widespread fears he would be executed as the kidnappers had threatened.

The car, a green Audi 80 sedan with German license No. HGAN 460, was found in the northern sector of this city near the West German border and about 280 miles southeast of Paris.

Five in area eye assessor's job

By BOB NAGEY
PB Staff Writer

Seventy-nine persons, including five from the valley, are seeking the position left vacant by the retirement of Los Angeles County Assessor Philip E. Watson this month, records showed today.

One of the five local applicants is Margaret Gibbs of Claremont, a former City Council member and trustee of the Citrus Community College District.

The $49,500 a year job is now open, and the county Board of Supervisors hopes to fill it by December.

Chairman Ed Edelman has asked the supervisors to pare the list down to 20 finalists by next Monday.

The finalists will then be interviewed publicly.

Those applying from the valley are:

—Mrs. Gibbs, who currently is teaching at Cal State San Bernardino.

—Eilehue Stanback, a Pomona businessman and a former county deputy assessor.

—Norman Karschner, 49, of Diamond Bar, a business executive.

—John Marshall Blackburn, 44, of Rowland Heights, a deputy district attorney and a former deputy assessor.

—Bryan W. Stevens, 56, of Valinda, a high school teacher and La Verne College law student.

Each of the supervisors will choose four names so a pool of 20 finalists will be available for interviewing, probably in two weeks.

None of Watson's top deputies appear on the list.

The number of applicants was a surprise to the supervisors who had expected little interest since the position had become highly controversial during the past two years.

Watson has filed for disability payment in connection with his retirement. He contended his heart problem was caused by his running feud with the supervisors over the past several years. He served as a county assessor for 15 years. His present term had another year to run.

The supervisor's appointee will fill out Watson's unexpired term. The new assessor then will be chosen in a general county-wide election.

SHATTERED REMAINS

A bomb federal authorities believe was set by professionals left only a shell of Evansville oil millionaire Ray Ryan's 1977 Lincoln Continental Tuesday. Ryan was killed in the blast, which shook nearby businesses and broke scores of windows in an apartment complex.

Hint multiple drugs Presley death cause

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Ten drugs were present in Elvis Presley's bloodstream when he died in August and they probably contributed to his death, a published report said today.

The Commercial Appeal quoted sources as saying Dr. Jerry Francisco, Shelby County medical examiner, may rule multiple drugs as the cause of the singer's death.

Francisco, reached at his office late Tuesday, would not confirm the reports but said he would probably hold a news conference on the autopsy Friday.

Francisco originally ruled Presley died of cardiac arrythmia from unknown causes. He said at a press conference held nearly six hours after the death that there was no evidence of drug abuse.

Among the drugs the sources said were found in Presley's bloodstream were an antihistamine often used to control hay fever or allergies; codeine, a derivative of opium often used to relieve pain and found in some cough medicines; Demerol, a narcotic used as a sedative and analgesic, and several tranquilizers including Valium.

Concorde lands in N.Y., ending 18-month battle

NEW YORK (AP) — The Concorde SST swooped down through an overcast sky today and landed at Kennedy International Airport, marking the end of a 1½-year struggle to keep the noisy, faster-than-sound passenger jet out of New York.

The plane, carrying the colors of both its British and French developers, touched down at 11:09 a.m. EDT. It had taken off from Toulouse in southwest France, where it was built, at 7:25 a.m.

Its maiden entry to New York was a familiarization flight. The plane carried technicians and other personnel, but no passengers.

Regular commercial service by the 1,350-mile-an-hour plane is scheduled to begin Nov. 22. It cuts in half the normal flying time to New York from Paris and London to 3½ hours.

A heavy security force was out to cope with any crowds or unanticipated events, but anti-SST forces had no protests planned at the airport today.

Shortly before the takeoff, a union of French aerospace workers appealed to New Yorkers to accept the inevitable and welcome the Concorde as a symbol of transatlantic amity.

Under an umbrella of hovering helicopters, the jet pointed its beak-like nose toward hangar 17 and taxied to that relatively remote part of the airport, which will be its home for the next few days.

Nearly 100 persons lined the edge of runway 4 Left as the Concorde settled down.

"Loud!" cried a policeman, who covered his ears with his hand.

"Super!" exclaimed Carol Craft, a British Airways publicist.

Meanwhile in Newark, N.J., the Port Authority, which operates Kennedy and the other New York jetports, continued hearings on noise standards that it hopes will ultimately bar the Concorde in its current form.

In Lawrence, one of the communities on the JFK flightpaths, the PTA held a rally outside an elementary school "to show President Carter we are not taking this lying down," said Anita Cuchel, the PTA president.

Today's flight by Concorde 002, a test craft, was piloted by Pierre Dudal of Air France and Jean Franchi, chief test pilot for Aerospatiale, the French co-manufacturer of the plane.

About 30 passengers were listed for the flight, including technicians, publicists and other representatives of the two airlines and of the two government enterprises that build the plane, Aerospatiale and the British Aircraft Corp.

The Concorde is scheduled to make a practice flight around the New York metropolitan area on Thursday and several takeoffs and landings Thursday and Friday. It will fly to London Friday afternoon.

Light drizzle falls in area

A light drizzle, the first rainfall in two months, dampened the valley this morning, and the weatherman said it may stay until the evening.

The drizzle will hold temperatures down to the 70s today and Thursday with partly cloudy skies expected to follow the precipitation.

Although the moisture made the streets slippery, only fender bumping accidents were reported by the California Highway Patrol and local police.

The last time rain fell here was on Aug. 18, when a three-day storm dropped 2.7 inches on Pomona.

House vote hints survival of Saturday mail delivery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saturday mail deliveries and small post offices stand a better chance of survival following action by a House committee to prevent their elimination.

The House Post Office Committee, voting Tuesday to reorganize the Postal Service, included guarantees that Saturday mail deliveries and rural post offices won't be done away with to save money.

The legislation says these services must be continued and authorizes approximately $2 billion for them and other postal operations. The Postal Service received about $1.5 billion in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30.

The 19-4 vote sent the legislation to the full House, which may not get to the bill in this session.

The Postal Service has said eliminating Saturday deliveries would save $412 million a year.

And the service, following a year's moratorium, is once more gradually closing small, uneconomical facilities.

Rep. Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif. says Saturday deliveries are important to many Americans. Country post offices, he says, are a part of small town life.

Wilson is a cosponsor of the Postal Service reorganization bill.

"The post office in a lot of communities — even though it may not be profitable — serves as a meeting place," Wilson said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

"The post office is not supposed to be a break-even project. People throughout the country should be entitled to the same type of service.

Recovered body may be that of valley doctor

Utah state medical examiners in Salt Lake City have a body tagged John Doe they think may be that of a Claremont doctor who drowned in Daggett County while on a fishing trip five years ago.

A woman in the medical examiners office said this morning that identification still had not been determined on the body which washed up Sept. 12 at Flaming Gorge Reservoir in northeastern Utah on the Utah-Wyoming border.

Four California doctors were on the trip, and all four drowned, authorities said, on April 22, 1972.

The lowering of the reservoir because of the drought has brought the recovery of three bodies.

Two of the bodies have been identified as Dr. Michael Mathews, 34, of Garden Grove, and Dr. Charles Wolverton, 43, of Long Beach.

Daggett County Sheriff Kenneth Reed said Wolverton's body was washed up two weeks ago, and Mathews' body was found in June.

The body found Sept. 12, may be that of Claremont Dr. Marshall Hodge, 45, or the fourth member of the party, Dr. Aldirado Person, 62, of Tarzana.

Suicides of 3 terrorists spur bombings and demonstrations

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Extremists bombed West German targets in Italy and marched in cities across Europe today to protest the deaths of three imprisoned German anarchists whose freedom was demanded by kidnapers and airline hijackers.

Bombs exploded today at German car showrooms in Bologna, Milan, Leghorn and Turin and a building housing the West German consulate in Genoa. Leftists marched in Rome, Milan, Genoa, Athens and London. In Vienna they spraypainted the monument of waltz king Johann Strauss with the slogan: "The bourgeoisie has had its last dance."

European leftists expressed fear that the West German commando raid in Somalia that killed three hijackers and freed the 86 hostages, and the prison deaths announced hours later marked a revival of neoNazism in West Germany.

"These events prove in a tragic way how such climaxing violence is developing in Germany, opening the way for neofascism in that country," said a statement by Socialist March, a small political party in Greece.

Most newspapers in Europe and elsewhere hailed the commando raid as an effective measure against terrorism.

West German officials said Andreas Baader, Gudrun Ensslin and Jan-Carl Raspe committed suicide and a fourth imprisoned terrorist, Irmgard Moeller, tried to kill herself at Stuttgart's maximum security Stannheim Prison.

Heinz Funke, a lawyer for Baader who was present at his autopsy, said Baader died of a bullet wound in the back of the neck and expressed doubt it was self-inflicted. West German officials did not explain how Baader or Raspe, who also died of a bullet wound, got guns.

Seventeen West Berlin lawyers who have represented terrorist suspects said they feared the prisoners were killed to avenge the five-day seige of the Lufthansa 737 jet by hijackers apparently working in league with kidnapers of West German industralist Hanns Martin Schleyer.

There has been no word on Schleyer's fate since last week, when the terrorists who abducted him in Cologne Sept. 5 threatened to kill him last Sunday unless the West German government met the hijackers demands for release of 11 German anarchists including the three who were killed.

Describing the seven-minute battle on the hijacked plane, Interior Minister Werner Maihofer said the GSG-9 commandos "eliminated" two of the four hijackers after "determined resistance" in the cockpit.

"Another terrorist in the first class compartment ... opens fire from there," he continued, speaking in present tense. "Although hit by two bullets, he then hurls a hand grenade towards the rear of the plane. This explodes under a seat.

"And after this terrorist is hit by more bullets ... he detonates another grenade even while falling, which injures several hostages in the feet," Maihofer said.

"When this had been eliminated too, suddenly a terrorist — later found to be a woman — in the rear toilet opens fire on GSG 9 through the door" before being gunned down too by the troops, he said.

KKK warned not to patrol border

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Police are warning the Ku Klux Klan not to patrol the Mexican border to help stop illegal aliens.

Fifteen members of an activist coalition picketed the county jail Tuesday demanding the release of Salvador R. Amercado, 29, who was charged Sunday with smashing the windshield of a Klan member's car during a protest at the border.

"I think this is a vigilante type of action and I strongly question their motives," said Police Chief William Kolender. "They could cause racial dissension and increase the problems for all law enforcement agencies involved."

David Duke, national head of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, toured the border area Sunday and said 500 to 1,000 Klan members would help the U.S. Border Patrol stop people from illegally entering the country. Duke said the Border Patrol cannot cope with the volume of illegal aliens.

Carter wins one for change, if only on procedural vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House handed President Carter a victory today on his proposed legislation calling for shipment of more oil imports in tankers flying the U.S. flag.

Although the 249-167 vote was on a procedural question, both supporters and opponents of the bill had said in advance that it would be a good indication of the final outcome.

A vote on the bill was expected later today.

The procedural vote came after debate in which Republicans urged the House to refuse to take up the bill until it had heard testimony from administration officials who may have argued against the proposal.

"Without further testimony, the cloud that hangs over this bill can not be dispelled," Rep. James H. Quillen, R-Tenn., declared.

Backers of the measure, which is known as the cargo preference bill, argued that it would strengthen the merchant marine. Opponents said it would increase oil and gasoline prices.

BIG ON STYLE

Nancy Austin, herself a designer of clothes for large women, models one of her wedding outfits at the first major exhibit of fashions for fat women in Los Angeles this week. Theme of the show was "Big is Beautiful." Nancy, who tips the scales at 273 pounds, said more than 22 million American women wear large sizes and deserve special consideration.

Styles for the fat woman make show huge success

LOS ANGELES (AP) — While toothpick-thin models paraded past buyers at the California Mart, a heftier contingent was staging a much larger trade and fashion show.

"Big Is Beautiful," the first major national exhibit of fashions for fat women, drew an overflow crowd to the Mart theater this week to view bulky models bouncing down the runway in jogging suits, negligees and evening gowns.

There were shouts, applause and wolf whistles.

"The message of the show is that just because you're overweight, you don't have to look dowdy and ugly," said Marilyn Wheeler, the Mart's special events coordinator who planned the unique three-day exhibit and fashion show.

"There are intelligent, aggressive, witty big women who don't want to wear a tent forever," said Miss Wheeler.

The trade show features 62 manufacturers specializing in the large and half-size market — sizes 18 to 52.

There were a few problems backstage, Miss Wheeler noted. "We realized we couldn't have the models changing back-to-back. And a size 20 sample just didn't fit all of them."

David London, whose wife, Nancy Austin, is a top designer for heavy women, said, "Over 30 per cent of the women in this country are in large and half sizes. That's 22 million American women in our market."

Seven years ago London and his wife — who now weighs 273 pounds — opened a small Las Vegas boutique for "Queen-sized women."

Ms. Austin, a comedienne, had appeared on a TV show and was inundated with mail from big women asking: "Where can I find clothes like yours?"

"We opened our boutique with 300 garments and in the first week we sold all but 23 pieces," she recalled.

Nancy Austin Fashions now has four stores and a factory that distributes to specialty shops across the country. They also sell large-size patterns for home sewers.

Ms. Austin, who prefers that designation, said she's fighting fashion stereotypes imposed on fat women. "We make very few garments in black ... I remember having nothing to choose from but black button-down-the-front dresses.

"We emphasize color and a youthful look," said Ms. Austin, whose new collection includes decorated jeans, brightly printed handkerchief-style blouses and a long lacy peasant dress that doubles as a bridal gown.

At the Mart's fashion show, Ms. Austin arrived in a dowdy dark coat and hat, then let the audience watch her change into a glamor girl in sequined evening gown and saucy red wig.

"When I do that Cinderella transformation for a room full of heavy women, the response is incredible," she says. "It's like kids at the movies on a Saturday afternoon. It's all 'oohs and aahs.'"

OMS law suits reach settlement short of court

By MAE TATE
PB Staff Writer

Two years of court battles are over with the settlement of suits involving the Ontario Motor Speedway board and a former operator of the speedway.

Sam Crowe, attorney for the nonprofit board, announced this week that a long series of suits had been settled Friday in the West Valley Superior Court in Ontario. He attributed the legal solution to the disputes to the joint efforts of Parnelli Jones and Velko Miletich.

Jones and Miletich, business partners, were among the owners of the Ontario Motor Speedway Operating Co. (OMSOC).

Crowe explained that about two years ago, OMSOC leased the speedway premises from the speedway board andacted as operator of the facility. When OMSOC vacated the facility, a series of suits and countersuits were filed.

The speedway board claimed OMSOC broke the lease and asked the court for damages while OMSOC sued, asking the court to determine whether or not it had broken the lease.

Later, Crowe continued, Jones and Milotich filed a $21 million suit against the speedway board for defamation of character. Additionally, the speedway board filed another suit claiming it owned the restaurant equipment at the speedway and requesting $800,000 from OMSOC in damages for the equipment.

Superior Court Judge Howard Wiener sat as the settlement judge in the hearing, but the various parties managed to work out an agreement without dictation from the court.

OMSOC agreed to pay the speedway board $400,000 and to relinquish future claim to the restaurant equipment; and all parties agreed to dismiss all other lawsuits, said Crowe.

"The key factor in the settlement was Miletich and Jones. They worked pretty hard in putting the settlement together," Crowe said. "Everybody worked out a settlement. The speedway board is very happy about it and approved the agreement at a special Monday morning meeting."

Inner-city loans spurred by law against redlining

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California's tough new anti-redlining regulations are stimulating increased mortgage lending to inner-city neighborhoods, state Savings and Loan Commissioner Saul Perlis says.

Releasing an inch-thick, two-volume report here Tuesday, Perlis said: "Although the precise measurement of the influence of the regulations themselves cannot be reliably determined, their effect is unquestionable."

The regulations against redlining — the practice by some lenders of refusing to make loans in low-income areas — became effective Aug. 1, 1976.

They were bolstered last month when Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. signed legislation creating the toughest anti-redlining law in the nation.

The report, issued by Perlis' department as the first in a series which will monitor the impact of California's anti-redlining drive, concluded that lending to so-called "mortgage-deficient areas" has shown "strong and steady growth" since May 1975, when government hearings on redlining were announced.

Judge announces his support for West End juvenile court

By BOB SWETNAM
PB Staff Writer

Prospects for a Juvenile Court in the West End of San Bernardino County improved this week when a Superior Court judge recommended such a facility be constructed in Ontario.

County supervisors have discussed for several months the possibility of opening a Juvenile Court in the West End because of increased juvenile cases and the area's growing population.

At present, all juvenile cases in the county are processed at a juvenile justice facility in San Bernardino.

Superior Court Judge Henry M. Busch, seeking county funds for a $60,000 remodeling project at the central juvenile justice facility, told supervisors he was recommending a new Juvenile Court be established in the former county health building located in the West Valley Court complex in Ontario.

Such a facility is needed to fulfill the need for more decentralized court services within the county, he said.

"We need two adult courtrooms and a full Juvenile Court in the West Valley district," he told supervisors.

The judge, who was criticized two weeks ago by the board for opposing an immediate move of juvenile facilities to the rapidly growing West End, appeared more receptive to the decentralized concept when he appeared before supervisors Monday.

Supervisors had postponed a decision on the financing for court remodeling at the San Bernardino facility until judges agreed to work towards establishment of a Juvenile Court in Ontario, Chino or tri-communities of Cucamonga, Etiwanda or Alta Loma.

The issue of interim facilities for handling local juvenile cases, however, is still under dispute.

Speaking for the majority of judges, Busch said he favored moving new courts to the West End as soon as possible. But he noted he was still opposed to Supervisor Robert Townsend's proposal to utilize empty courtrooms at the newly-built Chino Municipal Court until the Ontario facilities could be completed.

The judges would oppose attempts to put courts in "far-flung" area of the county, he added.

Since the cost of transporting juvenile offenders to San Bernardino for trials has been cited as a main reason for locating a Juvenile Court in Ontario, Busch said the same problems would occur if juveniles from Etiwanda or Upland had to be transported to Chino for court hearings.

In addition, court costs would increase dramatically if a new court was started in Chino, he said.

But supervisors noted that if Chino would be an inconvenient location for an interim facility, they would like to see evidence from the judges on why it would be inconvenient.

Supervisor Dennis Hansberger of Yucaipa criticized the judges for stating it would be too expensive to have an interim Juvenile Justice Court in Chino without providing the statistics.

Supervisor Joseph Kamansky, whose district includes much of the West End, said new court facilities — particularly juvenile justice facilities — were urgently needed.

"The law and justice needs in the West End are increasing daily," he observed.

Supervisor Townsend of Chino supported decentralizing the court system and bringing more courts to the West End.

"We recognize the need to improve court facilities in the West End," he said.

Earl Goodwin, county administrative officer, said his staff would examine an interim plan for juvenile courts in the West End, using information provided by the judges.

The county staff will examine various interim possibilities, their costs and practicalities, he added.

Goodwin said use of the empty courtroom in Chino should be examined as a possible interim location.

Kamansky said, "The biggest problem today is our interim plan. I am tired of waiting and would like to see something concrete. We've kicked this around for months."

Supervisors also indicated they would examine the possibility — as is being done in El Cajon — of allowing Municipal Courts to hear juvenile cases.

At present, trials for juveniles must be held in specially designated courtrooms.

High speed chase lasts 130 miles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 130-mile high-speed chase from Palm Springs to Inglewood came to a stop on a dead-end street after the driver of the speeding car sideswiped two other cars and allegedly tried to run into a motorcycle officer.

Michael J. Martin, 23, of Palm Springs, was arrested Tuesday on charges of assault with a deadly weapon against a peace officer, reckless driving, grand theft auto and hit-run driving, police said.

The chase began when police in Palm Springs spotted Martin's 1977 Oldsmobile whose lease had not been paid up. When officers tried to pull the car over, it sped away, police said.

Officers said the car swerved to hit a California Highway Patrol motorcycle officer on the outskirts of Palm Springs, but missed him. The motorcycle spilled on the freeway, but the officer was unhurt.

Martin then headed toward Los Angeles at speeds of up to 110 miles per hour, officers said.

He drove off the freeway briefly in Baldwin Park, east of Los Angeles, and was involved in two minor non-injury accidents before reentering the freeway and heading for Inglewood, police said.

The 130-mile chase ended when Martin again took to surface streets and found himself trapped in a dead-end street.

A CHP spokesman said 15 ground units and a helicopter joined the pursuit.

Pesticide not tested enough says researcher

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal standard set in 1961 limiting worker exposure to the pesticide DBCP was probably unsafe and researchers were wrong in recommending the guideline without more study, one of the researchers admits.

DBCP or dibromochloropropane has been blamed for sterility among dozens of chemical workers. Fears are it may eventually cause cancer in some of them, or in people who eat produce tainted with residues of the pesticide.

Charles Hine, a professor of occupational and environmental medicine at the University of California, said Tuesday the federal standard, in effect for 16 years based on research done by him and others, was "probably too low."

"With the present data relative to human exposure, I would be concerned myself that 1 part per million is a safe and reasonable level," Hine said at a hearing on DBCP.

In 1961, the pesticide was registered with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and worker exposure limited to one part per million based on research published that year by Hine and others. Their work was subsidized by the Shell Oil Co. and the Dow Chemical Co., the only domestic producers of DBCP.

Its production was halted in August when tests showed many of the workers had zero sperm or abnormally low sperm counts.

Hine said researchers erred by suggesting the 1 ppm standard without testing it first to make sure it had no detrimental effects on animals. A dose of 5 ppm caused some changes in the tissues of animal testicles, while higher doses caused rats' testicles to waste away and their sperm counts to drop.

Hearings about coastal nuclear plant continue

SAN LUIS OBISBO (AP) — The Atomic Safety and Licensing Board continued hearings today on the controversial Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant. Fully operational, it's two reactors could generate ten billion watts.

On Tuesday, witnesses from Pacific Gas & Electric and the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission said the $1.2 million facility needs no modification. Efforts by opponents of the plant to shake the testimony were largely unsuccessful.

The plant is on the Pacific Coast about 12 miles southwest of San Luis Obispo.

James Shiffer of PG&E said a test emergency drill at the plant last August was successful and no changes in emergency plans were required as a result of it.

An attempt by attorney Simon Klevansky, representing opponents of the plant, to challenge fire protection plans was ruled out of order by the licensing board.

Also Tuesday, the licensing board heard statements by 28 citizens, most of them residents of communities near the Diablo plant, supporting and opposing licensing.

Richard Hubbard, a former nuclear engineer, challenged the plant's inspection program, saying 62 of 1,675 wells in the plants' cooling system had to be repaired after a leak in one water pipe was discovered.

Karl Kempton, a poet who lives 10 miles from the plant, said endangering lives to obtain nuclear energy would amount to "human sacrifice."

Religious leaders criticize Chavez' Philippines trip

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some major church leaders, among the staunchest backers of farm labor leader Cesar Chavez, have threatened to withdraw their support of the United Farm Workers in a dispute over Chavez' recent trip to the Philippines.

"I was and still am disturbed by Chavez' visit," the Rev. John P. Brown, acting executive director of the Northern California Ecumenical Council, said in a telephone interview from San Francisco Monday.

Stressing that his organization considers Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos' government unacceptably oppressive, Brown said, "Our support for Chavez' union has to be tied to support for human rights around the world. The two issues cannot be separated."

The Rev. Wayne Hartmier Jr., director of the National Farm Workers Ministry in Los Angeles, said Chavez had received many letters expressing "regret," "disappointment" and "deep concern" from such organizations as the National Council of Churches and the U.S. Catholic Bishops Conference.

The influential Protestant magazine "Christianity and Crisis" published an open letter to Chavez suggesting that the labor leader's trip in late July was "being used" by the Marcos regime, Hartmier said.

He explained that Chavez, whose union has many Filipino workers, is highly regarded by Philippine labor leaders and workers.

Human rights leaders have suggested that Chavez' meeting with Marcos undercut Marcos' critics in the labor movement.

"A good number of the churches have said, or at least strongly implied, that they would withhold support from the union until this matter is clarified," Hartmier said.

During his trip, Chavez met with some 60 labor and peasant leaders in 13 provinces and held closed-door talks with Marcos at which Chavez reportedly urged him to allow free national elections. When Marcos later said he would hold such elections, Chavez praised the decision.

400 expected to apply for Pomona police work

About 400 applicants, the same as two years ago, were expected to file papers for the position of police officer trainee Tuesday and today at Pomona City Hall.

Personnel technician Faye Brown said the police department needs a new eligibility list since the old list is depleted.

The examinations two years ago resulted in an eligibilty list of about 50 persons.

She explained that candidates who qualify successfully and are placed on an eligibility list will retain their eligibility for one year.

She noted that minimum requirements are graduation from the 12th grade or equivalent, a minimum age of 21, proportionate height and weight, and hearing must be normal.

She said that about 75 percent pass the written exam, and a lesser number the agility test.

The test given at Rio Hondo Academy at Whittier requires candidates to do at least 25 sit-ups, 15 burpees, dragging a 180-pound manikin 25 feet, pushing a patrol car 20 feet, five chin-ups or pull-ups, a 440-yard run in at least one minute, 40 seconds, and completing an obstacle course in 90 seconds.

"Candidates must pass each phase of the written exam and the agility test with a minimum score," she said.

She said that it would probably be 2½ months before the agility test is given.

Testing will probably result in 50 candidates on an eligibility list.

Starting salary is $1,106 a month.

Hijack hostages OK

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Christine Santiago of Santee, held hostage for five days on the hijacked Lufthansa jet, underwent a complete medical checkup today at the U.S. Army Hospital here.

Her 5-year-old son Leo, who was also a hostage, was being cared for by an uncle in the Frankfurt area, a spokesman for the U.S. Consulate said.

Col. George Foegen, the hospital's executive officer, said Mrs. Santiago, 44, was exhausted by the 120-hour ordeal but apparently in good condition. She was expected to leave the hospital in the next two days, he said.

"We've got the chief of internal medicine and other departments working with her to make sure there's no illnesses we don't know about," he said.

Sandra Goode moved

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Sandra Goode, a follower of convicted mass murderer Charles Manson, has been moved to a federal women's prison at Alderson, W.Va., where two other Manson disciples are imprisoned.

Miss Goode, 33, was transferred Tuesday from the Metropolitan Correctional Center, where she had been for one month after the Terminal Island Prison was converted into an all-male facility, according to Warden Walter Lumpkin.

Miss Goode will join Susan Murphy and Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme at Alderson. Miss Goode and Miss Murphy were convicted of conspiring to send death threats to businessmen and government leaders. Miss Fromme is serving a life term for attempting to assassinate former President Gerald Ford in Sacramento.

Strikers meeting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Striking machinists have met with Lockheed Corp. for the first time in two weeks to seek an end to a nine-day-old walkout by 8,500 Southern California aerospace workers.

In Northern California, talks were to resume today for another 4,000 workers at Lockheed's facility in Sunnyvale, near San Francisco.

The three-hour bargaining session in Los Angeles Tuesday, the first since Oct. 5, was arranged by a federal mediator called in to get the stalled talks moving again.

Lockheed spokesman H. David Crowther termed the talks "a positive session" and said negotiators spent the time defining the issues on which they disgreed.

Considers congress

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Lt. Gov. Mervyn M. Dymally, whose relations with Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. have been tenuous, is considering running for Congress next year, it was reported today.

Dymally, who has made no secret of his disappointment that the lieutenant governor's post had not proven more influential, said Tuesday that he would decide by Dec. 1 whether to seek the Los Angeles congressional seat of Rep. Yvonne Brathwaite Burke.

Mrs. Burke, a Democrat, has said she intends to run for state attorney general next year.

Sports encourage kids' obesity?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exercise is as important as good eating habits in preventing obesity in children, but athletic programs centered on playing star athletes discourage many children from developing good exercise habits, says a Mayo Clinic nutrition expert.

Dr. Ralph A. Nelson said Tuesday the consequences of sitting on the bench during athletic events and physical education classes are more than just disappointment and frustration.

Discouraged youngsters don't have a desire to stay active or physically fit for the rest of their lives, thus increasing the risk of heart disease, high blood pressure and many other conditions when they get older, he said.

Nelson said current physical education programs emphasize team games that tend to be monopolized by natural athletes at the expense of less gifted students.

"We have to have programs with activities that develop the skills each child does best, whether competing on a team or with himself. We should offer prizes for the most improvement in something as well as winning," Nelson said.

"It might be helpful if people rotated positions on teams and made sure everyone played, but this may mean downplaying the idea of winning for the sake of physical fitness," he continued.

Speaking at a forum on childrearing, the associate professor of nutrition at the Mayo Medical School said parents dismiss the consequences of overweight children by saying they'll grow out of it.

But, Nelson said, "If a child enters adolescence obese, chances are one to four against he or she ever achieving a normal body weight."

"If a child leaves adolescence obese, chances increase to about 28 to 1 against ever achieving a normal body weight," he added.

Nelson said about 20 per cent of adult Americans are either overweight or obese, a condition he said is also common among children.

In a five-year study Mayo scientists conducted using about 2,000 Rochester, Minn., school children, 18 per cent were classified as overweight and another 14 per cent obese, he said.

Fatty blood cholesterol was higher in the fat children than thin ones, "indicating that already at ages 6 through 16 the obese kids were carrying around an increased risk of coronary artery disease," he said.

Nelson noted that the study confirmed previous ones showing that on the average, normal weight and fat children consumed about the same number of calories. Individual differences in exercise and how well the body burns food appear to account for most of the weight disparity, he added.

Studies show that professional individual nutrition counseling can teach fat children to limit calories and eat properly to control their weight.

But this time-consuming and expensive process is difficult on a large scale, Nelson said, so people should try instead to control their weight by using up excess calories.

"The first step which should be taken towards prevention of obesity in children would be to develop a successful exercise program for all school children," he said.

Officers attacked with baseball bat

A man and a young woman were arrested by two off-duty Upland police officers Tuesday night after a man reportedly attacked the officers with a baseball bat following a traffic stop at Euclid Avenue and Seventh Street, said investigators.

The girl, a juvenile, was arrested for investigation of driving while under the influence and released to her parents pending further action.

Also arrested was Lucas Lee Brian, 20, 1461 W. Mission Blvd., Pomona. He was held for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon and carrying a concealed weapon.

Officers Martin Thouvenell and Steve Thorsen reportedthey had gone off duty about 9:30 p.m. and were driving on Euclid Avenue near the San Bernardino Freeway when they noticed a car driving erratically ahead of them.

The officers, believing the driver to be driving while intoxicated, stopped the vehicle at Seventh Street after flashing their badges out the windows.

The officers said that as they got out of their car a man exited from the vehicle swinging a baseball bat.

The two officers managed to subdue the suspect.

Rescue 2 after mountain plunge

By JACK BURSON
PB Staff Writer

Two teen-age Glendora youths were in satisfactory condition this morning in Arcadia Methodist Hospital where they were recovering from injuries suffered when their car plunged off Glendora Mountain Road Sunday night, precipitating a 44-hour ordeal which ended with their rescue Tuesday afternoon.

Scott Jensen, 16, and Michael Rodriguez, 18, were rescued and flown to the hospital after a Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department helicopter crew spotted one's blue jacket hanging from a tree. When the pilot decended the crew was able to see the victims' demolished car hidden beneath trees.

The pair was found 500 feet below the road and about three miles west of Mt. Baldy Road. Their rescuers said the injured youths were about 300 yards apart and about 800 feet from the auto.

The ordeal began Sunday night when, according to the youths' statement to the California Highway Patrol, they were forced off the road by an oncoming car.

Both were thrown from the tumbling vehicle with Jensen suffering a broken ankle and Rodriguez a knee injury.

The youths spent the balance of the night there and never were able to reach one another. They could communicate by yelling however, deputies said.

Monday afternoon Jensen's father, Kurt, reported the pair missing and sheriff's deputies, on the ground and in helicopters, searched the area of Glendora Mountain Road without success.

The victims spent Monday night in the open — an experience Rodriguez described later as "horrible." He said it was very cold and he buried himself in sand to keep from freezing.

The search resumed Tuesday with helicopters and the blue coat and then the victims were spotted from the air shortly before 3 p.m. Paramedics were taken to the scene and the victims were treated and then removed by a rescue team.

Arrest girl for robbery

A 16-year-old girl was arrested Tuesday night for investigation of armed robbery shortly after the Stop n Go market at 1855 N. Baker Ave., Ontario, was robbed by a man and woman armed with a shotgun, Ontario police reported.

Police said that one and possibly two other men were being sought in connection with the robbery.

Police said a man and a woman entered the market and confronted the clerk with a shotgun. The clerk said the woman held the shotgun while the man grabbed a paper bag and ordered him to fill it wish cash from the register.

The pair fled out the door and jumped into a waiting car.

The clerk was able to give police a good description of the vehicle, which was broadcast to other local law enforcement agencies.

A short time after the broadcast, West End sheriff's Deputy Rudy Olvera spotted a vehicle matching the description on Grove Avenue north of the San Bernardino Freeway and made a traffic stop.

Ontario police responded to the scene of the traffic stop and after searching the vehicle arrested the 16-year-old girl.

The girl was turned over to juvenile authorities for disposition.

Juvenile authorities said they had released the girl to her parents pending further action.

Helter-smelter

A Southern Pacific freight train sliced a truck and trailer and the 100-ton smelting furnace it carried in half early this morning in a collision at the Nogales Avenue crossing near Industry, sheriff's deputies said.

Damage was estimated at more than $100,000.

The collision occurred shortly after 4:30 at Railroad Street. Andrew Evans said that as he was crossing the tracks the mechanical crossing guard arm dropped on his 32-wheel rig and it was struck by the train a few seconds later.

Engineer Phillip Patton said he saw the truck-trailer on the tracks and began braking about a quarter of a mile west of Nogales. He wasn't able to stop the train until it was about a half mile east of crossing, however.

Deputies said debris from the crash littered the intersection which was expected to remain closed until it was cleared late this morning by heavy equipment summoned there.

The truck driver was outside the vehicle, attempting to lift the crossing arm from the rig, when he saw the train approaching and eventually crash into the truck, trailer and aluminum furnace.

Faces another charge

Roosevelt Williams, already facing murder and felonious assault charges, now also must answer an unrelated robbery charge.

Williams, 25, of Pomona, was bound over by Pomona Municipal Court Judge Thomas Nuss on robbery and an additional assault charge connected to the holdup of the Fair Motel, 1770 W. Holt Ave., Pomona, on May 27. His arraignment was set for Oct. 31.

On Oct. 28 Williams will enter his plea in Superior Court to the murder and assault charges in connection with an incident in which a 7-year-old Pomona boy was shot and killed. The victim was killed by an errant police bullet fired during Williams' arrest. Williams himself was wounded and has been in the jail ward of County-USC Medical Center since the June 10 incident.

Prisoner uses guile to escape

By TONY AULT
PB Staff Writer

Valley law enforcement agencies this morning continued their search for a 28-year-old Fontana man who managed to escape from the West End sheriff's substation jail in Ontario Tuesday night and drive away in his own car parked nearby.

Sought for escape is Jose Peredez, who was arrested earlier Tuesday by Ontario police on a warrant for burglary and being under the influence of a drug.

Peredez is described as a Latin, 5 feet 7, 170 pounds with black hair and brown eyes.

At the time of his escape, he was wearing blue denim pants, a shirt and jacket.

Sheriff's deputies said Peredez was brought into the jail for booking by Ontario police about 5 p.m. Deputies said the inmate was booked and issued a set of jail clothing similar to the clothing issued to jail trusties. Deputies said they then allowed Peredez to make several phone calls from the jail booking area.

As the prisoner was making the calls, a bus with other prisoners drove into the jail complex and deputies escorted the prisoners to and from the bus.

During the activity, a sheriff's spokesman said, Peredez slipped out the back door, seemingly unnoticed, by deputies.

Deputies said it is believed that Peredez then jumped a fence or the wall surrounding the sheriff's parking lot behind the jail and walked several blocks down to the FedMart parking lot on Mountain Avenue, where Ontario police had initially arrested him and left his car.

Deputies said the prisoner then drove away from the area.

About 10:30 p.m., the prisoner's car was discovered parked on E. Holt Boulevard, but a search of the area did not reveal the escapee.

Deputies said that the prisoner is not considered armed or dangerous, but citizens upon seeing anyone matching his description should immediately contact the nearest law enforcement agency or the West End sheriff's substation.

Deputies said that Peredez has a tattoo of a skeleton on his left arm.

Carter, Torrijos clarify the treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. negotiators of the Panama Canal treaty said today a clarification worked out by President Carter and Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos may help public understanding of the pact, but need not be incorporated into the document.

The statement of understanding issued by the two leaders last Friday did not carry their signatures because "it added nothing to the treaty itself," former Ambassador Sol M. Linowitz told the Senate Foreign Relations committee.

He repeated the White House position that there never was any difference of views between Carter and Torrijos as to the meaning of the treaty's provisions for future U.S. defense and use of the canal.

Questions about interpretation of those provisions arose when the word "intervention" was injected into the debate over the treaty. But neither he nor fellow negotiator Ellsworth Bunker ever used that word, Linowitz said.

Linowitz and Bunker were invited to appear before the Senate panel to explain and defend the clarifying statement that Carter hopes will secure the treaty's approval by the Senate.

Although they said there was no need to make it part of the treaty, some senators said they thought it should be given more official status.

"It seems to me that the American people would be better satisfied if this understanding were formalized in some way," said Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho. "I see nothing to be lost by that, and I think people would be reassured to know that both countries understand the meaning of the treaty the same way."

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., said he was "sympathetic" to Church's view, but said the Senate should resist demands that it attach "reservations" to the pact when it is ratified. "I hope we'll recognize that these demands for reservations are just another way of trying to destroy the treaty," Javits said.

As the hearing began, aides distributed copies of a report that Panama's chief negotiator, Romulo Escobar Bethancourt, had told a news conference in Panama on Tuesday that there is no difference in the U.S. and Panamanian views of the treaty's security terms.

Escobar was quoted as saying both countries recognized that after the canal is turned over to Panama in the year 2000, each will have a right to defend the canal's neutrality.

INVADER

Startled airmen at Charleston AFB, S.C., found this 6-foot 2-inch alligator wandering along a runway. He apparently sauntered onto the base from a nearby swamp. After a hose down to cool him by Sgt. Danny Bollinger, Air Police turned the reptile over to state fish and game officials.

Huge fireball over Texas

DALLAS (AP) — An enormous fireball that seared the evening skies over Texas and Arkansas and provoked hundreds of phone calls in five states apparently disintegrated without hitting earth.

The light from the fireball, believed to be a meteor, was so intense that that residents in three Texas cities hundreds of miles apart swore it hit near them.

"It lit up my cockpit and I saw it split up into bits and pieces," said Air Force Capt. William Latham, who spotted the fireball while flying a jet at 16,000 feet. He estimated its altitude at 50,000-60,000 feet.

But astronomers gave conflicting opinions on whether the fireball struck the ground or burned up in the air.

The fireball was sighted at about 8:15 p.m. CDT in portions of Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Missouri. One witness in Texarkana, Tex., described the object "as big as a house." Other pilots in Louisiana and Texas also spotted it.

"It was definitely a meteor," said Joe Patterson, an astronomer at the McDonald Observatory in Fort Davis, Tex. "When one is that large and that bright, it's likely to have reached the ground intact."

But Col. Gary Gosdin, spokesman for Shepard Air Force Base officials, said the object burned up and exploded in a bright flash in the air.

Federal Aviation Administration officials in Fort Worth said their radar tracked the object across the sky, but said it "fell apart" in the air.

Law enforcement officials, newspapers and radio stations were swamped with calls from witnesses.

"The typical caller said, 'There has been an airplane crash a couple of miles from my home,'" said Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman Jim Robinson, who said police began checking for airplane crashes until the widespread sightings were reported.

"It was coming down real slow and big chunks of it were falling off. It was too slow to be a shooting star. It was a plane on fire and it must have crashed out by Randolph Air Force Base," one frantic caller told a San Antonio newspaper.

In Arkansas, a state police spokesman denied reports that the object struck the ground. Police at Dumas, Ark., searched a forest near Oakwood Bayou for about two hours after hearing the reports. They found no trace of the reported object.

A spokesman for the North American Air Defense Command in Colorado Springs, Colo., said, "We are in a peak period for meteor showers in that part of the United States."

He said the object was probably a bolide meteor, which is a large meteor that enters the atmosphere at a very high angle, but often explodes and flashes because of its size and speed.

Slip on galoshes and stomp a grape

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you plan to make wine by crushing grapes barefoot, the Agriculture Department advises that "a clean rubber boot" should be worn and Form 1541 filled out.

In its 1977 yearbook "Gardening For Food and Fun" published today, the department has included a chapter on how to grow grapes and turn them into wine.

Jack Hayes, the editor, said in an interview that "there were a few" eyebrows raised about including the chapter.

"But we decided that a lot of people are interested in this, and there has been a big increase in wine drinking," Hayes said.

Included in the chapter was an explanation about the legality of making wine at home:

"Under federal law the head of a household may make up to 200 gallons of wine a year for family use, but is first required to notify the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms on Form 1541."

The yearbook costs $6.50 and can be ordered from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, or purchased at government bookstores.

Author is cited for contempt

CHICAGO (AP) — Nobel Prize-winning author Saul Bellow has been sentenced to 10 days in jail for failing to make alimony payments to his third wife.

Bellow, 61, did not attend the Circuit Court hearing Tuesday that resulted in the jail sentence. He was granted five days to file an appeal bond which would put off the jail term.

Judge Mary Ann McMorrow handed down the sentence after an attorney for Bellow's former wife, Susan Glassman Bellow, told her that Bellow has not made any of the $2,500-per-month alimony payments that were scheduled to begin last April. The judge said she might drop the jail sentence if Bellow agrees to pay the $11,150 he owes his former wife.

Their divorce was granted in 1968 at the request of Mrs. Bellow, who cited desertion and mental cruelty as her grounds. She agreed to a $150,000 property settlement and was granted custody of their child, Daniel, now 13.

But a judge later ruled that the property settlement was based on "fraud and misrepresentation" by Bellow and the settlement was nullified. Bellow was ordered to pay $2,500 a month in alimony, plus $650 a month in child support, $400 more than he had been paying.

Mrs. Bellow's attorney said Bellow earned a total of $461,303 in 1976 from roylaties on his books, his salary as a University of Chicago professor and the $160,000 of prize money he received with the Nobel Prize for literature.

A trial to decide whether the now-temporary alimony payments should be made permanent is scheduled to begin Nov. 12.

Poet's neighbors don't understand

WOLCOTT, Vt. (AP) — Like a spurned suitor, poet and author David Budbill sits in the one-room hillside cabin where he writes. He puzzles over the irate reaction of his neighbors to a book of poems meant to pay tribute to their inventiveness, creativity and backwoods genius.

The residents of Wolcott, a tiny north central Vermont town, inspired many of the characters in Budbill's book, "The Chain Saw Dance," which tells of the residents of a fictional town called Judevine.

His tales of Arnie, Anson and Old Man Pike quickly made the rounds via the town's unofficial library — a shelf beneath the counter of the local garage. Residents thought Judevine was Wolcott, and they didn't like it.

Within four months of the book's February publication, tales drifted up the hill to Budbill, his wife, Lois, who illustrated the book, and their two children of irate neighbors and feelings of betrayal from those he had intended to praise.

Residents complained of the book's "vulgar language" and "explicit sexual overtones."

One angry woman demanded Budbill's resignation as chairman of the town school board. Another denounced the Vermont Council on the Arts for its involvement in funding the book's publication.

"There is a lot of ugliness and a lot of beauty in Vermont," says Budbill, an intense man of 37 whose words rush like cold air beneath a drafty door.

"What I'm trying to say in some of the poems is that people shouldn't jump to conclusions about what is ugly and what is beautiful. They are terms that need redefining."

Beauty, for Budbill, is found in an old washtub transformed into a flower bed for marigolds outside the local garage, and the abandoned railroad boxcar that serves as a shed in a Wolcott backyard.

But mostly, it is found in his neighbors, whom he views as nothing short of heroes who in his eight years here have taught him of their genius for survival.

"The people here have been very good to me," he says sadly. "They've treated me very well and I feel very close to them."

The book tells stories of Hermie, who lived in a bread truck at the edge of Bear Swamp, of Anson, thrown off his father's home for back taxes, and of Arnie, with his dripping nose and ragged jacket.

Among the rusty trailers, penny fuses and dripping noses are the ski bunnies, white house and pretty barns of Vermont's postcard image.

"Judevine and Wolcott are not the same place," Budbill says emphatically. "The people in the book resemble the people here — they have the same sense of humor, the same ability to take a difficult life and make it enjoyable."

Having viewed "The Chain Saw Dance" as a book of love poems, Budbill says he is confused and hurt that it was so misunderstood.

But his loyalty to his neighbors is unwavering.

Before 30 critics and supporters at a school board meeting last spring, Budbill apologized. But he stayed on the board despite opposition, anger and even threats.

"You can't go through an experience like this without something happening. I thought very hard for a long time about leaving Wolcott, but I don't want to go.

"I don't want to live anywhere else — I have grown roots on my feet and when I try to pull them up, it hurts."

"Driving Home at Night"
From "The Chain Saw Dance"
By David Budbill

Midnight. Outside the car
it is 15 below.
A foot of new snow.
The village is deserted, dark,
except for eight street lamps
and the light in the window
at Jerry's Garage that says:
BEER.
The smell of woodsmoke seeps
into the car.
Judevine, ugliest town
in northern Vermont, except
maybe East Judevine.
Disheveled, wretched,
Judevine — my town — is beautiful
in the night.
It is beautiful because its couple hundred souls
have given up their fears,
their poverty and worry.
For a few hours now they know
only the oblivion of sleep and the town lies quiet
in their ease.

While in the United States as a student in the 1940s, Zahedi said he had jobs ranging from the steel mills of Gary, Ind., to the railroads in Alaska.

"We were on the road and broke most of the time," he said. "I can't remember how many times I've shaved in the restroom of a service station and slept beside the road in a sleeping bag.

PRESIDENT JIMMY CARTER will be the honored guest at a fund-raiser for the Democratic National Committee Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles.

Called the "Western Salute to the President," the dinner will include members of the DNC's national finance council and its executive committee, cabinet officers, White House senior staff members and Kenneth M. Curtis, the Democratic Party chairman.

Dinner committee headquarters may be reached by calling (213) 556-2096.

THE SAN BERNARDINO COUNTY DEMOCRATIC CENTRAL COMMITTEE and the RIVERSIDE COUNTY DEMOCRATIC CENTRAL COMMITTEE will meet Oct. 27, from 6 to 8 p.m., at 303 W. Third St., San Bernardino.

Purpose of the joint meeting is to conduct a public hearing on proposed recommendations of the Winograd Commission. The discussions will center around the presidential primary delegate selection process to the National Convention prior to the National Committee meeting.

After the hearing, the San Bernardino County group will hold its regular meeting. Both meetings are open to the public.

ASSEMBLYMAN BILL MCVITTIE, D-65th Dist., Upland, will speak at a dinner meeting of the Mt. Baldy Chapter of the California Credit Union League Oct. 25.

The meeting will be held at Henri's Restaurant at 7 p.m.

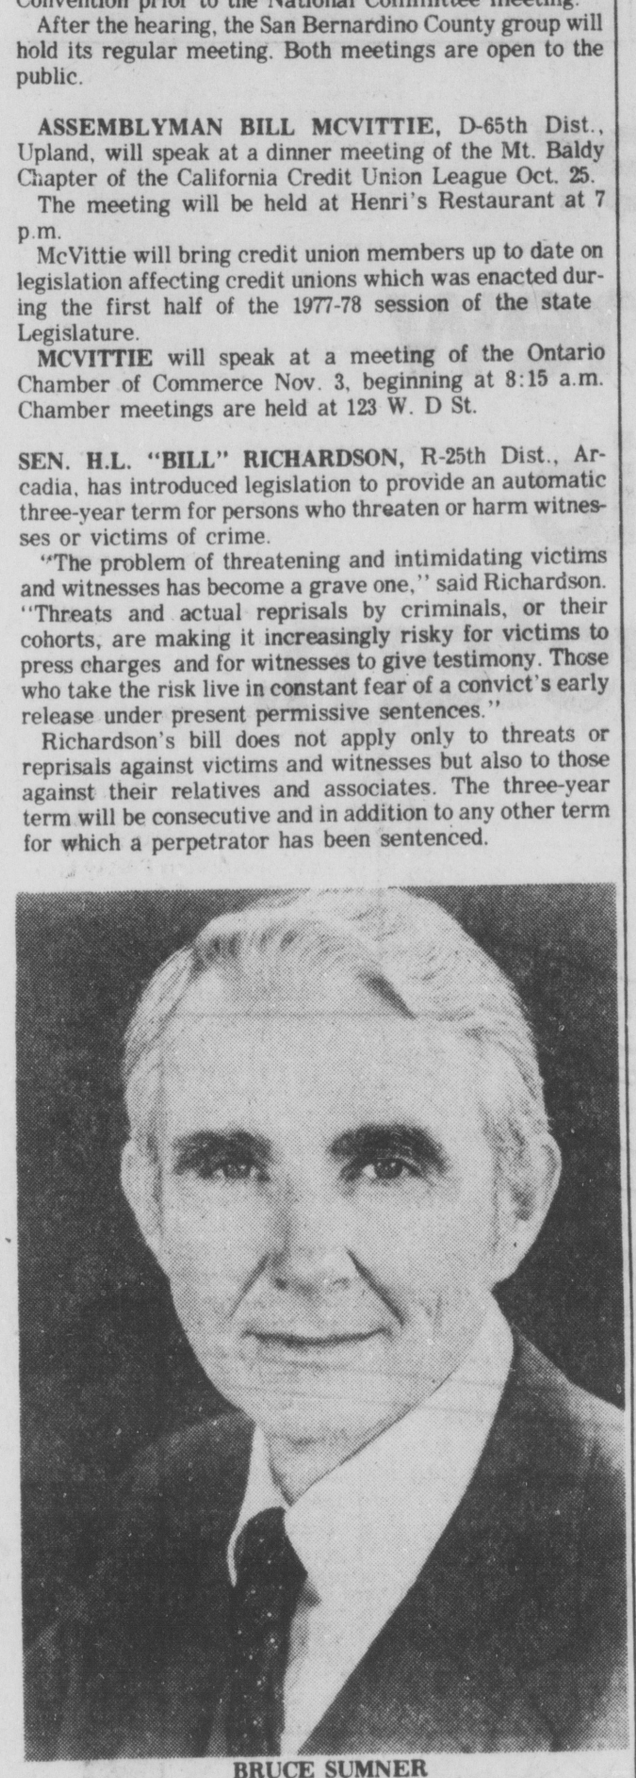
McVittie will bring credit union members up to date on legislation affecting credit unions which was enacted during the first half of the 1977-78 session of the state Legislature.

MCVITTIE will speak at a meeting of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce Nov. 3, beginning at 8:15 a.m. Chamber meetings are held at 123 W. D St.

SEN. H.L. "BILL" RICHARDSON, R-25th Dist., Arcadia, has introduced legislation to provide an automatic three-year term for persons who threaten or harm witnesses or victims of crime.

"The problem of threatening and intimidating victims and witnesses has become a grave one," said Richardson. "Threats and actual reprisals by criminals, or their cohorts, are making it increasingly risky for victims to press charges and for witnesses to give testimony. Those who take the risk live in constant fear of a convict's early release under present permissive sentences."

Richardson's bill does not apply only to threats or reprisals against victims and witnesses but also to those against their relatives and associates. The three-year term will be consecutive and in addition to any other term for which a perpetrator has been sentenced.



BRUCE SUMNER

"I am scared, upset and tired of being ripped off."

According to Orange County Superior Court Judge Bruce Sumner, a candidate for the office of state attorney general, this is the feeling of millions of Californians today.

"They are afraid to walk the streets at night, upset when they watch their courts in operation and feel that fraud is too much a way of life," said Sumner.

"The average citizen becomes more cynical than proud of courts after observing the seemingly endless motions, postponements, continuances and literally years of appeal that characterize both criminal and civil trials."

Sumner, 53, a native of Bozeman, Mont., said he is seeking the Democratic nomination for the office of attorney general because he believes he can give the state the mature and experienced leadership that will not only improve and streamline court operations, but will be tough and unrelenting in dealing with crime.

Sumner served in the state Legislature from 1958 to 1962 during which time he was chairman of the Assembly Judiciary Committee; was a trial judge 12 years; served 10 years as chairman of the California Constitution Revision Commission; was named presiding judge of Orange County Superior Court in 1972; and this year was given a Supreme Court appointment to sit on five cases.

"Because I believe so strongly in what I want to do and that the attorney general's office is the place from which the leadership should come, I have taken a leave of absence without pay from my judgeship and am devoting fulltime to this campaign," said Sumner.

"I want the job, but it is not mine for the asking. The next move is with the people."

Sumner was named Superior Court Judge of the Year in 1972 by the California Trial Lawyers Association. He and his wife, Ginny, and their two children, Scott and Ann, live in Laguna Beach.

California prisoners now have the right to informed consent in all medical experimentation under a bill by Assemblyman Richard Alatorre, D-Los Angeles, which has been signed into law by GOVERNOR BROWN.

Under provisions of the new law, California prisoners can be used in medical experimentation only after they have been told about the risks or benefits of the experiment and have given written informed consent.

The bill, A. B. 1752, insists that prisoners be paid wages comparable to subjects outside prisons, and it establishes a board of three doctors, a pharmacist, two academics and an inmate to determine what research would be permitted.

The bill now gives prisoners protection from unethical and often hazardous medical experimentation, a protection not currently afforded to all Californians.

Assemblyman Herschel Rosenthal, D-Los Angeles, has written a similar bill which would guarantee these same rights to all Californians. This bill is called the Human Experimentation Act.

PLAY EQUIPMENT — The first piece of play equipment has arrived at Weber Park in northwest Pomona and city officials joined the Kiwanis Club of Pomona in checking it out. From left are Joey G. Fuentez Jr., administrative assistant; R.D. Im Hof, chairman of the Kiwanis youth services committee; J. Edgar Adamson; Kiwanis Lt. Gov. Edward J. Weber; and David Johnson, city park superintendent. The equipment will be bought over a three-year period.

County sheriff's hiring practices ruled legal

Los Angeles Superior Court Judge William P. Gray has ruled that written examinations, height and educational standards utilized by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department for hiring deputies do not constitute illegal discrimination, nor do they violate Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 or the U. S. Constitution.

A suit was brought recently as the result of the contention that some of the standards required for entry into the sheriff's department discriminated against Mexican-Americans.

Statistics during the hearing indicated that over the past three years, 16 to 23 percent of the newly hired deputies were Mexican-Americans, said Sheriff Peter Pitchess.

He added, "The (court's) decision has, in effect, assured that the sheriff's department will not be tied to a 'quota system' in the hiring of minority candidates."

The sheriff said that the plaintiffs in their suit claimed that the written qualification test was in violation of the U. S. Constitution and Civil Rights Act because Mexican-Americans as a class did poorer than whites.

In addition to an injunction prohibiting use of written tests and minimum height standards, the plaintiffs also sought several million dollars in back pay for applicants who failed the tests plus a quota hiring order that required that at least 33 percent of all new deputies be Mexican-American, Pitchess said.

Pomona Kiwanis donate Weber Park equipment

Playground equipment for tiny tots has begun arriving at the partially developed Weber Park in northwest Pomona.

The equipment is part of a three-year purchase program by the Kiwanis Club of Pomona, which will donate $4,666 toward the purchase.

Included in the first-year selection are heavy-duty double top rail swings, a stainless steel mainliner slide, and sculptures.

Play apparatus for the second and third years will be mutually agreed upon by both the city and the club in May 1978 and May 1979.

The city will install the preschool equipment.

The city Parks and Recreation Commission took official action this past spring to approve the Kiwanis proposal.

The commission has met with the city's architect, Cashion and Horie, and expects that firm to suggest future pieces for the final two years of the program.

Pomona coordinates local agencies jobs program

The city of Pomona has agreed for the second year to serve as prime agent for six agencies which will receive $505,000 in CETA Title I funds during 1977-78.

The agencies and their allocations include:

—Cal State University, Los Angeles Foundation, Center for Mental Retardation, $26,812.

—State Employment Development Department, $41,494.

—Mexican-American Opportunity Foundation, $269,073.

—North-West College of Medical and Dental Assistants, $32,024.

—Pomona Unified School District, $90,170.

—Sawyer College of Pomona, $45,803.

Cal State will use its allocation to train eight local residents for six months in food service, maintenance-custodial, factory, horticulture or handyman work.

Six persons are expected to complete training, with at least five projected to find jobs.

The local state employment office will use its allocation to find on-the-job training for at least 20 unemployed or disadvantaged persons in the Pomona area for six months. Fourteen are expected to complete the training. Trainees are selected on the basis of success potential, coupled with a need for training.

Employers are selected for contracts on the basis of their abilities to provide training in occupations having sufficient demand and versatility to provide reasonable assurance of continuing employment.

The department expects to find jobs for 13 trainees.

The Mexican-American Opportunity Foundation, to receive the greatest allocation, proposes to provide four months of classroom training, followed by two months of on-site training for at least 11 local persons; work experience for at least 12 persons, 16 to 18 years old, not to exceed one year and 14 adults, not to exceed nine months; and on-the-job training for at least 50 Pomona residents for a six month period.

The classroom training will consist mainly of "English as a Second Language" since the participants will include three Asians and three Latins.

North-West College has agreed to train 10 persons as medical, dental, veterinary or pharmacy assistants, or medical receptionists during the next seven months.

Seven persons are expected to complete training, with at least six finding jobs.

With its allocation, the Pomona school district has agreed to provide work experience in school for 72 disadvantaged youths, 14 to 18 years of age, and work experience — new careers for two others.

Up to 15 percent of the work experience trainees may be high school seniors. Of the 72, two are Asians, 33 are black, 28 Latins, and eight are white. Forty are girls 16 years and older. Thirty participants are educationally deficient and 15 are handicapped.

The in-school program is designed to help youths from low income families to stay in school. By providing part-time work, coupled with counseling and — when necessary — related remedial education and vocational training, the program will strive to increase the holding power of the schools.

During a six month period, Sawyer College will train up to 15 persons in stenographic, general clerical, or assistant bookkeeper positions. At least 11 persons are expected to complete the training, with 10 projected to be placed in jobs.

Shirley Smith, city administrative assistant, explained the CETA Title I programs cover 649 Pomona residents in classroom training, work experience in and out of school for youths, on-the-job training, and manpower services.

"The programs are beneficial to our residents," she said. "They are really worthwhile and are monitored by our staff monthly."

The term, "prime agent" as pertaining to Pomona is non-existent outside of Los Angeles County, she added.

The county was late starting the programs in 1975-76, and thus had $16 million in surplus funds to carry over to 1976-77, she added. That money was part of the past year's funding, and since it is gone the county cut the 1977-78 allocations by 25 percent, she noted.

She explained the county selected Pomona as a prime agent for its own residents because before 1976-77 the program was "exceedingly difficult to administer.

"The city staff knows what agencies we have in our area and their needs," she said. "Previously, we didn't know how those agencies were performing, how many people they were helping, or about their programs."

She said Joe Korpsak, assistant to the city administrator, worked with county officials in establishing the mechanism of the program before he left the city job.

CPR course offered

The Pomona Adult School will offer a Red Cross certificated cardio-pulmonary resuscitation course Nov. 15 and 17 from 6 to 10 p.m. at Yorba Elementary School.

Course material teaches how to restore heartbeat and breathing in emergencies and increases awareness of early warning signs, risk factors and symptoms of the potential cardiac arrest victim.

John Clinton will teach the eight-hour course.

Registration will be conducted in the classroom or in the Pomona Adult School office at 800 S. Garey Ave. Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Monday through Thursday from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Additional information may be obtained by calling 623-5251, ext. 250 or 249.

Cosell was not on show last night, but Powers threw the brick anyway.

ENERGY

The President

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said today that the performance of Congress this year and his first 12 months in office, at least in domestic matters, will be measured by the energy program that Congress produces.

Carter predicted that his administration would ultimately be successful in winning congressional enactment of his energy program, which won approval in the House but which has been battered in the Senate.

Carter told the chairman of a special House energy committee that a "balanced" program would be one that meets conservation goals and avoids a run on the budget.

"I think what we do on energy will determine the success or failure of the year of congressional work, I think, in the minds of the American people," Carter told Rep. Thomas L. Ashley, D-Ohio, in an Oval Office meeting.

"I think it's legitimate to measure the success of Congress and my own administration, at least in domestic affairs, on what happens to energy," Carter said.

Ashley believes Carter should give a House-Senate conference committee a free hand to work out a compromise energy bill and says the President should not close his mind to possible compromises or try to impose too many conditions.

The Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter should give a House-Senate conference committee a free hand to work out a compromise energy bill, says one of the President's top allies on that panel.

Rep. Thomas L. Ashley, D-Ohio, says the President should not close his mind to possible compromises or try to impose too many conditions.

As the panel prepared to hold its first session, Ashley said the conference committee, of which he is a co-chairman, must have as much flexibility as possible to fashion a final bill.

On Monday, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., leader of the Senate conferees, said that President Carter appears unwilling to accept any compromise energy legislation that would lift price controls from natural gas, even gradually.

Jackson said that as a result, "there is a chance there will be no bill on natural gas" this year.

Presidential spokesman Jody Powell agreed with Jackson's assessment that the White House would not support any compromise leading to removal of gas price controls.

Silent but cheerful classroom

DENISE WINSHIP TEACHING

CARLSBAD (AP) — The classroom at Magnolia Elementary school is silent. There are no measured tones of instruction, no pupils' whispers. But learning goes on, the deaf teacher communicating easily with her seven deaf students.

The students have been part of a special learning program for five years. This fall, a deaf teacher was added to the staff of three who have normal hearing.

Denise Winship, 23, the deaf teacher, can't recall ever having heard a thing.

"I've always wanted to teach," she says of her first job, "but I didn't think it would be to deaf children."

"The rapport is fantastic," says Kathy Hoste, a fellow teacher. "She's someone the pupils can identify with. She tells them, 'I know what you're going through,' and they realize it."

Mrs. Winship, deaf since she had spinal meningitis at 3, earned a bachelor's degree from California State University at Northridge. She also holds special teaching credentials in elementary education and special education and is completing a master's degree at Northridge.

She also teaches — without pay — 20 deaf adults and young people each Thursday at the Carlsbad school.

She teaches with the help of finger spelling and facial gestures as well as sign language and lip reading.

Deputy California attorney general William Winship says his wife is "dynamite, dynamite." Until they met, Winship never knew a deaf person.

Pulled plug

Raise legal question in girl's death

LONDON (AP) — Doctors switched off the life-support machine for a young woman "clinically dead" after a brutal sexual attack, and the action has raised a complicated legal issue of whether her assailant can be tried for murder.

In a decision reminiscent of the Karen Ann Quinlan case, the victim's anguished parents and fiance gave their permission for doctors to turn off a respirator and allow her to die, the local coroner in the northern English city of Bradford reported Thursday.

Some legal authorities said that, if and when apprehended, her assailant could charge that the physicians who disconnected her life support were responsible for her death.

Carol Wilkinson, 20, was attacked Monday while on her way to her job as a bakery sales clerk in Bradford. Her assailant flung her over a wall, sexually assaulted her and battered her about the head. Her facial features were obliterated beyond recognition. She was robbed of one pound — $1.75.

Doctors said Miss Wilkinsion was "clinically dead" when she was admitted to the hospital emergency room, but the hospital staff attached her to a respirator that breathed for her and drugs were administered to aid her heart, kidney and circulatory functions.

Detective Chief Superintendent Denis Hoban, in charge of the hunt for her attacker, said Thursday she could not have survived her injuries.

"There were discussions between the surgeon, the coroner and myself. Carol's parents and the boy she was to marry were fully involved and told everything," he said.

"They realized and accepted that the injuries she had received were such that there was no way she could have lived.

"There is no doubt in my mind at all that her assailant meant to kill her, and did so. I am satisfied the man left her for dead quite deliberately," he said.

Doctors administered a variety of tests to determine brain stem activity because guidelines issued by the British Conference of Royal Medical Colleges and Faculties provide that life-support systems may be withdrawn if tests confirm brain death.

All of the tests showed irreversible brain death.

"When they told us the final test had proved there were no signs of life at all, we had to let them switch off the machine," said the victim's mother, Audrey Wilkinson.

Miss Quinlan survived without the respirator and is still in a coma in a Morris Plains, N.J., nursing home.

San Dimas dam bid

An apparent low bid of $1,183,363 had been turned in by G. B. Cooke of South El Monte for the improvement of the San Dimas Dam in the foothills overlooking the valley.

The offer was the lowest of four submitted Monday to the Los Angeles County Flood Control District.

The bid will be given a quick check as to its form and legality by the district engineers and then the Los Angeles County supervisors will award the contract. Supervisor Peter Schabarum said the action probably will be a formality.

The project includes modification of the dam's spillway to increase its capacity for controlling storm waters more effectively. The district also plans to stabilize the dam's east abutment and to install inclinometers to monitor earth movement along the sides of the dam.

Work on the project is expected to take about a year and financing is included in the current budget of the flood control district.

One who got away, away, away...

PONTIAC, Ill. (AP) — Harold Hemminger is "the one that got away" — over and over again. He is back in jail after four years on the lam, awaiting trial on charges of escape, of course.

"Harry's one of the best jailbreakers there ever was," said an officer assigned to keep him from slipping out of the courtroom in an appearance before Circuit Judge William Caisley.

It is hard to find a jailer or prisoner who won't smile when talking about Hemminger. He's never taken a hostage or harmed a guard during any of his escapes. "Hell," he said with a grin during an interview. "I ain't out to hurt anybody."

Hemminger, 36, was recaptured earlier this month in Viroqua, Wis., after spending four years "hunting and raising kids" when he was supposed to be in Pontiac Correctional Center in Illinois.

He escaped in 1973 after being sentenced a year earlier to a three-to-10-year term for burglary.

In 1971, Hemminger escaped from the maximum security facility at Waupun, Wis., where he also was serving a sentence for burglary.

It is hard to tell how many jails Hemminger has escaped from. A prison official says five. Hemminger says four. And the Vernon County, Wis., sheriff who arrested him said "jails all over the country" had reported him missing.

Jailed several times for non-violent crimes, Hemminger said he had never run away unless he found it "absolutely necessary."

He said he escaped once in Wisconsin out of hunger. "I mean, I get hungry, too," he said. "And that damned sheriff was a belly robber."

Hemminger, who weighs about 150 pounds, said he had wasted away to 110 pounds in the jail. So he took down the ceiling light in his cell, knocked a hole in the ceiling and went to get something to eat. He never returned.

How about Leavenworth, Kan.?

"I was framed," Hemminger said. "The courts should have let me go but they didn't. So it was necesasary to leave."

That time Hemminger was put to work loading scraps of metal into barrels, which were then taken to a junkyard outside the prison walls. Hemminger squeezed into a barrel and was loaded onto the truck.

"I kicked the lid off and jumped off in downtown Leavenworth," he recalled.

When arrested most recently, Hemminger tried to escape by climbing onto the roof of his rural home, but there was nowhere to run. On the ground below him were about 80 coon dogs, which he had been training and hoped to sell, and the two children he said were born during his years as a fugitive.

The escapee said he had lived pretty casually. "I hunted every night ... after the first year," he said. "I figured they'd just stopped looking."

ROOM FOR ONE MORE? — Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau appears to be asking Queen Elizabeth II to share her umbrella during the queen's Canadian visit. The queen has been appealing for unity in Quebec where French separatists are seeking a separate nation.

WASHINGTON (AP) — By a coincidence surely not intended, the day the House voted not to consider a reform commission's recommendations for improving its practices, its Judiciary Committee approved a measure to set higher ethical requirements — in the executive branch.

The bill would require officials to disclose their financial affairs more fully and to refrain from using their government contacts for private interest after leaving office.

Rep. Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., the chairman, said that, "with growing public skepticism of our government officials, it is necessary that we move very rapidly to enact safeguards against conflicts of interest by officials in the federal executive branch."

Rodino, incidentally, voted to consider the proposed House standards and procedures.

When Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W.Va., asked the House to agree to a conference on a bill to admit bobsleds and luges duty-free, members sat up and listened.

It wasn't that they were that keenly interested in winter sports, but that the Senate in its freewheeling style had tacked 169 pages of energy legislation onto the minor bill.

Then again, Staggers was having trouble pronouncing luges. He gave it several variations, while the House chuckled, and the clerk, reading the measure, had still another twist.

The dictionary says a luge is a small sled of Swiss origin and that it rhymes with rouge.

Desperate straits

Cambodian refugees flocking to Vietnam

EDITOR'S NOTE — Horst Faas, the Associated Press photographer and writer who won a Pulitzer Prize for his coverage of the Vietnam War, recently returned to the country with a German tourist group.

An AP News Special
By HORST FAAS
Associated Press Writer

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — Some 60,000 Cambodians have been granted asylum in Vietnam in the past year and are living in desperate conditions on the outskirts of Saigon and in the provinces west of the former South Vietnamese capital, diplomatic sources in Hanoi say.

At least 16,000 of these refugees are trying to leave Vietnam and have asked the Hanoi office of the U.N. High Commissioner For Refugees for help.

Most of the refugees are reported to have been small traders, businessmen, manufacturers or employes in shops, business houses and manufacturing concerns.

Most are said to be from towns from which the entire population was moved forcibly to the countryside after the Communist takeover in 1975.

"The Vietnamese government has been looking after the Cambodian refugees despite its own food shortages and economic difficulties," one diplomat said. "The Cambodians are receiving rice rations that just keep them alive and are under the ration of 14 kilos (30.8 pounds) every Vietnamese gets per month."

The source also said the Cambodians are allowed to work as small businessmen and vendors.

"That means they can peddle their last belongings to stay alive," he said.

A diplomat from a nonaligned country who is stationed in Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital, reported during a visit to Hanoi that he and his colleagues know almost nothing about what is going on in the country.

"We have to live in a hotel in downtown Phnom Penh which we can never leave," he said. "The food is delivered to us from the outside. We cannot even go out on the pavement outside the hotel."

Western observers in Hanoi say they have practically no information about the situation along the Cambodian-Vietnamese frontier. Last August, some Vietnamese newspapers reported clashes along the border. But in a visit with a German tourist group to a province about 20 miles from the Cambodian frontier, this reporter could see no sign of military activity or preparedness.

Cambodia and Vietnam have full diplomatic relations. But diplomats in Vietnam say they believe the Vietnamese government has not returned any refugees to Cambodia.

"In this respect the Vietnamese have acted with more respect for basic human rights than some of the other Southeast Asian nations," one Western diplomat said.

He was referring to governments that have refused to admit refugees from the Indochinese countries.

Of the 16,000 Cambodian refugees who have asked the U.N. commissioner for help, 3,000 have received entry visas for France. Seventy have received West German visas, and U.N. officials believe West Germany may take 150 more. Belgium also will take 150.

"We have stacks of requests in our desks," said an official of the West German embassy in Hanoi.

The exodus from Vietnam to France, which has received some 1,000 refugees from Indochina each month since the end of the Vietnam War in April, 1975, came to a halt recently. The Vietnamese government canceled Air France's landing rights in Saigon — which the Communist regime calls Ho Chi Minh City — because of the French goverment's refusal to close its consulate there.

U.N. officials here hope the flights will resume soon.

Try a different parks tour next

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tired of fighting crowds at the Washington Monument? Too jaded for the Grand Canyon? If so, the National Park Service invites you to visit the Saugus Iron Works.

The major attractions are not the only government sites for tourists to visit, the service says. There are lesser-known places. Some of them are very, very lesser known.

Take, for example, the iron works. On this national historic site in Saugus, Mass., the first integrated iron works in North America has been reconstructed. Your eyes can feast on a furnace, a forge, and a rolling and slitting mill.

On your return home, you can describe the works to your friends without fear of learning they've already seen it. The iron works definitely does not attract as many visitors as the Statue of Liberty.

If iron isn't your bag, try the Fort Union Trading Post, a national historical site straddling the North Dakota-Montana border. It celebrates the principal fur trading depot for the Upper Missouri region from 1829 to 1867.

Admittedly, the view does not match that of Mount Rushmore. All that remains of this frontier outpost are crumbling foundations. But you won't have to battle throngs of hot and sweaty tourists.

The park service maintains 173 national historic sites, created either by act of Congress or presidential proclamation to preserve areas of America's past.

The park service can provide you with the names of all the historical sites maintained at taxpayer expense. Not all are obscure. Included in this classification, for example, is the White House.

Then there's Mar-A-Lago in Palm Beach, Fla., billed in a government brochure as a "private mansion representative of the affluent society's way of life in the 1920s."

Alas, the same brochure says the mansion "is not open to the public."

This is only proper. What could be more "representative of the affluent society's way of life" than snubbing summer hordes of tourists with screaming kids?

Actually, the huge estate, built for $8 million in 1927, is simply too expensive for even the government to keep open.

One home you can enter is that of the late Augustus Saint-Gaudens, the turn-of-the-century sculptor of American heroes. The New Hampshire site memorializes his studio and gardens.

A journey here can provide you with conversational one-upsmanship for years when you casually cite Saint-Gaudens' works. Even an Interior Department employe admitted Saint-Gaudens "is not as well known as Michaelangelo."

Pomona school board OKs three children's centers

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

Pomona school board Tuesday night approved a plan to establish children's centers at Yorba, Arroyo and Madison elementary schools in a major overhaul of the troubled program.

Approval came on a 3-2 vote with trustees Frances Livingston and Eugene Whitlock dissenting.

Whitlock earlier had said he supported one central location for a main children's center, at Lincoln Elementary School, and was opposed to the three-site plan because financing was not available.

The plan introduced to the board calls for the present main center at Madison Elementary School to be relocated on the campus in a site closer to the school's main buildings.

The main center has been the scene both last spring and in recent weeks of numerous gunshots, with several bullets being fired into the buildings during non-operating hours.

District officials are hopeful that by moving the main center closer to the school buildings such incidents will cease. At present the main center is set apart from the other school buildings by a playground.

District Supt. Charles Carpenter told the board that early plans call for the establishment of the three centers with relocatable buildings at the sites. He believes the district can operate and develop the three sites at a cost not much greater than the operation and development of the one main center proposed by Whitlock.

The present children's center program is composed of nine sites throughout the district with many centers located in rentals at church buildings.

Officials indicated Tuesday that by establishing the three main centers, access to a center capable of handling more children would be improved and could conceivably reduce the 301 children presently on the waiting list for enrollment at the centers.

In a memo to the board, Assistant Supt. for Educational Services Ralph Taylor said, "In terms of cost effectiveness there will be a savings to the program in terms of greater utilization of staff and monies being applied to the purchase of a building rather than their rental."

Trustee C. J. Mendoza was assured by staff that cost for the program would not impact the general fund of the district, with all expenses being financed through the child development tax.

The Yorba site has a large amount of available space, is convenient to the San Bernardino Freeway and is expected to draw students from Harrison, North San Antonio and San Jose schools.

Arroyo, officials reasoned, will draw its students from Arroyo, Roosevelt and Kellogg schools with the possibility of establishing the center on the former site of the Barbara Greenwood Kindergarten building. This could create some space problems at the school if and when the current inadequate kindergarten facilities at Arroyo are replaced. Children from Diamond Bar would also be placed at Arroyo, but Diamond Bar children have never composed even 1 percent of the program's makeup.

The Madison site is located conveniently, said officials, to Alcott, Lexington and Hamilton schools and will enroll a large number of Spanish-speaking students. Emphasis on Spanish will be placed on the staffing at the center.

The administration is expected to come back to the board in the coming weeks with a funding proposal.

This is one piece of the lacy, thick, white spider web Mrs. Dorothy Finke of 1662 Elaine St., Pomona, awoke Tuesday morning to find on her front lawn. It looked fragile, she said, but really it was quite thick. A La Verne resident said she found the same webs draped over her porch light Tuesday morning. Last week, San Francisco was littered with the filmy, white webs which experts said was the work of millions of baby spiders. Mrs. Finke said it appeared the webs had floated down from the sky and literally covered her front lawn.

Pomona City Council

Progressive taxing system considered for bingo games

By GEORGE MacLAREN
PB Staff Writer

The Pomona City Council has decided to look at a sliding scale of taxing the gross receipts of bingo operators in the city.

The bingo ordinance, adopted by the council Oct. 10, provides for a 10 percent tax on the gross receipts of each bingo operation.

But City Clerk Larry Thomas last week pointed out that four organizations will make money, while two will show minus net after the tax.

Based on reports filed between April 30 and June 30, the Church of All Faiths reported a gross revenue of $84,904.37, a net revenue of $27,049.17, and a 10 percent tax of the gross revenue of $8,490.44. That resulted in a net after the tax of $18,558.73.

On the other hand, the Eagles Lodge during the same period reported a gross of $4,563.45, a net of $338.31, and a 10 percent tax of $456.34, with a minus net of $118.03 after the tax.

The VFW reported a gross revenue of $6,178.25, a net of only $414.42, a 10 percent tax of $617.83, and a minus net after tax of $203.41.

Thomas explained that for the largest operator the tax amounted to 30 percent of the net profit, and to more than 100 percent of the net profit of two of the fraternal organization.

"This tax, as applied to some operators, is confiscatory," he said.

Thomas said he believes the intent of the Legislature was that the maximum profit derived from a bingo operation should be devoted to charitable purposes, "and thus I recommend that the city tax be eliminated or kept to the barest minimum commensurate with our cost of administration."

Councilwoman Georgia Grove said Monday night that "We've an ordinance to enforce. To enforce it takes manpower. Manpower requires money."

Councilman Adrian Wright suggested a sliding scale of taxing with the largest organization paying the largest percentage of tax. "Just like income tax," he said.

"That's discrimination," Mrs. Grove countered.

Councilman G. Stanton Selby tended to go along with Wright's suggestion.

"That would put us into quite an auditing position," said Mayor Charles Bader.

Wright moved to hold the matter over for two weeks, while a sliding scale is formulated.

The motion passed.

NEA chief says newspapers must re-define their roles

Admitting he may be accused of committing the "sin of elitism," Newspaper Enterprise Association (NEA) President and Editor Robert Roy Metz Tuesday in Claremont said a liberal arts education and a superior newspaper may not be products for the masses of today.

Metz, 48, speaking at a joint Scripps College and NEA Founders Day celebration, addressed a near-capacity crowd in Garrison Theater.

"The day of constant expansion of newspapers into more and more homes may be past," Metz told the students and alumni observing Scripps College's 50th year and NEA's 75th year.

Ellen Browning Scripps and her half brother, E. W. Scripps, founded NEA in 1902. She founded Scripps College in 1926. NEA now has become the largest feature syndicate in the country.

Discussing "Choices and Chances: The Liberal Arts and American Media," Metz said that "in the print media, there is too much truth for readers to assimilate . . . so they have a tendency to turn it all off.

"This is one reason, I believe, why people turn to television. There news is more solid. And, it must be true. There it is in living color," said Metz.

Since the end of World War II, there has been unparalled growth in both private colleges and newspapers, he continued. Now, however, enrollments, subscriptions, grants and contracts are down, and both colleges and newspapers have turned to computers as cost and time savers.

The decision made by many Americans is clear, Metz said. "Quite a few have made it clear they can do without a subscription to a daily newspaper. But, this current, somewhat depressed situation is not all bad.

"We in print media have the task of defining our roles, and it is not an easy one."

Metz said newspapers must decide what is news and then analyze it through positive and negative processes and give readers information on which to make intelligent decisions.

Chino crime rate increases after police crackdown ends

By BOB SWETNAM
PB Staff Writer

A followup report on a recent police crackdown on crime in Chino shows that crime incidents have crept back up slightly since the program was stopped.

Police Chief Gerald Doyle told the City Council Tuesday night that crime had risen 13 percent during a 90-day period following the police department's discontinuance of a high profile program that drastically cut crime in that city between February and May.

The City Council had requested the police program after several incidents of youth and gang-related crimes were committed near City Hall.

Tuesday's report indicated that effects of the program were still being felt within the community.

While serious crimes decreased 29 percent during the original crackdown, they were still down significantly from the period which preceeded the program, said officials.

During the post-program period which ended Aug. 16, officials said one homicide was reported, no rapes, 17 robberies, 60 assaults, 207 burglaries, 140 larcenies, and 22 auto thefts.

Robberies were up 70 percent over the high profile period, assaults were up 9 percent, burglaries up 23 percent, larceny up 3 per cent, and auto thefts down 8 percent.

"The total reflects a 13 percent increase in crime since the program's termination," said Doyle. "This increase demonstrates the result of returning to a normal patrol force operation."

During the police crackdown, many officers worked numerous overtime hours. All available officers were put on field assignments to combat street crime.

Doyle said the program had proven a success, but added that police officers could not maintain such a schedule for long periods.

"We expected crime to go back up once we discontinued the program," he added. And although the 13 percent crime hike was not good news for the community, it did indicate the program and its after-effects had made a significant impact, he said.

Doyle reported that crime generally increases during the summer months (the post high-profile period.)

"We can conclude, therefore, that high visibility is a major factor in reducing crime."

Doyle said the addition of five police officers and the newly developed anti-crime methods will probably begin to bring down crime rates in Chino even further.

Australian visitor heads home

Retired Town Clerk (city manager) William Downie of Mildura, Australia, wound up a several-day visit to Upland and today flew home.

Mildura is a sister city of Upland. It is located in the arid desert north of Melbourne and is similar to Upland's coastal relationship with Los Angeles, Downie said.

The ramrod straight, 6-foot plus Downie, retired this year as Mildura's chief city executive after 50 years of public service, including 4½ years of service in the Royal Australian Air Force in the South Pacific during World War II.

Mr. and Mrs. Downie now are completing a 15,000-mile, multi-nation, round-the-world trip of four months.

Downie described his city as an oasis city of 40,000 where wine grape growing is the chief industry. Currently, summer is beginning along with average daily high temperatures of 95 degrees, he said.

County OKs Live Oak Dam study

Los Angeles County supervisors Tuesday approved a re-analysis of the Live Oak Dam located northeast of La Verne at a cost of $215,168.

County Flood Control District officials requested the study as part of an ongoing program which re-examines the district's 18 major dams.

Live Oak is the eighth concrete dam to be investigated under the program. The San Dimas Dam and the Big Dalton Dam have already had the periodic checks.

A. E. Bruington, the district's chief engineer, said the project's purpose is to ensure that any changes in the condition of dams are found before damages become extensive.

Ontario council

Guard approved for dangerous corner

By MAE TATE
PB Staff Writer

With nearly 100 parents crowding the council chambers, the Ontario City Council Tuesday conceded the unique speed and configuration problem with the Sixth Street and Grove Avenue intersection, and approved a crossing guard for the location.

The council unanimously approved a $1,320 transfer from the contingency account to the police department budget for the Vineyard School guard. However, admitting that they will probably be faced with similar requests from four other schools in the city, members stipulated that this decision would not necessarily set any precedence for future actions.

Councilman Robert Abel made the motion for approving the crossing guard because he believed the "council should have flexibility to deal with unique situations."

Councilman Homer Briggs, former superintendent of the Ontario-Montclair schools, strongly supported the Vineyard crossing guard, but added "I want to point out here and now to friends from Vineyard and other schools this is, in my opinion, an unique situation. This does not mean that a similar number of students will get the same kind of concern from me."

The council action overruled recommendations from City Engineer Ed James, the city's Safety Commission and the Ontario Police Department for denial.

Last spring, Vineyard Principal Marjorie Gillespie and parents asked the city to provide a crossing guard at the dangerous intersection because of the speeding motorists, insufficient timing on the signal to cross the street, the high incidents of "near misses" between children and motorists, the volume of traffic and children, the lack of sidewalks for children to stay out of the street, and several other safety factors.

The Safety Commission denied that request, but concerned parents appealed their grievance to the council.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Stewart and Mrs. Gillespie made the main presentations before the council, giving specific details and diagrams of the intersection and adjacent areas.

Parents cited past accidents in which a teen-ager was killed, another young girl crippled for life and several children injured. They complained about speeding motorists ignoring the pedestrians in the crosswalk. One woman said, "Last year, I fell on my face to save two other kids."

Roberta Norris noted the situation will worsen when the foggy season sets in. She said children and fog and people rushing to work equals hurt children.

James defended the city staff recommendation for denial, saying the intersection does not meet the minimum criteria established by the city to justify placing a crossing guard there.

He said the 74-feet wide street takes about 21 seconds to cross, and the signal there allows 22 seconds — 10 seconds of walk (green), 12 seconds of flashing red (don't walk) as a clearance for pedestrians in the crosswalk and three seconds of yellow.

He said only five accidents had occured in the past three years and he was unaware of the accidents cited by parents. In an update of the speed limits in the city, it has been recommended that 35 miles per hour be set on Sixth west of Grove and on Grove south of Sixth; 40 mph on Sixth east of Grove; and 45 mph on Grove north of Sixth.

The Bakke case: the hidden issue

The case of Bakke vs. the Board of Regents, now before the Supreme Court of the U.S., centers on the issue of whether or not government may require racial quotas in admitting students to institutions of higher learning. This, at least, is the obvious issue, which has served as the focal spot for most of the controversy that has surrounded this potential landmark decision.

But there is another, less obvious issue that is no less important: if we give government the power to accord preferential treatment to minorities, do we not also give it the power to decide which minorities shall be so favored?

This question has serious implications. As Nathan Glazer, a Harvard University professor, has written in his book on "Affirmative Discrimination": "We are indeed a nation of minorities; to enshrine some minorities as deserving of special benefits means not to defend minority rights against a discriminating majority, but to favor some of these minorities over others."

An outrageous example of this favoritism at work is the case of DiLeo vs. the Board of Regents, presently before the Colorado Supreme Court. It seems that young DiLeo applied to the University of Colorado Law School, and was admitted under the mistaken belief that he was of Mexican descent. When it was learned later, however, that his roots were not Mexican but Italian, his admission was revoked. And yet are not the Italians as much a minority as the Mexicans? Or, for that matter, are not the Jews, the Poles, the Finns, the Letts, the Rumanians, the Chinese or any of the other groups that made their homes on these shores also minorities?

Somehow, professor Glazer observes, the government civil rights agencies have managed to turn the civil rights legislation of the last decade completely around. The Civil Rights Acts passed between 1964 and 1968 declared that no account should be taken of race, color, national origin, or religion in voting, jobs, education, or housing. Yet no sooner was this legislation enacted than we "entered into unexampled recording of records of color, race and national origin of every individual in every significant sphere of life."

It is not inconceivable, if this process of classification and recording continues, that we shall shortly become as racially conscious a society as South Africa — although for different motives. What, then, will the future hold for the individual who is half Mexican or half Indian? Will he or she also be accorded favored minority status?

Already we are not far from a situation depicted in a magazine cartoon of some years back — a personnel director telling a dark-complexioned female that "As an under-30 black woman with a Spanish-sounding surname, I'm afraid you're overquotafied."

Certainly this situation is unfair to all concerned. A selective lowering of standards is not only a hardship to those who qualify as members of the "majority," it is an insult to those minority group members who want to be accepted on the basis of their individual worth and not their racial or ethnic backgrounds.

In a society that spends billions of dollars to raise living standards, to help the disadvantaged overcome a wide variety of handicaps, and to improve the quality of education for all, is it too much to ask that people be judged on their own merits?

Driven to drink?

Maybe somebody should be worrying about this new compulsion among small fry to collect empty beer cans. Instead of lining their walls with dog-eared books, thousands of 12-year-old boys are now combing the gutters for empty cans of Olde Frothingslosh or Death Valley Pilsener or something equally obscure.

What would grandmother say if she knew that little Matthew is falling off to sleep in a sea of dead soldiers each night?

More to the point, what can a father say when junior insists that he go out and drink a few beers — and bring back the cans?

It's a terrible situation, plainly, that can lay such a load on parental responsibility.

Creepy stuff

From Basildon, England, comes the tale of a tomcat named Sam who saved the town from hysteria by devouring a giant Mexican red knee spider that reportedly could jump three feet off the ground and pluck birds out of the air.

All we can say is that the fellow who invents these strange stories will be extended every courtesy by the proper authorities if he turns himself in without a fight.

Testing for food sensitivity

Dear Editor:

In Dr. Lamb's Sept. 18 article, he gave your readers some outdated information.

He stated that sugar could not affect the nervous system which controls the muscles in less than 30 minutes. Experiments conducted by scientists at the University of Chicago and the University of Toronto, and reported in Science of February 1968, showed that a new route to the brain had been discovered whereby radioactivity glucose reached the brain in seconds.

John Yudkins of England recently reported that excess sugar consumption is statistically associated with atherosclerosis and heart attacks. On the basis of his studies, Yudkins states, "It would mean, for example, that a person assessed by our dietary history as taking more than 110 grams of sugar a day (4 ounces) was perhaps five or more times as likely to develop myocardial infarction as one taking less than 60 grams a day."

In my book "Touch for Health," I discuss the use of manual muscle testing to determine food allergies and hypersensities. We now have through the Touch for Health Foundation a state of California-approved vocation training school, and have trained over 500 instructors to train lay persons and others to use such tests to help themselves and their families to learn what food they have hypersensitivities to.

The Touch for Health classes are now being given at the University of California, Riverside and San Diego, Los Angeles Valley College, Los Angeles City College, Harbor College and many other community and private colleges. We have also been approved for license renewal courses for registered nurses.

The letter to Dr. Lamb stated that the weakness would last for weeks. This was probably a misquote of the person showing the methods, as that would be a rare case for such a small amount of sugar to affect the muscles for so long. However, in extreme hypersensitivity, it could and probably does occur.

WASHINGTON — The wining and dining of Pentagon procurement officers apparently has become a major industry. A confidential congressional study charges that defense contractors have spent "several million dollars annually" on this sort of revelry.

Such massive entertaining, the report adds gravely, presents "a threat of significant proportions to the integrity of public contracts and the procurement process."

Many a contract is consummated over a shotgun barrel in a fog-sheathed duck blind. Or some inside information, worth millions to a contractor, might be dropped casually on a golf green. The way to a defense contract may also be greased by booze and blondes at a swinging night club.

The congressional study found "repeated hospitality to many of the same federal employees." They weren't shown a good time for the pleasure of their company, the report suggests. More likely, the contractor hoped in return for his largess "to obtain advance or inside information and to secure preferential treatment in the course of doing business with the government."

Two years ago, we wrote a series of columns about defense and space officials accepting free hunting and ski trips from military contractors. We identified the hosts as the giant Northrop and Rockwell corporations, which were called on the carpet by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the Joint Committee on Defense Production.

The publicity died down, but the committee continued its investigation. Painstakingly, the committee examined the entertainment practices of more than 40 leading defense contractors. The report, just completed, is still confidential. However, we can reveal the highlights:

— The report listed these gratuities, which contractors commonly make available to government procurement people: "Tickets to sporting and cultural events; hunting, fishing, golfing or similar recreational outings; entertainment and meals; dinners, balls, banquets and night clubs; transportation, lodging, meals and refreshments, especially in connection with hospitality suites at professional meetings; and visits to lodges and resorts."

— The committee determined, for example, that at least 30 of the 41 contractors surveyed had given government officials tickets to sporting and cultural events. During the three years covered by the survey, 30 companies had sponsored about 1,200 hospitality suites, where the booze flowed freely. At least 35 of the companies acknowledged purchasing meals for government employees.

— At least 16 firms sponsored sporting activities that included government officials. These activities ranged from golfing matches to hunting trips. Some corporations paid for transportation, hunting licenses, ammunition, meals and lodging, hunting and guide fees. Some even arranged for the preparation of the game.

— The acceptance of the aforementioned favors, the report charges, violates a 1965 executive order. "Entertainment of government officials," cautions the report, "can undermine the integrity of government contracts." For instance, a contractor may obtain intelligence or advance information on government requirements and specifications, thereby gaining an unfair advantage over his competitors.

— One witness, interviewed by an investigator for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, stressed that "one of the purposes of developing liaisons with NASA employees was to develop inside sources who could be telephoned for advance or inside information." Anyone who provides such information, the committee warns sternly, "is in violation of departmental standards of conduct."

Putting brakes on GOP skid

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS

BRETTON WOODS, N.H. — (NEA) — There were fat cats and functionaries, journalists and security men, staff aides and party pros — more than 400 registered participants in all.

But the hardest folks to find at this year's Republican Governors Conference here in the White Mountains were the Republican governors themselves.

There are only 12 of them, down from 32 just seven years ago.

And unless the 1978 elections augment their ranks considerably, not only the GOP governors but the Republican party itself could wind up on the endangered species list.

That is why this year's conference was a school for candidates hoping to capture state houses around the country during the 36 gubernatorial elections next year.

Somewhat belatedly, national GOP leaders have realized that the party's traditional focus on the White House and Congress has resulted in a withering of its roots at the state and local level.

With reapportionment looming after the 1980 census, Republicans could be written off the political map of America unless they are strong enough to influence the drawing of new election district boundaries.

Notwithstanding the Supreme Court's one man, one vote ruling of a decade ago, political boundary lines still follow partisan strength. The GOP's current weakness is vividly reflected in the gap between its vote count in the 1976 congressional elections and its seats in Congress.

Republican candidates for Congress last year drew 42.2 percent of all votes cast, according to the GOP National Committee. Yet Republicans hold only 33.3 percent of the seats in the House.

"There are 30 states right now where the Democrats control not only the governorship but both houses of the state legislature as well," noted Dick Thaxton, a political pro for the Republican Governors Association.

"We're not going to be able to regain control of more than a handful of state legislatures before the next reapportionment. So unless we can take some of those governorships, we can be redistricted out of existence," he said.

No less an authority than John Connally, whose own ambitions are exclusively national at this juncture, is urging an all-out drive on the state houses next year by the national party apparatus.

"The Republican National Committee should seriously consider allocating at least one-fourth of the total funds available to it next year to gubernatorial races," Connally told the New Hampshire conference.

GOP Chairman Bill Brock was already ahead of Connally. The Republican Governors Association, which has never before engaged in fund-raising activities, hopes to collect $500,000 for next year's campaigns and the National Committee will add $250,000 of its own to that pot.

The prospects are reasonably good. Party professionals think Republican candidates will be viable competitors in all but about eight of the 36 gubernatorial races next year. There is almost no chance for Republicans to gain the state house in the two biggest states — New York and California — or in Southern states like Georgia, Alabama, and Arkansas.

But the West, where GOP Gov. Jay Hammond of Alaska is all by his lonesome right now, offers a golden opportunity, especially after President Ford's sweep of the region last year. Oregon, Colorado, Wyoming, Arizona, Idaho, New Mexico, South Dakota — all may be ripe for the Republicans.

Even the optimists at the GOP National Committee acknowledge the best the Republicans can hope to do is to double their present pitiful numbers in the state houses, from 12 to 24 or 25 governors.

That might not seem like an ambitious goal, but for a party facing possible extinction through reapportionment, it may be the GOP's last best hope for survival. Governors don't generally draw political boundary maps, but they can veto them. And that would put the brakes on the Republican party's long skid towards oblivion.

Just in jest

All trains passing along the ocean front near the San Clemente estate of former President Richard M. Nixon have for some years been required to slow down to a sedate 40 miles per hour. But now there is a movement under way to eliminate that 40-mph railway speed limit. The whys and the wherefores of the proposal are not entirely clear, but mark my words, if its sponsors are successful, you can be almost certain of what is going to happen next. Because, like elephants, one's political enemies never forget, their next move will undoubtedly be a proposal to eliminate the 55-mph speed limit on the freeway which passes along the eastern boundary of the Nixon estate.

Restraining Brown's veto

By EARL G. WATERS

Some fancy footwork was engaged in by Gov. Jerry Brown in the closing hours of the 1977 legislative session in an effort to avoid what he feared might become a rash of veto overrides and thus indicate a diminishing of his strength.

Governors have long been exercising their veto power virtually without restraint. It had been nearly three decades since a veto was overridden when the Legislature overturned one of Ronald Reagan's. With this knowledge, Brown, since taking office, has been brazen in his rejection of bills and it wasn't until earlier this year that he suffered his first legislative "reprimand." That was when the lawmakers, egged on by an aroused public, overrode his death penalty veto.

Apparently assuming that to be an exceptional case, Brown has continued to act roughshod in the use of the veto. Obviously he had misread the mood of the solons for, in rejecting the bill authored by Sen. Al Alquist designed to ease the Medi-Cal and welfare cost burdens on county governments, he stirred the members.

Alquist had fought too hard for his bill to accept defeat and set out to gather the necessary 27 votes for an override. He got 31. Indications of support for his bill in the Assembly were sufficient to promise override there, too. To head it off, Brown quickly had the provisions of the Alquist measure amended into an Assembly bill, letting it be known that he would sign it.

In the same manner he headed off override of another Senate bill, this authored by Sen. Ray Johnson. It was a relatively unimportant measure which reimbursed tiny Trinity County for costs of an educational program which had been encouraged by the state. The amount involved was only $22,150 but Brown rejected it out of hand.

Angered by this cavalier treatment of a small constituency, Johnson appealed to his colleagues and won override in the Senate. Again the provisions of the Johnson bill suddenly were to be found in an amended Assembly bill headed for the governor's signature.

The two instances, joined with the death penalty override, point to a new enthusiasm for the override. Spawned by years of faintheartedness on the part of the lawmakers to it, governors have grown to the belief the Legislature does not dare do it. This has led to the mistaken myth that an override is an "embarrassment" to a governor, a sign of weakness on his part, as well as a total misconception of the reasons the veto power is granted the governor.

It was not given as President Benjamin Harrison so profoundly stated "upon the principle that he should approve only such as he would have voted for had he been a member." Rather it was granted for the purposes detailed by one of the state's greatest legislators, the late Sen. George Miller Jr., "of protecting the public from sectionalism, expenditures for which there are not sufficient funds and inadvertent errors in legislation."

Stomping on the idea that the governor can veto willy-nilly, Miller declared, "In exercising the veto power simply because he does not like the policy decided by the people's representatives, the executive in effect is declaring that he, and not the people, will make the laws of the state and the representatives of the people cannot impose policy upon the executive."

"The executive," Miller added, "is neither king nor dictator. This is a people's government and the executive branch must carry out the policies which the people's representatives have determined."

It now remains to be seen whether Brown's demonstrated concern over the new-found potential for override will serve to make him more restrained in the use of the veto.

Ann Landers

An odor or just imagination?

Dear Ann Landers: Some "kind soul" sent me a recent column of yours in the mail. Anonymous, of course. This is not the first time I have received an anonymous letter on this subject. I can remain silent no longer.

I know I have an unpleasant odor. I am aware that I have been offending people for years. It's an awful feeling but I've learned to live with it.

I have been to three physicians. They suggested various pills, soaps, deodorants, anti-perspirants, and two baths daily. Nothing helps.

The last doctor made the most sense. He said about one person in 100 has a chemical condition that produces a body odor that nothing can be done about.

I wish my friends and co-workers with the delicate noses had to walk in my body for 24 hours. It would be interesting to see how well they could suffer the slings and arrows of my — Outrageous Fortune

Dear O.F.: I, too, checked with three doctors about the one in 100 theory and none of them have heard about it. This is not to say it isn't correct.

Two of my consultants mentioned an odor phobia. It seems that certain individuals who feel rejected by family or friends imagine they don't smell right. They go from doctor to doctor about the "problem." No doctor can smell the odor they insist is present and offensive. The next step is a psychiatrist.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a beautiful daughter who has a great deal of talent and an outstanding personality. I learned only recently that she is in love with another young woman.

I have tried to talk to her about it but she says she is very happy and doesn't want to discuss it any further. This is tearing me apart inside and I can't sleep at night. Being a self-supporting widow I must work and it is very difficult to keep going with all this strain on me.

Do you know of a good doctor in this city who can help my daughter get straightened out? — Desperate Mother In San Jose

Dear Mother: There is no way you can force a lesbian to get "straightened out," if she is happy with her lifestyle. Since you are the one who is having sleepless nights, I suggest counseling to help you adjust to the situation. Also, consider inquiring about organizations and groups for parents of gays who feel as you do. Check with Community Referral — in the phone book. From all reports, these groups have been immensely helpful to many. And good luck, dear.

Dear Ann: In spite of the vigorous campaigning against cigarette smoking, I read where the inhabitants of the United States are the heaviest cigarette smokers in the world. About 600 million cigarettes were smoked in our country last year at a cost of 13 billion dollars. I'm writing to you since you have been one of the most anti-cigarette people in the country. What do you make of it? — Baffled Benjie

Dear Baff: A lot of people think "the worst" will never happen to them — it's always "the other guy" who gets it. Then, of course, there are the addicts who are hooked and those who say, "Well, I have to die from something." To them I reply, "For your sake — I hope it's something else." Lung cancer is a terrible way to go.

Buy Family Circle magazine today and read the candid and provocative article by Ann Landers — "How Much Do We Owe Our Children?"

Are drugs O.K. if you learn how to control them? Can they be of help? The answers are in Ann Landers' new booklet, "Straight Dope on Drugs." How Japanese control crime

Q. "How do you account for the fact that a person here statistically is 208 times more likely to be robbed than is a person in Japan?"

A. Maybe because the Japanese police have little stations, called Koban, within eight blocks of every city house. Also, the Japanese police make so-called courtesy visits to each home twice a year. Consider, too, that 500,000 Japanese householders volunteer to serve as "contact points" where other citizens can report crime complaints. Essentially, they've broken up the whole country into exceedingly small police precincts wherein both the officers and the volunteers are well known to their neighbors. Please add to your remarkable robbery statistic the facts that a citizen here is 10 times more likely to be murdered than in Japan and a woman here 13 times more likely to be raped.

Eleven percent of all public school desks have the writing arms attached to the left side for the benefit of southpaws.

If the Federal Government took over the welfare payments, New York, Massachusetts and California would wind up with 51 percent of all that money.

Six hundred years ago, breakfast time was five in the morning, dinner was about nine, and supper was at four in the afternoon. Four hundred and fifty years ago, breakfast was at seven in the morning, dinner at eleven, and supper at six.

CONTUMELY

The word "contumely" is an excellent set of syllables which the big book at hand defines as "rude language or treatment arising from haughtiness and contempt." I can only recall seeing it in Shakespeare, but nowhere else in print. Odd that it's a word so little used when what it means is so common everywhere. In the market, at the cafe, beside the ticket window, wherever, there's more of that arrogant overbearing contumely going on than just about anything. What's needed around here is an anti-contumely campaign.

In some of the movie theaters of Thailand, live actors stand behind the screens to speak the lines of the silently projected characters.

An electric fan doesn't cool but rather heats the air it blows, please note.

Sun lamps OK, but cautiously

DEAR DR. MILLER: I was just recently willed a squirrel monkey and I am trying to do the best I can with it. My only question currently is about sun bathing. I don't dare let Jo-Jo out, but am considering a sun lamp. Good idea? — V.L.

DEAR V.L.: It might be, if employed very cautiously. If you use a red-bulbed sun lamp, carefully screened to prevent burning and carefully timed to prevent sun-burn, plus adequate space to prevent overheating — then, yes, Jo-Jo could benefit physically and psychologically from brief sun (lamp) baths.

DEAR DR. MILLER: It was a terrible shock, and I hate to even think about it, but maybe in writing I can save other poor little birds. What happened was our dear little parakeet, for some strange reason, flew into the toilet bowl, couldn't get out, and drowned. It won't help me any to know, but I can't help but wonder, does a parakeet that falls into water always drown? — M.J.

DEAR M.J.: A parakeet might dip onto the water surface and zoom quickly up again. A bird once settled into an open body of water would be hopelessly trapped. Slick sides of water-containing bowls (basins, bathtubs or what-have-you) would be likely to prove deadly. There are many household hazards for uncaged birds, and certainly water — as little as a few cups in a small container — can be a deadly trap for small birds.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Prior to breeding our boxer, she got a clean bill of health from the doctor. She always has. The stud boxer used also had a clean bill of health. Neither are from dogs with any signs of hereditary problems. In spite of this, her litter had two puppies with defects of the mouth the doctor called congenital. First, exactly just what does "congenital" mean and second, how could Spanky (our bitch) have had these puppies? — R.N.

DEAR R.N.: Congenital defects are those abnormalities of the body which are present at birth. One of the most common patterns involving congenital defects is one in which the normal parent carries an abnormal, recessive defect gene. If two normal parents each carrying this abnormal gene are bred, an average of one in four of their offspring will show the congenital defect. Therefore, these recessive defects may remain in a breed for several generations and come to light only when such dogs are mated to others with similar recessive defect genes.

Putting a stop on the non-stop

Homo sapiens is a wonderful creature. Although he is well known for his ability to start things — wars, riots, revolutions, etc. — man is also remarkable for his ability to STOP things. He can stop grass fires and mighty rivers. He can stop almost anything he chooses.

The one thing he cannot stop is a magazine subscription.

Commencing a magazine subscription is nothing — a child can do it. Mine often have. Through the agency of my 12-year-old daughter I recently found myself the beneficiary (if that's the word) of a three-year subscription to "True Screen Confessions." My 10-year-old son landed me with a year's subscription to "Monster Tales," with a bonus of a shrunken head.

You don't even have to send money to start the magazine coming. Just a card saying "Send it" and they send it. And send it and send it and send it and send it.

Having once launched this flood of glossy or pulp pap toward your mail box, you are like the girl in the fairy tale who forgot the words that would stop the porridge flowing from the magic kettle. (Personally, I would rather have a lot of gluey porridge glutting my mail box than most of the magazines they publish today. Against spectacular odds, magazines have finally reached the subhuman level of television and movies. O tempor, O mores, O Purina Chow!)

"Thank you for my one-year subscription to Perverts Post," I write. "I wish to let it expire. Please send no more. Yours truly." "Dear Reader," comes the reply by return mail, "there is no better time than NOW to renew your subscription to . . . " And another copy arrives.

"Dear Subscription Department: No thanks. I don't want the magazine any more. Please terminate my subscription forthwith." "Dear Subscriber: A special bargain price of only $36 — a saving of $42 on the newsstand price — is being offered FOR A LIMITED TIME ONLY to our regular subscribers..." And another issue.

So ignore. Play it cool. Read the magazine and forget it. "Dear Sir: For six weeks we have been sending you . . . We are sure you have been entertained by . . . Our NEW subscription rates are only . . . " And another copy.

Today I received by 179th copy of Time Magazine, to which I have not subscribed since 1968. I'm still getting copies of Liberty and Collier's. New Yorker lingered for several months, but finally languished. Possibly they have quit publishing.

Magazines hate to let go once they have caught your interest (and signature). More than that, I think they CAN'T let go. I think your name is engraved on their addressographs like an epitaph chiseled on a marble slab. Only time, wind and weather will wear away your name and relieve you of the four-color conglomoration.

Man can stop anything in the world but a magazine subscription.

Dr. Lamb

How to train, not strain

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am an inmate in a correctional institution and have put a lot of effort into becoming a better person physically and mentally. Lately I have become discouraged over my weight training program.

I would like to ask you a question pertaining to your statement a person should train, not strain. How do you know you have done enough while training but not to the point of straining?

Are high repetitions better for development than heavy-weight, low-repetitions, for example lifting 150 pounds 10 times for 10 sets or 200 pounds three times for 10 sets.

DEAR READER — Most weight training authorities agree that your maximum benefit from resistance exercises or weights is obtained by lifting the weight no more than 10 times, then resting and repeating such a set of 10 no more than three times. Apparently doing this every other day will provide the maximum benefit you can get for any weight. To maintain your muscles one such exercise session a week appears to be adequate.

The choice of a weight should be one that you can lift easily three times in succession but not one so light that you can lift it 10 or more times in succession without difficulty. As soon as you can lift a given weight 10 times in succession for three sets (a total of 30) you should certainly progress to a heavier weight. Excessive repetitions will not-speed muscle growth or development of muscle strength. A lighter exercise in any form that is repeated, as occurs with running, is considered an endurance exercise as opposed to strength exercises. Obviously there is a great deal of overlap, though, with many forms of exercise.

Some authorities believe you can obtain progressive muscle growth with only two sets at each exercise session. If you send me your address I'll send you the Health Letter number 5-1, Weight Training for Energy and Weight Control. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y., 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read all of your writings. I am 91 years old and have had nine operations, mostly hernias, gall bladder and appendix, years ago.

I live with my daughter in Oregon now and she's a wonderful person and cook. We eat lots of vegetables, pot roasts with vegetables around the roast in a steam cooker — no grease.

I eat four to five tomatoes every day and one banana. I want to know if these tomatoes are all right. I put sugar on them.

DEAR READER — You sound like you are doing great. I want to take this opportunity to comment that boiling or using a pressure cooker is a good way to avoid grease. Particularly if all of the excess fat is removed before cooking.

A good pressure cooker can result in very tender meat and help people avoid fat with its excess calories and its effects on obesity or fatty-cholesterol deposits in arteries that cause heart attacks and strokes.

Fresh tomatoes are great for you. The sugar is all right if you are not overweight. Sugar may cause dental problems so it is a good idea to brush the teeth well after eating sweets of any kind.

More attention should be devoted this coming year to artistic, musical or creative pursuits. Involvements in these areas will broaden your perspective and could even provide a source of profit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) This is not a good day to press people you know on a purely social basis for financial or business favors. Request of this nature jeopardizes relationships. Having trouble selecting a career? Send for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify your birth sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your material prospects look rather encouraging today, but there's a chance you could mess things up by doing something erratic. Watch your temper.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're a bit too gullible today, and you could be deceived by someone with ulterior motives. Don't take everyone at face value.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Keep prying noses out of your financial and business affairs today — especially those who offer abundant, but unsound, advice.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Normally you're a very easy person to get along with. You usually treat others with objectivity and friendliness. Today, however, your methods could be dictatorial.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Although your intentions are noble today, your tactics may leave something to be desired. To achieve results, the means must be of equally high standards.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Friends will cooperate today, but only if you treat them with kid gloves. Throwing your weight around could cause a serious problem.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) An enormous amount of persistence is required if goals are to be attained today. Don't let down!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Some of your ideas are quite clever and ingenious today. However, the ones you have regarding money won't be included in the group.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Enter into no business arrangements today with problem persons from the past. Old wounds could be opened.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be cooperative with others today, but don't make impulsive concessions you might regret. Sound judgment is essential.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Make haste slowly today if working on a new or unfamiliar project. Costly errors are possible if you're careless.

Opening lead — K♣

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

In this duplicate hand there were just about as many bidding sequences as there were pairs. The most popular final contract was five hearts played by South.

When a club was opened South would ruff in dummy and lead a spade. Some Easts rose with the spade ace and led a trump. South would then make the rest of the tricks by the simple expedient of drawing trumps and eventually discarding his last club and third diamond on good spades.

Other Easts would duck, South would win, ruff his last club, cash dummy's last trump and lead a second spade to East's ace.

East could then give his partner a spade ruff. Otherwise South would make six.

When North played in spades he always had to lose a spade and a diamond, but a couple of North players were doubled at five spades for very good scores.

Those East-West pairs who sacrificed at six clubs came out near the top. They would lose a spade, two hearts and a diamond for minus 500 and near tops.

A few North-South pairs went to six. One went down one for a bottom; the others were lucky enough to get their opponents to seven clubs down 700.

Ask the Jacobys

A California reader wants to know if West's two-spade bid is forcing in the partnership sequence: West, one spade; East, two clubs; West, two spades.

It is not forcing in standard American nor in many expert partnerships. On the other hand some players use the convention that a player who responds at the two level promises to bid again.

Swelling ranks

Ham operation now getting CB's 'finest'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CB radio phenomenon is spilling over into the ranks of ham, or amateur radio, according to the American Radio Relay League, the nation's largest ham organization.

The ARRL says there now are 325,000 licensed amateurs, up from 280,000 a year ago. Another 50,000 persons are attending classes this fall to get their ham "ticket," it says.

"Many of these newcomers are CBers, and we're getting the cream of the crop — people really interested in two-way radio communications," Peter O'Dell, ARRL's public information officer, explained in a telephone interview from his Newington, Conn., office.

Is it difficult for a CBer to get a ticket, as hams call their licenses? Not at all, replies O'Dell, who cites as an example a 4-year-old boy who passed the novice exam recently.

The novice, or first of five amateur licenses, requires ability to send and receive International Morse Code at five words-a-minute and knowledge of the most elementary theory needed to operate a radio.

The novice is eligible to use portions of four of the ham bands to send code, but no voice communication.

"But with relatively simple equipment, a novice can literally work around the world," O'Dell says.

Is ham equipment expensive? O'Dell says a beginner can pick up a good used radio for less than $200, or a new set for about $250.

"Of course, like anything else, one can spend whatever he wants," O'Dell adds, noting a top-of-the-line transceiver costs about $6,000.

The Morse code requirement apparently frightens some potential hams. In fact, the government is considering a "communicator" license that would not require code.

But O'Dell says people can learn enough code in two hours to pass the novice test.

Why is code necessary? First, it's required by international treaty. It's also the most effective means of radio communication and uses less expensive equipment than that needed for voice transmissions.

The easiest way to get a ham license, O'Dell says, it to attend amateur classes.

"If an interested individual will write the league," he says, "it will put them into contact with a local instructor." Just write ARRL, Newington, Conn. 06111.

After mastering the novice requirements, many hams start climbing the other rungs in the amateur ladder.

Carter, aides out to salvage economic plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with the realization that their economic program isn't working, President Carter and his advisers are back at the drawing boards trying to salvage what they can.

All indications point to yet another attempt to win business support and to stimulate investment in new industry, which the country badly needs.

The failure of businessmen to step up investment activity has been the largest single factor undermining progress toward Carter's original targets of a balanced budget, lowered employment and sharply reduced inflation by 1981.

Some private mutterings are being heard from the administration that Carter already has done too much for business without any results to show. For example, Carter never put forth the tough anti-inflation program he wanted because business opposed it and he withdrew plans for the $50 per person tax rebate, also opposed by business.

But Carter appears willing to make one more try this time through tax incentives to increase business profits and encourage investment.

He also disclosed last week that he is considering tax cuts for both businesses and individuals in 1978, one year ahead of his original scheme, if the economy shows signs of floundering again, as some experts now fear.

Very little in the economic program Carter unveiled in January has worked out according to plan.

Inflation and unemployment both have remained stubbornly high, the nation's huge trade deficit has started another attack on the dollar and interest rates have reached the danger level again.

In the first major retreat from its economic program, the administration has abandoned hopes of achieving a balanced budget by 1981, barring an economic miracle. There is no more talk, as there was during the campaign, of the $60 billion budget "dividend" in 1981 to help pay for new government programs.

Carter's advisers are now telling him that if he wants to meet his goals for an unemployment rate of 5 per cent or below by 1981, the best he can hope for is a budget deficit of $20 billion to $25 billion.

Besides the failure of businesses to step up investments, another fly in the economic ointment has been the nation's trade deficit, estimated at $30 billion this year, which has cut into employment and production in this country.

The administration appears to be seeking to reduce the deficit by encouraging an increase in the value of the Japanese yen and the German mark in relation to the value of the dollar, which would make U.S. goods cheaper in those countries while raising the price to American consumers of German and Japanese products.

The carter administration is the third to try to tackle the problem of lagging business investment, but so far Carter has been no more successful than Richard M. Nixon and Gerald R. Ford.

Charles L. Schultze, the chairman of Carter's Council of Economic Advisers, said last week administration surveys show business is increasing its inflation-discounted investments by only 6 per cent annually while an investment rate of 8 per cent to 9 per cent is needed to achieve the administration's eocnomic targets.

Businessmen basically say their profits are too low to justify substantial increases in investments.

The administration takes this lament at face value and plans to include several measures in its proposed tax reform program to increase business profitability.

The measures likely will include a reduction in corporate taxes or a scaling down of the current double taxation of corporate dividends.

In fact, there has been a pronounced shift in emphasis in recent weeks from tax reform to tax reduction, especially in tax cuts for businessmen, although there will be significant reductions for individuals too.

When Carter first began proposing tax reform, his emphasis was on closing tax shelters and loopholes with little said about helping business, but all that has changed now.

Secretary of Commerce Juanita Kreps also indicated over the weekend the administration may be preparing a new statement of its economic policies, in part to meet complaints by businessmen that they don't know what the administration is doing now.

Tri-community candidates

This is the third in a series of statements presented by candidates for five city council seats in the proposed Rancho Cucamonga election in Alta Loma, Cucamonga and Etiwanda Nov. 8.

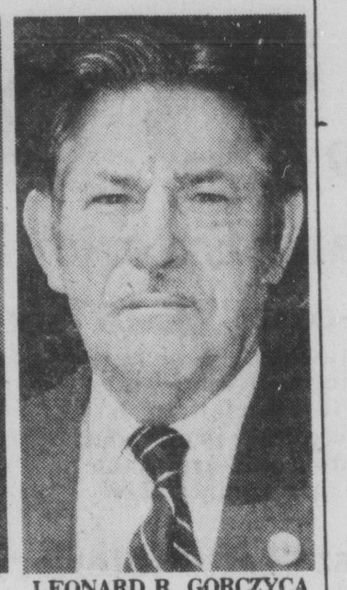
PALM E. GUERRA

Palm E. "Shorty" Guerra has been a resident of the tri-community area for 24 years. Guerra is 61 and has been married 37 years. He has two children who attended local schools and four grandchildren who are now attending local schools. He is an active member of the Cucamonga Men's Service Club.

For the past nine years, he has been financial secretary-treasurer of Plumbers, Fitters and Refrigeration union, Local 364, Riverside. He will retire in November.

He has been a member of the Economic Development Committee of San Bernardino County since 1973 and the Tri-Community Master Plan Advisory Committee.

His major concerns are to advance public health and safety measures for the new tri-community city. He would support improvement of fire and police services, as well as development of adequate traffic and circulation facilities.



LEONARD R. GORCZYCA

Leonard R. Gorczyca, a resident of Cucamonga since 1960, feels planning is the most important aspect of incorporation.

"Area planning and growth control will require a city master plan and a strong planning commission, with representation from each of the tri-communities, to study all growth requests within the city. This would receive my utmost consideration," said Gorczyca.

He said organization of the city government must insure representation from each of the three areas.

To that end, Gorczyca said he favors the formation of subcouncils in each community, which could "process the needs and desires of the residents and submit them to the City Council."

Gorczyca is the director of a medical laboratory. He is also an instructor at San Beranrdino Valley and Chaffey Colleges.

He is a resident of 7426 Onyx Ave. in Cucamonga.

EARL R. KUNKEL

An opponent of incorporation, Earl R. Kunkel says he is running for office to make sure the average citizen is represented if the new city is formed.

"I am against the incorporation of three cities into one. I believe in smaller government because of local contol. My purpose in running for the tri-community city council is to serve as a watch dog should the tri-community concept pass on the ballot," said Kunkel.

If incorporation is approved, and if he is voted to the council, Kunkel said he "would definitely support formation of community councils."

"I believe in the village concept and would strongly advocate it," said Kunkel.

The tri-communities, said Kunkel, will have to find a "happy medium" between the interests of developers, large land owners and taxpayers.

Kunkel is a foreman at Pacific Press Inc. in Los Angeles. He and his family have lived at 8990 Citation Court in Alta Loma for two years.

DOROTHY LAWSON

Formerly a proponent of Alta Loma incorporation, Dorothy Lawson feels the incorporation of the tri-communities will provide a wider tax base.

"I participated as chairperson of the phone committee on Citizens for Incorporation of Alta Loma. With the gaining support of tri-community, I have re-evaluated my position and feel the community must have a better tax base," she said.

A licensed real estate salesman, Mrs. Lawson said the new city must be sensitive to the viewpoints of all its citizens.

"I believe I can effectively serve by drawing on my experiences as a parent, property owner, community worker and businesswoman," she said.

Keeping growth in balance with the ability to deliver city services will be the main problem for the new city, Mrs. Lawson predicted.

Originally from Boston, she lived in Burbank for 23 years before moving to Alta Loma two years ago. She lives at 9072 Hillside Road.

Seek yacht info

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department is asking the Vietnamese government to clarify circumstances surrounding that country's detention of three Americans whose yacht was intercepted in the South China Sea last week.

The Vietnamese informed U.S. officials Monday that it has detained the three Americans after the yacht Brillig was towed to Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon, last Saturday.

"They (the Vietnamese) said the three crew members are well and that the Vietnamese government is continuing its investigation," a State Department spokesman said.

He said the Vietnamese government claims the yacht, boarded Wednesday was in Vietnamese waters. Sources in Bangkok, Thailand, said the Americans claimed in their last message that they were 35 miles from the Vietnamese shore.

The 39-foot Brillig was enroute from Thailand to Brunei and Singapore when its crew sent a distress signal that a boat had opened fire and the yacht was "about to be rammed."

Youths turning to alcohol, as well as drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teen-agers are increasingly turning to booze, a White House aide says, but that doesn't necessarily mean they're turning away from drugs.

"A lot has been written that teen-agers are switching from drugs to alcohol," said Dr. Peter G. Bourne, President Carter's assistant for health issues.

"But it seems that teen-agers are using alcohol as well as drugs," he said.

In a recent telephone interview, Bourne said youngsters get the impression that using drugs is bad, while drinking heavily — a habit shared with many adults — is all right.

"A young person feels that getting drunk on beer is quasiconformist," the presidential aide said. "Using drugs is more rebellious."

Bourne said some parents seem to share that view and take a lenient view toward teen-age drinking.

"Too often parents are accepting of drinking heavily because they (the children) are not using drugs," he said. "They say, 'Well, all kids experiment.'"

Bourne said he feels youngsters are more likely to drink if their parents do. "If parents look at alcohol as a way of solving their problems, their children will pick this up as acceptable behavior," he said.

He said the availability of cheap wines and other alcoholic beverages aimed at young people has added to the problem of teen-age drinking.

Federal studies estimate that five per cent of high school students get drunk at least once a week.

Shutdowns for lack of natural gas now not likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — The threat of thousands of factory shutdowns this winter due to natural gas shortages apparently has vanished because of precautionary purchases of higher-priced emergency gas, a federal agency says.

The staff of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission reported to the commission that four of the six pipelines which had expected major shutdowns now anticipate no industrial disruption. The other two now expect only a limited impact.

Plant closings totaling in the thousands had been feared because of reports issued by the commission in September based on supply information filed by the six pipelines last May and June.

But updated supply figures show major purchases under federal rules which allow interstate pipelines or their customers to buy emergency supplies at essentially unregulated prices. Usually, interstate purchases come under price controls.

The difference in cost is substantial. Regulated gas in interstate pipelines sells for about $1.44 per thousand cubic feet. Unregulated gas sells for about $2. The extra cost is passed on to the consumer.

The commission reports show the pipeline companies are depending on these higher-priced emergency purchases to bolster their supplies enough to avoid major shortages, though some shortages still will exist.

The four now expecting to avoid any significant plant shutdowns are United Gas Pipeline Co., Tennessee Gas Pipeline Co., Tennessee Natural Gas Lines, Inc. and East Tennessee Natural Gas Co. The last two companies depend on Tennessee Gas for their supplies.

In last month's report, United was forecasting that "30 industrial customers could be forced to shut down." Tennessee Gas Pipeline said it was trying to head off 134 plant closures in normal winter weather, or up to 199 in a winter 10 per cent colder than normal.

East Tennessee Natural Gas had expected up to 113 plant closings this winter in last month's report, and Tennessee Natural Gas' parent firm, Nashville Gas Co., feared up to 172 plant closings.

The companies now are not forecasting any plant closings.

Transcontinental Gas Pipeline, which previously estimated some 613 shutdowns in a normal winter, or 780 in a severe one, now expects only one plant to shut down this winter.

El Paso Natural Gas Co., in last month's report, feared that "certain industrial customers may have to shut down," but would not identify them. In the new report, the staff said Arizona Public Service Co. is the only distributor on the El Paso system still forecasting plant shutdowns, and Arizona Public Service was still refusing to identify the threatened industries.

In last month's report, the commission found no significant threat of plant shutdowns on 23 other interstate pipelines, although most of the lines expected gas shortages.

Some of the expected shortages also will be taken up by industries that can switch to other fuels.

Calls computer search 'abuse of personal privacy rights'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man who headed a federal commission on privacy says the government's plan to ferret out welfare cheaters would infringe on Americans' right to privacy.

"Welfare cheats can and must be identified and removed," David F. Linowes told the secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Monday. But Linowes called the planned computer search "an abuse of personal privacy rights."

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr., speaking last week to a closed meeting of executives of some of the nation's largest businesses, proposed making computer tapes of welfare rolls available to private employers.

As part of Operation Match, HEW's campaign to hunt down cases of cheating and fraud, the welfare roll tapes would be compared against payroll tapes.

"We would provide the welfare tapes and run them against names of employes to preserve the right of privacy and turn in names where they are found to match," Califano explained to reporters after last week's meeting.

Linowes said he was "surprised that this kind of program could reach this stage with him personally presenting it this way."

"The biggest threat to privacy today is computer-to-computer linkage," he added in a telephone interview.

If Soviets attack

General says U.S. will weaken home units to bolster forces in Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army will take equipment and manpower from its units in the United States and send them overseas to strengthen Western Europe's defenses against any huge, short-warning Soviet ground attack, it was announced Tuesday.

Gen. Bernard W. Rogers, Army chief of staff said, "We must sacrifice a bit of the unit readiness ... here in the continental United States" in order to increase the ability of U.S. Army divisions in Europe to meet any Soviet attack and blunt it in the critical first 30 days of any European war.

"The gains we will obtain through this focus on early force readiness for Europe, however, will not be without their price," Rogers said in a speech prepared for the annual meeting of the Association of the United States Army.

"Yet the threat exists now, and we must act with dispatch," he said.

Rogers did not specify how much additional equipment, weapons and ammunition would be positioned in Europe, but other sources indicated that enough for two additional Army divisions is contemplated.

Some of the stockpiles may be placed in the north German plain, which is considered one of the most vulnerable avenues of invasion.

The Army chief of staff's remarks underscored mounting concern in the Pentagon and Congress over what is now perceived as a Soviet ability to launch a major attack on Western Europe with only five to seven days of preparation, compared with the 23 days of warning time formerly assumed by North Atlantic Treaty Organization planners.

U.S. Army strategists believe a critical point may come in 1981-82 when, they say, the Russians will have finished reequipping their army divisions and air force squadrons facing NATO with powerful new weapons.

A recent series of articles by The Associated Press disclosed problems in American military readiness in western Europe and elsewhere.

With a shortage of strategic cargo airlift, U.S. military thinking now aims at increasing the combat readiness of forces already in Europe and building up stockpiles of weapons and equipment that troops flown from the United States in any emergency could draw before going into action.

Rogers indicated the plan is to increase the weapons, ammunition and equipment stockpiles "pre-positioned" in Europe and to flesh out the five U.S. mechanized infantry and armored divisions, plus other combat units principally in Germany.

The four-star general made it plain that both regular Army and reserve units based in the United States will suffer to some extent.

"The equipment needed to increase the number of artillery units and to create new unit sets of pre-positioned equipment cannot all come solely from the production line," Rogers said.

"We have no alternative but to withdraw some equipment from both active and reserve component units (which include the National Guard) and divert some existing production output previously allocated to continental United States units.

"Similarly, in order to increase the personnel fill of our forward deployed units in Europe, our continental U.S. units will likely feel a decline in their strengths," he added.

Rogers said that after increasing the readiness of forces in Europe or earmarked to be deployed during the first 30 days of any war, the Pentagon's "priorities will shift successively to those units required in subsequent periods."

This indicates that the Army hopes eventually to restore equipment and manpower resources taken away from U.S.-based units, an effort officials say could take several years.

The Army now has stocks stored in depots in Europe intended for three full armored and mechanized infantry divisions, plus 10 separate battalions whose troops would be flown from the United States in Air Force transports and civilian passenger planes during any crisis.

These "pre-positioned" stocks were severely depleted to replace Israeli combat losses in the 1973 Middle East war, but those stocks "are well on the way to being reconstituted," Rogers said.

However, he said, "we will be increasing the level of prepositioned stocks so that more units can be flown over from the continental United States on short notice."

Key legislator critical of Carter tax revisions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A key congressman is telling President Carter his contemplated tax revisions try to do too much at once.

Without eliminating some of the controversial proposals, says Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., the plan would stand little chance this year in Congress.

Ullman, whose House Ways and Means Committee must work on Carter's tax plan when it is formally presented, says Congress cannot digest all the major reforms Carter wants in one year.

Ullman wants Carter to drop his request to end tax breaks on capital gains. Ullman also wants to keep alive the full business lunch tax deduction, which the Treasury Department wants to halve.

Ullman wants Carter's bill simply to restructure tax rates, make tax forms easier to fill out and encourage long-term business investments. He also supports ending double taxation on dividends.

"If we get bogged down in loopholes, we won't get a tax bill," Ullman told businessmen last weekend.

The administration Monday stuck to its position that the entire program should be acted on at once because some parts are dependent on others.

The package Carter is considering would reduce income taxes for nearly everyone making less than $100,000 a year while changing many tax deductions.

Ullman wants Carter to delay any request to end a variety of deductions, including those for sales, personal property and gasoline taxes.

Such a move has been suggested to the President by members of his administration.

Carter is also considering a proposal to limit medical and casualty deductions and remove tax exemptions for such fringe benefits as group term life insurance.

During his presidential campaign, Carter pledged to juggle tax rates to make them more fair and end certain deductions and special preferences.

He would tax capital gains, a tax haven for many businessmen, as income and would eliminate the practice of taxing corporate dividends.

Carter also is considering raising the income at which taxes are first due for a family of four, from $7,600 to $9,500.

In one recent draft made public, the Treasury Department suggests that the tax liability for such a family with an annual income of $15,000 to $20,000 be reduced by about $300 to $1,360 a year.

Even with the fast congressional action, Carter's tax plan would not take effect until 1979, although Carter indicated last week he might ask Congress to begin the tax cuts next year to stimulate spending.

Church mixing business, religion

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Members of Good Shepherd Baptist Church believe in mixing business with religion, and they plan a string of projects like their service station to stem the decay in their bi-racial neighborhood.

"We have an evangelistic ministry," said Dr. Harold Pinkston Sr., pastor of the church whose 350-member congregation owns the Good Shepherd Gulf Station next door and two blocks of frontage on a busy Columbus thoroughfare.

"We feel the church should be the spiritual center of the community and a place people can look to for guidance," the minister said.

The service station, open daily except Sunday, was originally purchased for more parking space, but the church decided to run it, with a church trustee as manager.

"We trust the station will generate community interest and participation and funds which will enhance the total church ministry itself," Pinkston said.

As pastor, Pinkston is president of Good Shepherd Investments and Enterprises Corp., the legal owner of property the pastor values at more than $500,000 and the business he says is worth a quarter of a million dollars, all tax-free.

"We eventually intend to turn the whole area into a multi-purpose block called the Good Shepherd Block," he said. "Underground, there may be banquet facilities, youth activities such as a swimming pool, basketball courts and an indoor track.

"On the ground level, there will be business enterprises of every sort. And above ground, there will be high-rise efficiency apartments for the aged."

He said the facilities would be open to use by non-members.

The church, located in a transitional area that is half black and half white, was organized 20 months ago by Pinkston and 16 others meeting in his living room. They located the church building, which had been occupied by Presbyterians, and decided to buy.

"In seven days, our church members put $104,000 in cash on the altar to purchase the building," the minister said.

Professionals, including accountants, doctors and attorneys, are members of Good Shepherd's bi-racial congregation, he said.

"We also have what we call our 'soul members,' who are not as affluent as the others," Pinkston said. "But the spirit of mutual giving and sharing catches on."

11-foot pole available if you won't touch it with a 10-footer

DALLAS (AP) — For people faced with things so bad that they wouldn't touch them with a 10-foot pole, Neiman-Marcus' Christmas catalogue has the perfect gift: an 11-foot pole.

The collapsible aluminum pole sells for $50 complete with black leatherette carrying case. It's just one of the unusual gifts offered in the latest catalogue from the famous Dallas department store.

This year's edition shows Neiman's awareness of the energy crisis by offering his-and-her urban windmills to be used for energy.

"In an area with an average wind velocity of 12 m.p.h. (Boston, for example), her windmill would generate more than enough wattage to brew her morning coffee, Benedict an egg, heat her hair rollers, soothe her psyche with stereo, and give her bronze beauty while she relaxes under the sun lamp," the catalogue says.

His windmill supplies energy for more masculine activities, says the catalogue, which lists each gift at $16,000, before installation.

There are no photographs of the gifts, only a painting depicting two rather ordinary looking windmills.

"I don't know how we plan to show them," said Richard Marcus, vice chairman of Neiman-Marcus. "But they exist for real."

Marcus admitted, however, that the only time an item has not sold well "is when we didn't have an exhibit to show."

For just $30,000, a seven-day expedition "into the heart of Lincoln Land" is offered for a party of five.

The trip begins in Springfield, Ill., where the entourage will be met by Gov. James R. Thompson. Actor Richard Blake then escorts the group on a tour throughout Lincoln country ending with a campout on 40 acres 100 miles south of Springfield.

All proceeds of the trip will be contributed in the name of the purchaser to Lincoln College in Lincoln, Ill.

Anyone wanting a pair of Imperial yellow carved Peking glass vases from the Ching dynasty had better get in a check for $6,000 in a hurry. The catalogue says there is only one pair available.

And Neiman's does include an item for the person who has to visit construction sites in his work. For those missions, his head can be covered with a 24-karat gold-plated hard hat. The cost is a mere $175 that includes the name of the owner engraved in a plaque on the hat's bill.

For those families who would like something to hide, there's a "skeleton in a closet" — a four-foot sachet creature held together by ribbons — $25.

Joyce Brothers

Note of calculation

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: Two years ago I married a man who was much older than I. During the courtship he appeared to be all the things a woman could wish — gallant, considerate, ardent, generous. It took only a few days after the wedding for me to realize that all those qualities were sham, a facade. The man is impossible and I can't wait to get away from him. The problem is that he has a son who is my age and with whom I have formed a very close attachment. Since my marriage is ended in all but name, I don't feel that what we are doing is adulterous. Yet both my lover and I fear should his father, my husband, learn of the affair, he might cause all sorts of legal hassles about a divorce and even cut off his son from what will be a sizable estate. How can we get around this mess? — Y.P.

DEAR Y.P.: I detect more than a note of calculation in your concerns — first for the benefits you hoped to derive from an apparently loveless marriage and now for the expectations you foresee from your lover's eventual inheritance.

Despite your cries about the abrupt change in your husband's courtliness after the wedding, I would doubt that he is all to blame. We all engage in certain pretenses — putting our best feet forward, so to speak — when we meet someone new and are trying to impress them. I'm sure you too played this game during the courtship.

People's true nature cannot be masked that much, even when they are making an effort to impress. More likely your attitude has changed far more than your husband's with your dissatisfaction over settling down to the realities of marriage.

Perhaps you can find what you seek with your husband's son, but is the upset to all involved worth it? You need a new start, but not at the old surroundings. Stay away from your lover for a while, get your divorce and take a good long time to think things out before you continue on what could be a disaster course.

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: I am a highly successful businessman, hold responsible positions in community affairs and am regarded as a good husband and father to our young children. Therefore, I can't really consider that I am being immature in the attitude I have taken toward my wife. The problem is that she turns me off sexually. I have a strong sex urge, yet when I'm with her there is a definite lack of interest. I'm sure my wife has been aware of my waning desire. I'm just as sure that if I began to have an affair she would not be the type of woman who would tolerate being left alone. Though I feel the need for outside companionship, I can't imagine breaking up my home. — H.J.

DEAR H.J.: Attend to affairs in your home instead of having one outside.

There's often a transition period after parenthood when men feel that they are being ignored by their wives while all attention goes to the children. In such instances it is not improbable that the man "turns against" his wife. In his own mind his sexual negation of her is revenge of sorts for the supposed indifference.

This is also a time in a marriage when men, regarding their wives as mothers, identify with their own mothers. Under the circumstances, sex can take on an incestuous overtone subconsciously.

Try to think of your wife as lover and mistress. Attempt to recreate the mood of your courtship and early marriage, finding times to be alone, enjoying evenings, celebrating as if on a date. If you are to save your marriage, you'll have to be creative and reverse the imaginary concept your have allowed to develop about your wife. Her reaction might surprise you.

WWI unit members open club

The Widows World War I, Inc., a non-sectarian, non-political, non-profit organization is intensifying a membership drive. Founded in 1946 in Washington, D.C., where it is headquartered for the purpose of securing better legislation for the widows of World War I veterans.

Many widows have income well below the poverty level, and because of their age and lack of training in the specialized field of today, are not able to work. Many were widows before Social Security came into law.

There are many chapters in cities throughout the country, including Pomona.

Any World War I widow who had not remarried was eligible, previously, but in 1971 a resolution was passed to accept any World War I widow who has remarried and her second husband passed away or who had divorced could revert back to her first husband's pension and become a member.

Business Women's Week is national

The theme of the National Business Women's Week which is currently being observed is "Change, Challenge and Response."

Working women throughout the nation are being encouraged to change their image from good to great, to meet the challenge facing women today and to respond through positive action. Although more women today are receiving recognition today than ever before, it is a constant challenge to seek and receive recognition on the job and in society. President Jimmy Carter has designated this special period for the particular honoring of women's achievements as National Business Women's Week.

The celebration of the week, which is a nationwide observance, was organized by the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs in 1928 and has been celebrated annually since that time.

The Business and Professional Women's organization was founded in 1919 to promote the interests of all working women. Its 170,000 members extend to all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. Any woman who is actively engaged in a business or a profession is eligible for membership.

Mrs. Julia Arri, of Claremont, serves as First Vice President of the National Federation of BPW Clubs and as a trustee for the BPW Foundation. She is a member of the Pomona Club and has served in many capacities in the local club, district and as president of the State Federation previously to her becoming a national officer.

A National Women's Conference will be held in Houston, Texas Nov. 18 through 21 to provide a forum for America's women to express their viewpoints.

The idea for such a conference evolved during International Women's Year. A commission was appointed and Congress appropriated $5 million for it. It was mandated that state conferences be held throughout the country and then delegates would bring to Houston the resolutions suggested at the state conferences.

Because of the adverse publicity received by these state conferences and the subjects of resolutions being brought forth, in an unprecedented action, delegates at the recent BPW national convention, called for the women's movement to unify itself behind the Equal Rights Amendment and urged ERA supporters throughout the country to attend the Houston conference. The convention allocated $100,000 from a special ERA fund for a pro-ERA ratification assembly to establish a front of strength and solidarity.

The polka-dotted ladybird, or ladybug, is really a small beetle with a round body shaped like half a pea. The most familiar ladybirds are shiny red with black spots. But some are black with red spots. Still others are yellow with black or red spots.

These gaily colored insects live in orchards, gardens, and fields, where they eat great numbers of aphids and other plant-harming bugs.

In earlier times, farmers burning off their fields fretted about harming the helpful ladybird, giving rise to the children's verse: "Ladybird, ladybird, fly away home. Your house is on fire and your children are gone."

To "fly away home," a ladybird first raises its hard wing covers and then unfolds its flying wings.

The ladybird beetle got its name during the Middle Ages, when the insect was associated with the Virgin Mary by such names as creatures of Our Lady and animals of the Virgin.

Old gun show at fairgrounds

Don Bullock's California Gun & Collectors Show will be held at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Admission is $2, children under 12 75 cents.

Bullock and his wife, Alicia, are avid collectors, with wide interests. Their collection, assembled for more than 20 years, includes all sorts of guns, paintings, statues, American memorabilia and American Indian arts and crafts, many of the items going back 250 years or more. They will be showing some of their rarest weapons and an unusual lineup of fine Indian jewelry and other objects d'art.

Bulk of the displays will be provided by the scores of exhibitors who will bring Colt six-shooters (the guns that won the West); Remington and Winchester rifles, circa mid-1800s; the famous Kentucky long-guns; heavy flintlocks of the type carried by the Continentals in the Revolutionary War; blunderbuses from the Napoleonic era; pepper-guns; sword pistols; ceremonial swords worn by Union and Confederate officers in the Civil War, and many more firearms from the United States and abroad.

An expert gunsmith will be in attendance, ready to appraise all guns free of charge, or repair them if necessary. Bullock anticipates a great deal of bartering and trading will be going on at the show.

'Arrogant, aggressive and stubborn'

Maasai are Africa's problem tribe

By Richard Zimmerman

NAIROBI (NEA) — One of their representatives to the Kenyan parliament recently threatened to resign if they, his constituents, didn't stop smearing themselves with red ochre and sauntering down the streets of Nairobi virtually naked.

"They" are the proud, slender, handsomely regal and vain Maasai, the famed lion-killing, cattle-rustling warriors of Kenya and Tanzania, whose tribal death knell was sounded 60 years ago in a now-classic study entitled "The Last of the Maasai."

Yet despite this pessimistically premature and moving epitaph and despite all the current political, social and economic pressures which often take the form of veiled racism on the part of Kenya's politically potent Kikuyu tribe, the Maasai stubbornly continue to exist today as one of the most visible and tourist-attracting tribes in all of East Africa.

Exist? Yes. But the Maasai nevertheless are still a growing embarrassment to their own political leaders, who the Maasai do not trust, and to the central Kenyan and Tanzanian governments, to which the Maasai pay as little attention as possible.

"They are arrogant, aggressive and ridiculously stubborn about accepting the fruits of economic development and enterprise — such as the plunder of wildlife on their well-stocked land," John Eames, who is writing a book on the Maasai, observes with bitter irony.

The piercing and progressive stretching of Maasai children's ear lobes has been labeled "disgraceful" by a Tanzanian official. The Maasai males' refusal often to wear much, if anything, under their traditional short, red cloaks has been termed "primitive" by official Kenyan government edict. And the Maasai "moran" — the young, unmarried warrior class — are considered to be a useless and pitiful anachronism in most of modern Africa.

Even older Maasai, after graduating from the moran class into settled married life during their middle 20s, refuse to breed and raise cattle for the greater good of the Kenyan economy, but rather as a measure of personal or clan wealth and prestige and for the mixture of curdled milk and fresh, whole blood which still serves as a staple of the Maasai diet.

Maasai cattle are as seldom slaughtered for meat as they are sold on the open market. And occasionally they are set to graze on the lawns of surprised and indignant Nairobi suburbanites when drought hits the vast and valuable lands set aside by treaty for the Maasai.

That Maasai elders control valuable land in a country hard pressed by a booming birth rate and a shortage of adequate grazing land for conventional herds is creating still another pressure on the Maasai. It is a pressure that the ambitious and sometimes avaricious Kikuyu, the tribe to which Kenya President Jomo Kenyatta belongs, are quite ready to take advantage of. Terrorized for centuries past by marauding Maasai warriers, whose ancient, complex and rigid traditions include the belief that all the cattle in the world are theirs to appropriate at will, the Kikuyu are not exactly agonizing over the prospect that Maasai culture may vanish from the face of Africa.

For some Kikuyu, "progress" means doing to the Maasai by edict what they were never able to do to them on the field of battle.

Recently, on the pretext that large numbers of cattle were being rustled, Kenyatta's elite internal security police, the General Services Unit, rounded up and arrested a large group of moran. The GSU, noted for respecting neither tribal traditions nor the niceties of Anglo-Saxon legal procedures, cut off the moran's elaborately braided hair, which had been carefully styled with animal fat and red ochre in a helmet-like fashion first described by the Greek historian Herodotus in the fifth century B.C.

To these and other insults and pressures the Maasai have reacted in a variety of ways, both noble and ignoble.

Unfortunately, most visitors observing Africa out of windows of tour buses see only the less noble aspects of what remains of Maasai culture. At the entrance to game parks and other tourist areas poorly dressed children, old Maasai women and even older Maasai men line the road, aggressively offering to pose for pictures (for a price, of course), selling beadwork made of gaudy plastic beads from Hong Kong rather than the traditional, softly hued, glass beads, or simply panhandling for a "shilingi" — a Kenyan shilling worth about 13 cents.

These sad, cardboard replicas of a proud people should remind tourists, especially Americans, of the unhappy fate of the American Indian.

But other serious researchers, such as Eames, have made the effort to travel deep into Maasailand to witness more authentic and wholesome vestiges of ancient Maasai culture, such as the "eunota," the joyous coming out of the moran into the state of junior elders. Like many Maasai traditions the eunota is not approved by the government, since so many Maasai ceremonies are equated with acts of civil disobedience such as cattle rustling or the killing of lions with only a spear and shield for protection.

Eames was both impressed and distressed by what he saw: impressed by what had been preserved, distressed by what had been lost.

"They (the soon-to-be-elders) wore the Roman chiton, but lengthened to cover bare buttocks and other embarrassments by order of the government," he later reported. "For this reason, the short-swords were not evident and sticks substituted for spears as the moran danced in thgir battle square formations."

Still, Eames found "it was an impressive military display . . . with battalions of moran stirring the dust with their undulating or high-jumping to the drumming cadence of a war chant."

Between these two extremes — the mendicant peddlers and the anachronistic moran — many young Maasai males (women are still treated as chattel) are struggling to strike a dignified balance between their heritage and the demands of an emerging Africa.

Appealing variety with flair

Fried cheese, creamy 'nautical' appetizers

Serving a variety of appealing appetizers with flair is one of the quickest ways to transform an ordinary get-to-gether into a memorable event. Appetizers can be the frivolities of a meal or the meal itself. Either way, they are capable of setting a mood and readily adaptable to a variety of entertaining occasions from formal gourmet dinners to after-the-game buffets.

Unique flavor combinations and novel presentation are two secrets to uncommon party fare. When planning a menu for company, choose both "conventional" dishes — those containing ingredients universally liked — and "adventuresome" foods which are truly different.

Newsworthy because they fill both bills are these new recipes for hot and cold cheese appetizers from the Kraft Kitchens. Fried Cheese with jalapeno peppers and Parmesan Party Dip featuring a surprising blend of seasonings will please guests who appreciate a new Epicurean experience. And for friends who prefer familiar tastes, there's Nutty Fruit Spread, a new cheese ball variation featuring cheddar and cream cheeses, pineapple and pecans. Creamy Nautical appetizers and Cheddar Crunchies offer a flavorful texture contrast and round out the snack selection.

Almost as important as the food itself, is the way it's served. Bring your meat fondue pot or electric fryer to the table and let your guests pitch in and help make what they eat.

Consider a variety of serving containers. For example, use a wicker letter basket to hold "dippers." Simply line it first with foil or plastic wrap. Then create a garden with radish roses and broccoli florets in the bottom section. Arrange breadsticks and pretzels in the middle. And top it off by filling glasses with carrot and celery sticks.

Festive, but easy, these recipes and entertaining ideas can all be prepared or assembled ahead. So you can join the party too.

FRIED CHEESE

1 pkg., (8-oz.)monterey jack cheese with jalapeno peppers
1 cup dry bread crumbs
2 eggs, beaten
Vegetable oil

Cut cheese into bite-sized cubes. Dip each cheese cube in egg. Coat with crumbs; repeat. Fry in deep hot oil, 350 degrees, until lightly browned.

Variation: Substitute muenster, brick or monterey jack cheese, or sharp cheddar cheese for natural monterey jack cheese with jalapeno peppers.

Note: Cheese cubes may be coated and refrigerated until ready to cook.

CREAMY NAUTICAL APPETIZERS

1 pkg., (8-oz.) cream cheese
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1½ teaspoons chopped sweet pickle
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon prepared mustard
1 cup chopped, cooked shrimp
Pastry for 2-crust 9-inch pie
Vegetable oil

Combine softened cream cheese and lemon juice, mixing until well blended. Add onion, pickle, salt and mustard; mix well. Stir in shrimp. Roll out pastry on lightly floured surface to ⅛-inch thickness; cut into 3-inch circles. Place two level teaspoonfuls of shrimp mixture in the center or each circle. Moisten edges with cold water. Fold in half and seal edges. Fry in deep hot oil, 350 degrees, 2 to 3 minutes or until golden brown.

Approximately 3 dozen appetizers.

Variation: Substitute one 6½-oz. can tuna, drained, flaked, for shrimp. Omit salt.

Note: Appetizers may be prepared and frozen until ready to cook. When ready to cook, thaw in refrigerator. Fry in deep hot oil, 350 degrees, 2 to 3 minutes or until golden brown.

NUTTY FRUIT SPREAD

1 pkg., (8-oz.)sharp cheddar flavor cold pack cheese food
1 pkg., (8-oz.) cream cheese
Margarine
½ cup chopped pecans
1 can (8¼-oz.) crushed pineapple, drained
2 tablespoons chopped Maraschino cherries, drained

Combine cold pack cheese food, softened cream cheese and 2 tablespoons margarine. Mix until well blended. Stir in remaining ingredients; mix well. Mold into 2 cold pack containers coated with margarine or lined with plastic wrap. Chill until firm. Unmold; garnish with chopped pecans, if desired. Makes 2 molds.

CHEDDAR CRUNCHIES

2 cups (8-oz.) shredded cheddar cheese
½ cupmargarine
2 tablespoons milk
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup flour
1 cup grape-nut cereal

Combine cheese and margarine, mixing until well blended. Stir in milk, Worcestershire sauce and salt. Add flour and cereal; mix well. Shape rounded teaspoonfuls of dough into balls. Place on greased cookie sheet; flatten light-

MY FARMER ROLLS

An interesting recipe you won't find other places.

½ cup butter
2/3rds cup cultured sour cream
1½ cups flour
Filling, see below

In a heavy 1½-quart saucepan over low heat melt the butter; remove from heat. At once vigorously stir in the sour cream and then the flour until the dough comes away from the bottom and sides of the pan. Divide into 4 portions; turn out each onto a sheet of plastic wrap and flip wrap over; with fingers on wrap, pat each portion into a 3- or 4-inch square; wrap tightly and refrigerate overnight. On a prepared pastry cloth with a prepared stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll out one portion to an 8-inch square. Pile ¼ of the filling along one side, leaving a ½-inch space at edges; roll up tightly; pinch seam and turn up ends to seal well. Make 5 slashes, each almost the width of the roll, at equal intervals across the top. Treat remaining portions of dough the same way. Place well apart on a buttered jellyroll pan; bake in a preheated 375 degree oven until a pale gold — 30 minutes. Serve hot. Cut each roll in half through the center slash. Fill slashes, if you like, with strawberry preserves. Pass sour cream. Makes 4 rolls — 8 portions.

Filling: With a spoon beat together until blended an 8-ounce package of Farmer cheese and a 3-ounce package of cream cheese both at room temperature, 1 egg and ¼ cup sugar; chill overnight before using.

Is Your Food Bill Taking A Chunk Out of Your Budget?

Pollsters tell us that inflation is a shopper's #1 concern. On the heartening side, they go on to say that your answer to keeping prices down is "competition in the marketplace." We think you're right. So this ad is about what we're doing to fight inflation, and how we've tried to reduce your food bill, ever since 1963.

Lucky sets the record straight.

We make only 1.3% net profit. That's only 13¢ on every $10 you spend at our store . . . about the price of a pack of gum on your order. Doing business this way, we've grown to be the fourth largest supermarket chain in the United States*. Now, remember. We don't control wholesale prices. But we do control our own margin of profit, and we intend to keep that down. So, not only were we the first with discount pricing, we think you'll find we're still the leader with lower prices overall.

*According to Chain Store Age Magazine, July 1976.

Yes, we're satisfied with pennies:

Nearly 15 years ago, we decided that the thing we wanted most in the world was to stay in business a long, long time. We knew it would take a lot of satisfied customers to accomplish that feat. But shoppers were already pleased with the quality of our merchandise. We figured if they could also see a saving over other stores, they'd keep coming back to us, week after week. And that would keep us in business. Well, we've done it, folks. It's turned out the way we planned. We're doing a huge volume of business, keeping our profit low, instead of trying to get rich quick on our customers.

Your shopping list benefits.

Low prices is the name of our tune. And on top of the savings you'd expect from our way of doing business, our buyers usually arrange for a number of promotional allowances from manufacturers, that bring our shelf prices even lower. Look for the "Key Buy" tag when you shop. There's hundreds more than we can list here.

Cloud nine pie heavenly

Treat your family like guests — without over heating the kitchen. Try out no-bake dessert idea — Cloud Nine Pie.

Cool refreshment describes it best. Let the lemon-lime combination in the creamy filling be your coup. And you probably have practically all the ingredients at home.

To begin, you use bread crumbs to form the "crust" for this sweet-tart dessert. Use those dry slices that have been collecting in the bread box or refrigerator to make the bread crumbs. Store them in a covered jar until you have a few cups. They translate quickly into a terrific pie crust or casserole topping.

The filling for Cloud Nine Pie is just as super. Lemon-lime carbonated beverage thickened with unflavored gelatin and sweetened condensed milk blended with lemon and lime juices. That's all it takes!

Make it in the morning; forget about it until dinner. It adds an unforgetable, refreshing climax to any meal.

When you serve enriched bread to your family — the dried ends make enriched bread crumbs. And they're the best. Enrichment adds the B-vitamins — niacin, thiamin and riboflavin — plus the mineral, iron, to all breads and flours labeled "enriched."

CLOUD NINE PIE

CLOUD NINE PIE

- 2 cups enriched dry bread crumbs
- ½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
- ¾ cup melted butter
- Cloud Nine Filling

Stir together bread crumbs and brown sugar. Pour melted butter over dry ingredients and stir to blend. Press mixture into 9-inch pie pan. Refrigerate until ready to fill. Fill with Cloud Nine Filling and refrigerate for at least 2 hours.

Savory ham slice different

When the fall schedule becomes hectic, many homemakers find it easiest to rely on tried and true recipes. But since variety is important to keep mealtime interest high, plan on occasionaly serving a diffeent entree — one that's quick and easy too!

For a flavorful dinner that's a snap to prepare serve a tasty sauce with a panbroiled ham slice, says Reba Staggs, National Live Stock and Meat Board home economist.

SAVORY HAM SLICE

- 1 "fully-cooked" smoked ham slice, cut ¾ to 1 inch thick
- 1 small onion, finely chopped
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- ¼ teaspoon thyme

Grease large frying-pan with ham fat. Panbroil ham slice slowly, turning occasionally, 15 to 20 minutes, until lightly browned and thoroughly heated through. Remove to hot platter and keep warm. CREAM PUFFS WITH A FLAIR

Snappy cream 'puffs'

"It's the little things that count" . . . this simple slogan applies to cooking as well as life. Many times the addition of one ingredient makes all the difference. Mustard has that certain magic about it; a dash perks up many basically good recipes. For instance, take mayonnaise from the jar, add a teaspoon of mustard and some honey and the results are a zingy topping for fruit or vegetable salads. Add some cheese and mustard to basic cream puff dough and the baked results are an outstanding snack. Try a little mustard magic in your cooking.

SNAPPY CREAM PUFFS

1 cup water
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup flour
4 eggs
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
1 tablespoon spicy brown mustard

Bring water to boil in one quart saucepan. Add salt and butter. Turn heat to simmer, and allow butter to melt. Remove from heat; add flour, stir until ball is formed. Then add eggs one at a time. Stir vigorously after each egg is added. Batter should be smooth and satiny. Then add cheese and mustard; stir. Spoon with teaspoon on greased cookie sheet. Bake at 375 degrees oven for 20 minutes. Puncture sides of puffs with knife to let out steam. Return to oven for 3 to 5 minutes more. Remove; cool on cake rack. Eat "as is" for cocktail snack or insert small pieces of ham (1 x 2 inches). Makes 24 puffs.

MUSTARD FRUIT SALAD DRESSING

1¼ cups mayonnaise
2 teaspoons spicy brown mustard
1 tablespoon honey
2 tablespoons vinegar

Combine all ingredients. Serve over fruit or vegetable salad. Makes 1½ cups.

MEDITERRANEAN-STYLE FISH PORTIONS

Good cooked outdoors, or in

Mediterranean-style 'fish' portion sandwiches filling

Probably the most interesting and unusual sandwiches of the summer are Mediterranean Style Fish Portion Sandwiches. They're fashioned of frozen, convenient fish portions which are cooked in a hinged wire grill, then tucked into pita bread envelopes with lettuce, tomato slices, a sauce, and a green onion. If pita bread is not available, hamburger buns will do.

Fish portions, high in protein and low in saturated fats, are kept in the freezer until outdoor eating time. The appealing sandwiches may be cooked outdoors or in, easily, quickly, and without problems. The sauces, Dill Fish Sauce and Mediterranean Style Tartar Sauce, are combined in minutes. Both complement the portions nicely.

When pita bread is used, it becomes an envelope so it holds the lettuce, tomato, fish portion, and sauce without any spillage. The sandwich is both luscious and leakproof. When Mediterranean Style Fish Portion Sandwiches are encased in hamburger buns, more care must be taken.

To begin the meal, a cheese dip may be served with assorted raw vegetables. Then the sandwiches, either potato salad or rice pilaf is a delicious accompaniment. Probably the most unusual part of the entire meal is the pita bread, a flat bread used in Middle Eastern and North African countries for about 5,000 years. Some gourmet diners call it Syrian or Lebanese bread.

Both young people and adults like these sandwiches. The cook can select portions of various sizes, being as generous as he or she likes. For hungry outdoor picnickers, a dessert and beverage usually makes the meal complete. Chilled cantaloupe with fresh berries or fresh fruit would be a cooling close, along with iced tea or lemondade.

Luscious and leakproof fish portion sandwiches come to the picnic table on a summer evening and everyone approves. The fish portions are simply delectable and the pita bread is different, delightful and delicious.

Cheese spread

If you're turning to lighter foods such as broiled fish, dress broiled fish with this Deviled Cheese Spread: Mix 2 cups (8 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese with ¼ cup chili sauce, 2 tablespoons prepared mustard and 1 tablespoon prepared horseradish. Spread on broiled fish and broil an additional 1 to 2 minutes or until cheese melts. This makes 1 and 2/3 cups; may also be used for spreading bread or appetizers.

Spreads

Spread that cracker: first beat 2 cups (8 oz.) shredded Swiss cheese with ¼ cup dairy sour cream, 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion, 1 tablespoon chopped pimiento and 4 slices bacon, cooked, drained and crumbled. Place a tablespoon on a round cracker and broil until cheese starts to melt. Yield: 1 and 1/3 cups.

MEDITERRANEAN STYLE FISH PORTION SANDWICHES

- 12 frozen fried fish portions (3 oz. each)
- ¼ cup oil
- Paprika
- 6 Pita Bread, defrosted and cut in half or 12 hamburger buns
- Leaf lettuce
- 12 thin tomato slices
- Dill Sauce or Mediterranean Style Tartar Sauce
- 12 green onions

For outdoor cooking brush fish portions lightly with oil, rinkle with paprika and place in a well-greased, hinged wire grill. Cook about 4 inches from moderately hot coals 6 to 8 minutes or until browned on first side; turn and cook 5 to 7 minutes on second side or until fish flakes easily when tsted with fork. While fish portions are heating, cut pita bread in half and wrap halves or hamburger buns in foil. Place at back of grill or in warming oven to heat. Fill each envelope of pita bread with a lettuce leaf, 1 slice of tomato, a fish portion, the sauce desired, and a green onion. Repeat process until all sandwiches have been prepared. If hamburger buns are used, assemble ingredients on bottom half of bun; cover with bun top. Makes 12 sandwiches, 6 servings.

For indoor cooking heat fish portions as directed on package label.

To heat Pita Bread Defrost frozen bread at room temperature 35 to 40 minutes and cut in half crosswise. Wrap bread in foil and heat slowly on back of grill. When preparing sandwiches indoors, warm bread slightly on a baking sheet in slow oven, 300 degrees F., about 5 minutes.

DILL FISH SAUCE

- 1 cup salad dressing
- ½ cup chopped dill pickle
- ½ cup catsup or chili sauce
- 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
- 1 tablespoon dill pickle juice

Combine ingredients; mix well. Makes about 1½ or 2 cups.

MEDITERRANEAN STYLE TARTAR SAUCE

- 1 cup salad dressing
- 1/3 cup coarsely chopped ripe olives
- 3 tablespoon chopped green onion
- 2 tablespoons drained sweet pickle relish
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- Dash garlic powder
- Dash cayenne

Combine ingredients; mix well. Makes about 1½ cups.

Nutrition 'balls' tangy, crunchy

Seven of 10 homemakers questioned in a national survey consider breakfast the most important, yet most difficult, meal to get family members to eat.

The study, conducted by National Family Opinion, Inc., questioned 1,000 homemakers and found lack of appetite, weight control and boredom with typical breakfast foods as the most common reasons for skipping breakfast.

But, according to nutritionists, the body is hungry for nutrients regardless of appetite after eight to 12 hours without food. Eating breakfast, they say, helps prevent mid to late-morning fatigue and overeating at lunch.

Breakfast should supply from one-fourth to one-third the nutrients recommended for daily consumption. The easiest way is to choose foods daily from each of the four food groups. The four food group system was developed by nutritionists with the U.S. Department of Agriculture to help consumers meet recommended dietary allowances established by the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Academy of Sciences. Groups include milk, meat, vegetables and fruits, and breads and cereals.

A typical breakfast of milk, egg, orange juice and toast is balanced. The egg, because of its protein content, is a meat group food.

But breakfast doesn't have to be traditional to be nutritious. A glass of tomato juice and a grilled ham and cheese sandwich is balanced nutritionally. So is a hamburger patty on a bun with tomato slices and a milk shake. Ice cream or yogurt with fresh fruit and a peanut butter sandwich is another balanced breakfast.

Ready-to-eat or speedy-to-fix foods can keep breakfast easy to prepare. Keep on hand foods like cold milk, ready-to-eat or quick cooking cereals, peanut butter, crackers, cheese or cheese spreads, instant pudding, hard cooked eggs, frozen waffles and pancakes, fresh fruits, and vegetable and fruit juices.

When you can't take time to sit and eat a leisurely breakfast, try having plenty of nutrition balls on hand. They're ideal for on-the-run breakfasts, nutritious snacks and special treats tucked into lunch bags.

The tangy, crunchy balls contain one food from each of the four food groups. Serve them with glasses of cold milk.

NUTRITION BALLS

- ¾ cup smooth or crunchy peanut butter
- 1¼ cup nonfat dry milk
- 1/3 cup granola or bran cereal
- 6 tablespoons frozen orange juice concentrate (thawed but not diluted)

Measure all ingredients into small mixing bowl. Mix well. Shape into 1-inch balls. No cooking is required. Wrap individually or in pairs in plastic wrap or place balls in covered storage container. Refrigerate or freeze. Makes 36 one-inch balls.

You'll love the home baked goodness and the low cost!

FLAVORFUL PORK CHOPS

Bavarian pork chop, kraut bake

Seasonal changes are reflected in food as well as foliage and autumn brings dozens of delicious pork cuts to the market. In the spirit of German "Oktoberfest," Americans celebrate their own harvest festival — "Porkfest." Since these festivals come at a time when the colorful fall fruits and vegetables that go so well with pork are plentiful, the timing is perfect to experiment with new flavor combinations or serve traditional favorites.

Bavarian Pork Chops and Kraut Bake is sure to satisfy larger fall appetites, says Reba Staggs, National Live Stock and Meat Board.

BAVARIAN PORK CHOP AND KRAUT BAKE

Brown 6 to 8 pork chops, cut ¾ to 1 inch thick, in 2 tablespoons lard or drippings in a large frying pan; season with 1 teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Combine 1 can (29 ounces) drained sauerkraut, 2 medium cored and chopped tart apples, 1 medium chopped onion, 1 tablespoon brown sugar and 1 teaspoon caraway seed and place in a 13 x 9-inch baking pan. Place chops on sauerkraut mixture. Cover tightly with foil and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 45 minutes. Uncover and continue baking 15 minutes, or until chops are done. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

MOLASSES BREAKFAST BARS

Molasses bars for breakfast

If yours is a family in perpetual motion, here is a great idea for instant breakfasts. These breakfast bars won't stay around the house long because they're rich and moist. Honey, molasses and mashed banana give them good flavor and nutrition. For extra nutrition, wheat germ, rolled oats and dates lend their goodness, and bananas double in this category too. Bananas contribute vitamins A, C, B1, B2, B6 and niacin as well as calcium, phosphorous and potassium. And they extend the keeping qualities of these bars, so you can make them on the weekend to enjoy during the busy week ahead.

Have a plateful of Old South 'Lasses Breakfast Bars on your table with a pitcher of milk at hand, and every on-the-run family member can easily "grab a bite" without forfeiting nutrition. It will be a tasty bite, too — and may lead to another! All the whole flavors of these nutritious ingredients blend together deliciously. With Old South 'Lasses Breakfast Bars, you can be sure you're getting a good breakfast, even if you don't have the time.

OLD SOUTH 'LASSES BREAKFAST BARS

1 cup butter, softened
1 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
2 eggs
½ cup honey
¼ cup dark molasses
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 large ripe bananas
2 cups white flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup wheat germ
¾ cup rolled oats
¾ cup chopped dates
Powdered sugar

In a large mixing bowl, cream together butter and sugar. Add eggs, beating until light and fluffy. Mix in honey, molasses and vanilla. Mash bananas and stir in. Blend together flour, baking powder and salt; add to banana mixture, blending well. Stir in wheat germ and rolled oats; then fold in chopped dates. Spread batter in a greased 13 by 9 inch baking dish. Bake in a 375 degree oven 35 to 40 minutes until pick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool slightly; sprinkle with powdered sugar. When cool, cut into bars. Makes 32 bars.

Lo-cal dessert

Place a can of sliced canned pineapple in freezer an hour to chill. Serve topped with frozen yogurt ice cream. Blueberry marble, strawberry or lemon are delicious with the pineapple.

Tasty 'tuna' pizza

Don't panic when the kids yell, "Hey Mom, may I invite a couple of friends to stay for supper?"

With the aid of a few basics from the cupboard and your refrigerator shelf, you can please the whole gang and satisfy their ravenous appetites, too.

Here's a pizza with a new touch — "Tasty Tuna Pizza. With biscuit mix, canned tuna, mayonnaise, cheese, and eggs on hand, you're all set to create this nutritional meal in minutes for lunch or supper. Extra zest to accent the tuna is provided by prepared yellow mustard.

To keep the children occupied while the pizza bakes, entertain them with a tray of whimsical vegetables characters. What a great time they'll have dismantling the vegetables and dipping them into the enticing "Dandy Dip" of cream cheese flavored with seasoning mix for sloppy joes. Vegetables were never so much fun.

TASTY TUNA PIZZA

4 cups biscuit baking mix
1 cup cold water
2 cans (7 ounces each) tuna, drained
1 tablespoon instant minced onion
2 tablespoons prepared yellow mustard
¾ cup mayonnaise
2 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
2 cups grated American cheese
Chopped tomatoes, green pepper, and olives, if desired

Mix together buscuit mix and water until dough holds together; knead dough 10 times. Divide dough in half and roll out two circles or pat to fit two medium-size pizza pans. Combine tuna, onion, mustard and mayonnaise; spread over pizza dough. Arrange egg slices and cheese on pizzas and sprinkle with chopped tomatoes, green pepper and/or olives, if desired. Bake in 425 degree oven 15 to 20 minutes. Makes 2 medium-size pizzas.

DANDY DIP FOR VEGETABLES

1 package (8 oz.) cream cheese, softened
1 envelope (1½ oz.) seasoning mix for sloppy joes
½ cup milk

Cut up raw vegetables such as radishes, carrots, cucumber, zucchini, celery

Combine cream cheese, contents of seasoning mix envelope, and milk; blend well and chill. Serve with cut up raw vegetables or create whimsical characters from vegetables pieces held together with food picks. Makes about 1½ cups dip.

A pot roast without the pot? Why not use it for a cookout? Just because the fall is approaching doesn't mean you have to put away your grill. This pot roast, wrapped in foil, can be taken to a campsite or used for a backyard barbecue. It cooks right on the hot coals.

With that in mind, take advantage of this hearty fare; Foiled Pot Roast and Husk Roasted Corn with Home Style Butter will help satisfy ravenous appetites and break menu monotony while everyone enjoys the last of the nice weather.

Nothing could be easier, more economical or delicious than a chuck roast on the grill. The meat is a snap to prepare, with no browning necessary. Just add seasoning, provided by an envelope of sloppy joe seasoning mix, thick sliced onions, a little lemon juice, and meat tenderizer. Then wrap it in foil to seal in the juices and full-bodied aroma.

The ears of corn are also roasted right on the grill, in their husks. Don't forget the Home Sytle Butter. It brings out the tender-sweet flavor of fresh-picked corn on the cob. No one will guess the subtle flavor accent is provided by a touch of mustard and brown sugar blended into seasoned butter.

But never fear, if the weather should attempt to foil your cookout plans, Foiled Chuck Roast can be popped into the oven instead.

FOILED CHUCK ROAST

3½ to 4 pound chuck roast
Meat tenderizer
1 envelope (1½ oz.) sloppy joe seasoning mix
1 medium sized onion, cut in thick slices
½ cup water
Juice of one lemon

Tenderize chuck roast according to instructions on tenderizer bottle using ½ teaspoon tenderizer per pound of meat. Place roast on double thickness of two large sheets of heavy-duty aluminum foil. Sprinkle with contents of seasoning mix envelope and top with onion slices. Combine water and lemon juice; pour over meat. Wrap roast securely in foil so that juices will not escape during cooking. Place directly on ample bed of hot coals, building coals up around sides of package, and cook without turning 1 to 1½ hours depending on heat of fire. The roast may also be cooked in a 425 degree oven for 2 hours or until tender. Makes 6 to 7 servings.

HUSK ROASTED CORN

8 ears corn on the cob (do not remove husks)
Cold Water

Carefully lay back husks and remove corn silk. Smooth husks back into place and tie at tips. Soak ears one or more hours in cold water. Place corn directly on bed of hot coals and roast about fifteen minutes turning frequently to cook all sides. Strip off husks and serve with Home Style Butter Spread.

HOME STYLE BUTTER SPREAD

¼ pound (1 stick) butter or margarine, softened
2 tablespoons prepared mustard
1 teaspoon light brown sugar
1 teaspoon seasoned salt

Combine ingredients using electric mixer or fork. Spread on hot cooked ears of corn. Makes about ½ cup.

Fruit Puffs

For company gatherings or family dinners, these spectacular golden Walnut Fruit Puffs are a VIP dessert made easily. They're cream puffs brimming with a luscious fruited filling and crisp California Walnuts. Just delicately flavor whipped cream with honey or a little light molasses, then spice with nutmeg and ginger. Gently fold in sliced bananas or well drained canned Cling peache slices, along with chopped walnut kernels. Before serving, fill cream puff or eclair hollows with the mixture. Top each serving with a spoonful of filling and walnuts.

Super sandwich

For your own personal super sandwich, pair cheese with a favorite meat. Here are some conbinations you might like to try: Provolone with hard salami; Muenster with salami for beer; Colby with deviled ham; Swiss with smoked or boiled ham; or Colby with New England sausage.

Country omelet is a disguise

What to do with leftover ham and potatoes? Create a savory omelet for a hearty meal anytime of the day.

This "Open-Faced Country Omelet" is tasty, nutritious and a great way to cleverly disguise leftovers.

You can be flexible with this kind of omelet — using leftover cooked bacon, ham or sausage meat and as many cold boiled potatoes as you have on hand.

No matter how you make it, it always tastes good — whether it's breakfast after an active morning of jogging or biking, a Sunday company brunch or a quick dinner for two.

COUNTRY OMELET

2 cups cooked, peeled and sliced potatoes
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
1 tablespoon bacon drippings, butter or shortening
1 cup cooked and diced ham, bacon or sausage
7 large eggs
2 tablespoons milk
1 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
Dash nutmeg
Parsley

Over medium-high heat, brown potatoes and onions in bacon drippings using a 10-inch fry pan; turn occasionally to brown on all sides (about 15-20 minutes). Reduce heat to medium. Sprinkle ham on top. Beat together eggs, milk, salt, pepper, nutmeg; pour over potato mixture; cover. During cooking, occasionally remove cover; tilt pan; slip spatula around side of pan to allow uncooked egg mixture to flow to the bottom. Cook until eggs are set and omelet puffy around the edges (about 10 minutes). Serve from pan or gently slide onto serving plate. Garnish with sprigs of parsley. Cut in pie-shaped wedges. Makes six to eight servings.

Dress omelet

Lightly brown small strips of ham with finely chopped green pepper in a little butter. Add well drained canned pineapple chunks and heat briefly. Sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese and serve over a fluffy omelet.

CABBAGE STUFFED WITH CHICKEN

Stuffed cabbage rolls set

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Mention stuffed cabbage or cabbage rolls and most think of a ground meat filling. Next time your family yens for cabbage rolls try a new stuffing. Here is one that uses chicken or turkey, wheat germ and chopped mushrooms. This is an economical entree you'll want to add to your weekly menu. It has a rich tomato sauce that goes well on the platter with mashed potatoes or creamed corn.

You may want to double or triple the recipe for larger groups, especially for buffet serving.

WHEAT GERM STUFFED CABBAGE ROLLS

8 to 10 large cabbage leaves
¼ cup finely chopped onion
6 tablespoons butter
2 cups chopped cooked chicken or turkey
1 cup soft bread crumbs
½ cup vacuum packed regular wheat germ
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1 teaspoon rosemary
1 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
1 can (3 ounce) chopped mushrooms, undrained
1 can (8 ounce) tomato sauce
½ cup boiling water
Mushroom tomato sauce

Gently pull off 8 to 10 outer leaves on cabbage, loosening at stem end with knife to prevent tearing. Simmer uncovered in boiling water 3 minutes. Drain. Cut tough portion of stem from cabbage leaves. Saute onion in one-fourth cup butter until soft but not brown. Remove from heat. Add chicken, bread crumbs, wheat germ, parsley, seasonings, undrained mushrooms and all but one-third cup tomato sauce. Mix well. Place about one-third cup filling on each cabbage leaf. Fold in edges and roll up. Place in single layer, seam side down, in greased 13 x 9 x 2-inch pan. Add one-half cup boiling water and dot with remaining 2 tablespoons butter. Cover. Bake in 350 degree oven 1 hour. Serve with Mushroom Tomato Sauce. Makes 4 servings.

MUSHROOM TOMATO SAUCE: To reserved one-third cup tomato sauce add 1 (ten and one-half ounce) can condensed cream of mushroom soup and one-fourth cup milk. Heat slowly, stirring constantly until smooth and hot.

Pork steak, bean bake for mealtime 'imagination'

If you're looking for mealtime variety in the meat case, when your eye reaches pork steaks you need look no further.

By using your imagination and providing a little special attention, pork blade steaks are a candidate for many especially appetizing autumn meals, says Reba Staggs, National Live Stock and Meat Board home economist.

The recipe for Pork Steak and Bean Bake is a good example of how these tasty steaks can be used to enhance a savory bean casserole conveniently made from cupboard shelf ingredients.

PORK STEAK and BEAN BAKE

2 or 3 pork blade steaks, cut ½ to ¾ inch thick
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup catsup
2 tablespoons brown sugar
1 tablespoon vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
1 can (16 oz.) pork and beans
1 can (16 oz.) lima beans or butter beans, drained
1 can (15 oz.) kidney or red beans, drained

Brown steaks on both sides in large frying pan, remove and season with 1 teaspoon salt. Add catsup, brown sugar, vinegar and ½ teaspoon salt to pan drippings, stirring to combine. Lightly stir in pork and beans, lima or butter beans and kidney or red beans. Place bean mixture in a Dutch oven or an 11½ by 8-inch baking dish. Place steaks on top of beans, cover tightly and bake in slow oven (325 degrees) for 1 hour. Remove cover and continue baking 15 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

Prescription controls set

FDA requires warning with 'estrogen' drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government, saying estrogen drugs may cause cancer if taken to excess, is requiring that warning brochures be given with every estrogen prescription starting this week.

The Food and Drug Administration says women receiving the drugs must be told in plain language the risks of taking the female sex hormones.

The most serious risk is cancer of the lining of the uterus, FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy said Monday. The risk increases if estrogens are used "too frequently or too long," he said, and can be five to 10 times greater than for a woman who has never taken estrogens.

The odds of developing gall bladder disease requiring surgery are 2½ times as great, he warned.

Five million American women now take estrogen drugs during and after menopause, and Kennedy said he hopes the warning brochure will reduce that number "at least by half."

The drug industry and doctors' groups have opposed the FDA labeling requirement in court, but so far without success.

The FDA first proposed its estrogen warning program in July, with the brochure requirement to take effect Sept. 20. The effective date was pushed back because of the court challenges.

In other health news:

—The House voted overwhelmingly Monday to prevent the FDA from enforcing its proposed ban on saccharin for 18 months. The Senate also has voted for an 18-month postponement, but the two houses must reconcile differences on whether the artificial sweetener should be sold with a warning label.

—The Environmental Defense Fund asked the FDA on Monday to require a cancer warning label on permanent hair dyes that the group said are used by 25 million American women.

Kennedy said the FDA has asked the National Cancer Institute to expedite a study on two suspect chemicals in hair dye, and "we'll take regulatory action if necessary after the results are final." An institute spokeswoman said preliminary data show "the chemicals are positive cancer-causing agents in rats and mice."

—The Agriculture Department said it intends to ban the chemical used to cure bacon, ham and other lunch meats unless manufacturers can prove the substance doesn't cause cancer.

The department is ordering manufacturers to test the preservative, sodium nitrite, to see whether it acts with other substances to form a cancer-causing agent, nitrosamine.

In his news conference Monday, Kennedy called estrogens "valuable drugs with many beneficial purposes." But he said estrogens were not "essential therapy during the menopause, and certainly the least necessary use of estrogens is after menopause." He also said they do not keep skin soft or provide a feeling of youth.

Last year, the FDA instructed physicians to prescribe estrogens in the lowest possible doses for the shortest possible times, and to re-evaluate use of the drug every six months. The brochures for patients repeat that advice. They also warn that estrogens should never be used during pregnancy.

Estrogen drugs also are used to treat certain cancers and as an ingredient in contraceptive pills taken by eight million American women. Kennedy said there is no evidence linking the estrogen used in the pills to cancer.

Estrogens are female hormones produced by the ovaries. Women experience a decrease in their estrogen production during menopause, which usually occurs between the ages of 45 and 55.

Beer dogs and sauerkraut set

Hot dogs go great — any time, any place! There's a secret in a way of cooking and presentation of this seemingly ordinary food, a gastronomic trick which has built a world-wide reputation for the great European sausage makers. And do you know what the secret is? It's simply cooking the hot dogs, and sauerkraut if you like, in beer instead of water!

If that sounds too simple to be true, just try it and compare. You'll never use water again.

Sauerkraut is a standard favorite which responds like magic to a simmering infusion of the subtle herbs and hops and malt in beer. The longer you cook it, the better it gets, but it depends on how crisp or soft you like your sauerkraut.

For a party specialty touch, make your own hot dog buns from a hot roll mix built with beer. You'll never notice the beer flavor, incidentally, so it's safe to have several dishes cooked with beer. All that comes through the menu is the indefinable good taste which beer imparts.

BEER DOGS

Cover desired number of hot dogs with beer. Add 1 sliced onion. Let marinade for a few hours. Heat in beer just below boiling point for 5-8 minutes. Serve hot.

SAUERKRAUT

Place undrained sauerkraut in pan with 2 or 3 strips diced bacon. Cover with beer. Stir in 1 teaspoon sugar. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer uncovered until beer is absorbed.

HOT DOG ROLLS

1 package (13¾ oz.) hot roll mix
1 tablespoon instant minced onion
1 teaspoon paprika
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
¾ cup beer
1 egg

Remove yeast from mix. Place dry ingredients in bowl and mix in onion, paprika and grated cheese. Heat beer in pan until lukewarm. Remove from heat and add yeast. Stir until dissolved. Mix in egg. Add liquid all at once to dry ingredients and mix until stiff dough is formed. Cover and let rise until doubled. Punch down and knead lightly until smooth. Cut dough into 10 pieces. Roll each into 7-inch long rope. Place on cookie sheet and let rise until doubled. Bake at 400 degrees for 12 to 15 minutes. Yields 10 rolls.

Nutrition for public no miracle

By GAYNOR MADDOX

While it won't include a miracle diet or offer a panacea for all human ills, a book to be called "Nutrition for the public," to be published early in 1978 by the American Dietetic Association, will contribute to advancing knowledge about the part modern nutrition plays in the life of man.

The Association is a group of scientifically trained persons skilled in monitoring foods according to their specific function in the body. It is their duty to serve hospitals, schools, extension groups, universities and such. They decided to prepare such a book for the layman.

After screening possible editors, they selected a doctor of education from Columbia Teachers College who is currently associate specialist in Foods and Nutrition at Cook College, Rutgers University, in New Jersey. Editor Audrey Burkhart has had 10 years experience as an extension food specialist.

She is eager and informed. "I'll answer the questions most important to the layman — not what dieticians think are the most important."

The questions about fiber in the diet have indicated a growing fad. "We plan to explain what is known — not guessed at — about fiber.

"People ask about buying some food supplies in health food stores. We warn them against unchecked enthusiasm but do tell them about some of the changes that health food stores have made. Many intelligent people now buy some of their special items. Gone are many of the cranks and health faddists," she explains.

Vegetarianism is another question. "There are many favorable angles to this manner of eating. It is ages old. Except for the confusion it breeds in some households, it can be a thoroughly healthful way of eating.

"Information read by those who believe vitamins can increase energy output has to be debunked, but with patience. Also those who think vitamins will help you lose weight need more facts.

"The revival of home canning of food needs some nutritional warnings. We plan to urge women to follow only the newest rules, not grandma's way. Also, we plan to urge homemakers not to try to can fancy combinations but to buy them at the supermarket.

"We plan to answer questions about salt in the diet and also about sugars.

"There are countless other questions, of course. But one of the most frequently asked is how to lose weight. In general, I think the main cause of these questions is that women want to be slender for cosmetic reasons. But with today's emphasis by physicians and nutritionists on overweight as one of the contributing causes of heart disease and cancer, the desire to lose excess pounds has become more intense."

"Nutrition for the Public" will be published early in 1978 by Harper and Row. Dr. Burkhart is convinced it will be a friend to the puzzled layman.

New role: marathon eaters

Abundance of food is way of life in America

By GAYNOR MADDOX

Despite higher prices, not scarcity but abundance of food is the way of life in America today. To be explicit, it is for those with money. Our lives are saturated with the historical three squares a day, plus the inevitable coffee break and our passion for snack foods. We seem to have assumed the role of marathon eaters.

What most seem to forget is that once past 25, when you reach your optimum weight, you begin physiologically aging. That is a hard fact of life to accept. From then on, weight control becomes a complex problem. You need slightly less food each succeeding year, not more.

There are many things to do about maintaining your youthful figure. But today, let's discuss only two of them. Get out of your chair more often and nibble less.

Most of us eat too much. Many do not get enough physical exercise. We need to flex our muscles more, and to by-pass a few of those snacks. In brief: Calorie control and exercise, fueled by common sense and will power, are the basic forces in any long-term weight-control program. Neither one alone can do the trick. Any flexing of the muscles, great or little, is exercise, and burns up fuel, which is calories.

Restless, energetic people who seem never to stand still burn up more calories than relaxed, placid people. An impatient man who rushes across the room to switch TV channels, burns up several more calories than the fellow in the armchair, with remote control. The woman who drags her market cart home has a smaller amount of excess calories to handle than the woman who orders by phone.

Scientists have calculated that energetic people in the "white collar" brackets may burn up 66 calories an hour more than their "why not take it easy" brethren. Exercise also means activity that involves the whole body, such as walking, jogging, swimming, dancing, tennis, etc. Small overweight persons often complain that though they exercise as regularly as their larger overweight friends, they do not lose as fast as the bigger fellows. That is because in any activity involving the whole body, the calorie use varies with the size of your body.

In other words, the amount of freight aboard determines the amount of fuel (calories) needed to move it. Of course, a small person, desiring to burn up calories faster, could carry extra pounds in a bag when he goes walking. In fact, that has been done.

The main fact to remember is that all forms of physical activity have a calorie cost — the amount of calories used. The calorie cost varies depending on the activity and, to a degree, on the body weight of the person involved.

Androgynous management

NEW YORK (AP) — Interviews with top executives of both sexes show that corporations will both do and look better if they promote women to key executive spots, say two professors in "Advanced Management Journal," a publication of the American Management Associations.

Studies by Suzanne H. Cook and Jack L. Mendelson, professors in the College of Business at Arizona State University, show male values in the business world to be those of "brute force," including "risk, competition and aggressiveness," while female attitudes are "humanitarian," involving concern for "social welfare, honor and loyalty."

In National Sandwich Idea Contest

Dilly beef, turkey louise and ricotta regal sandwich winners

Danish born, Anders Jensen, of Oak Park, Illinois, won laurels today as creator of one of this year's "Top Three" in the National Sandwich Idea Contest. He was awarded $500 cash before a royal gathering at the 22nd annual Coronation Luncheon held at New York City's Regency Hotel, for his "Turkey Louise."

This year's grand prize winner is Wesley N. Pollock of Maryland Heights, Missouri, with his entry, "Dilly Beef." The finalist is Anthony Mangifesti, North Reading, Massachusetts, for his creation, "Ricotta Regal."

As the 1977 Sandwich King, Pollock receives a second $500 and a culinary tour for two anywhere in Europe he chooses.

Jensen, Executive Chef at Nielsen's Restaurant in nearby Elmwood Park, saw his first attempt to win the sandwich crown bid for top honors. His "Turkey Louise" was identified as the perfect sandwich to serve the day after Thanksgiving — or anytime you have the ingredients at hand — turkey, cranberry sauce and oranges. Although not on the menu yet at Nielsen's Jensen expects it to be added very soon.

Jensen began his training in Denmark at Copenhagen's Hotel and Restaurant School, where he received a degree in Food Service and Restaurant Management. He then worked as Sous Chef at the Langeline Pavillion and Assistant Chef at Den Gyldne Fortun Restaurant in Denmark.

About his current position with Nielsens, where he has been for the past four years, Jensen says, "This is a stepping stone to my ultimate goal — operating a restaurant chain."

Jensen participates in many extra curricular activities yielding added recognition. Among these are the Dale Carnegie Management Seminar; Certificate of Appreciation from Triton College, River Grove, Ill.; and a National Restaurant Association Certificate of Cost Control.

Jensen has his own firm — A.J. Consultants — where one of his major interests lies in the development of vegetable sculpture, ice carving and plaster sculptures.

All "Top 20" sandwich recipes are featured in a recipe leaflet distributed widely to both the food service industry and consumers.

The National Sandwich Idea Contest has been seeking out and rewarding creative food service professionals for the past 22 years. This year's sponsors are the National Live Stock and Meat Board, the International Natural Sausage Casing Association, the National Fisheries Institute, and the Wheat Flour Institute, in cooperation with the National Restaurant Association.

Pork Packers

Pork was the main product of America's first meat packer, William Pynchon; and barreled pork was the basis of much of the flourishing export trade with the West Indies from Worcester, Massachusetts, before 1700. Later, at the time the covered wagons moved westward, hogs went with them, foraging for their own food. When the westward moving pioneers became settlers, they used the abundant Indian corn as feed for hogs. This is how the pork industry, as we know it today, was born.

Lime tea 'ice' cool, fruitful

There is nothing quite so refreshing on a hot day as an ice-cold summer drink made with limes. Luscious tropical fruits are well known for their natural, refreshing qualities. And limes, juicy and bursting with flavor, really help beat the heat of summer.

An endless list of cool summer beverages is possible with versatile limes. Limeade is one of the popular favorites. Or, try a lime blender drink by combining lime juice with cream and other fresh fruits. A splash of lime juice also gives new life to traditional summer beverages like ice tea and soft drinks. Lime juice is an especially nice enhancer to diet soft drinks, giving them an extra zip.

"Lime cubes" are a simple way to store fresh lime juice for future use. Simply squeeze lime juice into ice trays and freeze. Next time you're ready to serve a summer cooler, use one or two in place of ordinary ice cubes for a dynamic flavor enhancer.

Limes are generally available year round with peak supplies during the summer months. This year, though, due to last January's freeze in Florida, the '77 peak season has been slightly delayed. Fortunately, we're now enjoying an abundant supply at reasonable prices and the fresh cool taste seems better than ever after waiting.

Because limes are so heavy with juice, even a tiny squeeze will produce a surprising burst of sweet-tart liquid. To get every drop, apply gentle pressure to the lime by rolling it between the palm of your hand and the kitchen counter before you cut and squeeze it. One more bonus with limes — they're seedless? So forget about tedious straining and just squeeze fresh lime wedges directly into drinks, salads, entrees and desserts.

Lime Tea Ice is a summer treat that will bring back memories of childhood snow cones and slushes. This refreshing cooler or dessert combines the marvelous thirst-quenching qualities of tea with the superb flavor of fresh limes. The result is a tempting, icy snack that's a delicious low-calorie alternative to ice cream and sherbet. Attractive to serve and easy to prepare, Lime Tea Ice is a sensational addition to summer fun.

LIME TEA ICE

6 tea bags
3 cups boiling water
1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
¼ cup cold water
1½ cups sugar
6 to 8 limes

Steep tea in boiling water for 5 minutes. Meanwhile, soften gelatin in cold water. Remove tea bags. Stir softened gelatin and sugar into hot tea, until dissolved. Grate 1 lime; then juice enough limes to make 1 cup juice. Stir grated peel and juice into tea mixture. Pour into ice cube trays or shallow pan. Freeze until slushy; then put in mixing bowl and beat smooth. Refreeze until firm. Serve in dessert cups, garnished with wedges of lime. Makes about 1 quart.

Temptation too great

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — What 19-year-old mechanic wouldn't welcome a chance to take the police car he was working on out for a spin?

The Iowa Highway Patrol, however, didn't take kindly to the way Deon Luedtke did it.

Officers said Luedtke picked up a friend and drove the patrol car 25 miles over country highways with red lights flashing and siren blaring.

What's more, the transmission Luedtke had worked on leaked oil to an exhaust pipe and a fire started, but he managed to put it out.

He was arraigned on a charge of operating a motor vehicle without the owner's consent.

It's Reggie . . . Reggie . . . Reggie

Will Grimsley
Associated Press Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — Reggie Jackson, the man who stirred the drink, made it a champagne cocktail. With three magnificently dramatic home runs, he gift-wrapped the New York Yankees' 21st World Series championship.

"I am the straw that stirs the drink," Jackson said before he had ever batted for the Yankees in a major league game. "(Catcher and captain Thurman) Munson can only stir it bad."

Though that comment alienated Munson and touched off the Yankees' soap opera season of conflict and controversy, all was forgotten Tuesday night. Jackson powered New York to an 8-4 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers and gave the Yankees the World Series, four games to two.

"Ah, the taste of victory," Jackson said, swigging a bottle of champagne in the jubilant Yankees locker room. "This symbolizes victory and being champions."

One year after the Yankees suffered World Series disgrace, a four-game sweep by Cincinnati last October, the Yankees were No. 1—the only number acceptable to owner George Steinbrenner.

Steinbrenner, who bought the Yankees in 1973, is the architect of the Yankees' supremely successful season. It was Steinbrenner who spent $2.9 million to bring the free-agent Jackson to New York.

"The next morning, after we were beaten in four straight by Cincinnati, we began working on this year," Steinbrenner said. "I swore it was not gonna happen again.

"Now, we're on top and we're gonna stay there."

More than any other player, Jackson drove the Yankees to the top. The Series' Most Valuable Player with a record-breaking five homers and a Series-leading .450 batting average, Jackson stoked a hot bat in September to fire the Yankees to the American League East Division crown.

All his hitting heroics helped him overcome a season of mental pressure that would crumble a lesser man. First, there was the spring training remark that degraded Munson, the Most Valuable Player in the AL last year.

Soon after the remark appeared in a national magazine, Jackson had his celebrated run-in with Manager Billy Martin on national television. The two proud men argued and nearly came to blows in their dugout in Boston, and the TV cameras recorded every moment.

But Tuesday night was a time for the Yankees to bask in the thrill of their victory and the awe of witnessing Jackson's home runs — one of the most powerful and theatrical feats in World Series annals.

"He beat us single-handedly," said Dodger first baseman Steve Garvey. "I've never seen a performance like that in the World Series."

It was the sun and the moon of superstar performances.

"Guys throw around the word superstar a lot," said Jackson. "Guys like Ruth, DiMaggio, Mays, Clemente. But I can say I had one day like those guys."

What Jackson did was tie Babe Ruth's record of three homers in one Series game. It started as if Chris Chambliss would be the hitting hero as he had been last year in New York's playoff conquest of the Kansas City Royals. Burt Hooton walked Jackson on four straight pitches in the second inning, and saw him score on Chambliss' home run.

Then Jackson took matters into his own hands. He smashed a screaming line drive into the right field stands on Hooton's first pitch to him in the fourth. Then, in the fifth, he sent one from Elias Sosa on a similar fast trip into the right field seats.

"The balls were in. That's how they tried to pitch me all Series," said Jackson. "You can pitch me in, but don't knock on the door and announce it. Even a dummy will adjust and I adjusted."

Charlie Hough, a knuckleball pitcher, was hurling the eighth inning. He threw his first pitch down and over the plate, but the result was the same: a mammoth homer—this time to center field, an estimated 450 feet away.

"Nothing can top this," said Jackson. "Who the hell is going to hit three homers to decide a World Series? Hell, I'm not."

But he did.

In Game 5, Jackson homered on his last at-bat. So he ended up smashing home runs on each of his last four swings. Overall in the Series, Jackson broke records for most homers (5), most runs scored (10), most consecutive homers in two games (4) and most total bases (25).

The total base record for a six-game Series previously belonged to Martin, the former Yankee second baseman.

"That's fantastic that he broke my record," said Martin. "Reggie's a super guy. Next year will be a lot easier for him."

It should also be easier for Martin, given a big bonus earlier Tuesday by Steinbrenner, who was on the verge of firing his fiery manager several times this season.

"Doesn't it feel good?" Steinbrenner asked Martin, wrapping him in a bear hug. "I'm proud for you. This is just the start."

"I'm proud for you, too," said Martin, his eyes moist.

Martin was given a cash bonus, a luxury automobile and a rent-free apartment for bringing the Yankees a world championship and keeping the team together ... at least together enough to win.

"We didn't want winning or losing the Series as the reason for rewarding Billy for the good job he did," said Yankee President Gabe Paul.

"Even the guy who won a million dollars in the lottery can't be as happy as I am," Martin said. "Everything is worthwhile now."

The opposite emotion filled the Los Angeles locker room.

"Great game. You put on quite an exhibition," a somber Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda told Jackson, extending his hand.

So the Dodgers traveled to New York in vain. Their outfielders and relief pitchers in the bullpen were showered with garbage by hostile Yankee fans; Garvey and Dave Lopes received death threats Monday night.

But it still was a wonderful season for the happiness boys from Los Angeles. Their April boom crushed Cincinnati and kept the Reds from a shot at a third straight World Series crown.

"We lived by the long ball all season long and we died by the long ball in the Series," said Lasorda, whose club led the National League in homers and smacked a record-tying nine in the Series, including Reggie Smith's homer Tuesday night.

Smith's third-inning solo homer, his third of the Series, had coupled with Steve Garvey's two-run, first-inning triple to give Los Angeles a brief 3-2 lead. But that was buried under the explosion of Jackson's power; a ninth-inning Dodgers run served only to delay the Yankees' celebration.

"I'm proud of the way the guys battled all year long," said Lasorda, the rookie Dodgers manager.

Mike Torrez, the winning pitcher in the pivotal third game and again in the climactic sixth game, yielded nine hits Tuesday night.

"It was a struggling-type game," said he big right-hander, who, if he remains unsigned, will be eligible for the Nov. 4 re-entry draft. "Reggie was just beautiful. Out of sight."

Both Steinbrenner and Jackson said the world title proves the character of a team that gave itself every opportunity to fail, but refused to do so.

"All that controversial stuff made us stronger," said Steinbrenner, Jackson's biggest booster while Martin was one of Jackson's biggest critics.

"We showed what kind of men we are, what kind of human beings we are," said Jackson. "The Bible says a weak man is he who cannot stand adversity."

In this wacky, yet winning season for the Yankees, no one took adversity's punches and came up swinging better than Reginald Martinez Jackson.

"It's a great feeling," said Jackson, savoring the moment and the end of a long, hard season. "Now I know there's a God in heaven."

Reggie makes things happen

Okay, Reggie, you have proven your point. Let no man say otherwise. You are indeed the straw that stirs the drink. You are the eye of the storm. You are the spark that fires the ignition. You make things happen.

Let it be your monument in history: The ball player who never hit .300 in a regular season yet the man who could always reach back for that special kind of magic that turns paupers into kings.

Even your once-bitter rival, Thurman Munson, had to admit it.

"Without him," said Munson, "we wouldn't have won the pennant. Without him, we wouldn't have won the World Series."

Such is the story of the baseball life of Reginald Martinez Jackson, the Wyncote, Pa., tailor's son whose ability to produce under pressure sparked the Oakland A's to World Championships in 1972, 1973 and 1974.

Now you have done it for the proud and haughty New York Yankees, just as your boss and benefactor, George Steinbrenner III, said you would.

A record five home runs in the World Series, three in one game, four in four official at-bats, 10 runs scored, eight runs batted in, a .450 batting average — an individual performance on level with the immortals.

"The word superstar is overused — Ruth, DiMaggio, Mays, Clemente," you told reporters modestly. "But I can say I had one day like those guys."

Not easy

Indeed you did. But it wasn't easy. Remember all those lonely, frustrating moments during the summer.

You were the "Teacher's Pet." The boss took you in his limousine and showed you the town. He signed you to a $2.9-million contract.

This made you the most unpopular man in the Yankees clubhouse. Munson, the Most Valuable Player of the previous year, got mad when you told a magazine writer that you were "the straw that stirred the drink." You said Munson could only stir it bad.

It was an undiplomatic thing to say, but you are not diplomatic. You say what comes to your tongue. No subtleties. No deviousness. You take the consequences.

The consequences were costly.

Munson refused to shake your hand. Third baseman Graig Nettles made unhappy noises. Players with the same color of dark skin moved their lockers to the other side of the room.

There you sat, alone and brooding, on your locker stool— not liked by the manager and ignored by almost everyone but backup catcher Fran Healy, whose friendship never wavered.

The manager, accustomed to center stage, resented you. He wouldn't bat you cleanup. Once he yanked you in front of a national television audience and, when you objected to the indignity, the two of you almost came to blows in the dugout.

Yet it was you who interceded when the manager was about to be fired. You helped save his job.

Hostile press

It was an agonizing summer.

The fans were goaded by a hostile press. They booed you at every turn. Pressures, even with your princely salary, became almost unbearable. Your father quit coming up from Philadelphia to watch you play. Your mother wouldn't turn on the radio.

Remember how you sat in your loneliness and said to yourself, "Why do I have to take all of this stuff? I have a good job waiting for me outside."

Quitting would have been easy, but it was not your way. It was a word you didn't know. You owed too much to too many, so you stuck it out.

You were "Mister September" in the Yankees' fierce pennant drive. You closed your lips and tightened the grip on your bat. You became the Yankees' sparkplug, and everybody knew it. Your life changed.

And the climax came just before 11 p.m. on a chill Tuesday night when you propelled your third home run of the evening into the black-painted unoccupied bleachers in deep center field.

And out there in center field somewhere, the TV cameras zeroed in on a bronze plaque of the great Babe Ruth. The old Bambino seemed to wear a smile.

Dodgers die by long ball

NEW YORK (AP) — The "Big Dodger in the Sky" finally threw Tom Lasorda a curveball.

"Our pitchers just didn't put the ball where they were supposed to," said the Los Angeles manager, "and our hitters didn't hit the ball the way they were capable of."

Lasorda, who claims to bleed Dodger Blue because of his long emotional attachment to he Los Angeles Dodgers organization, was bleeding more than usual Tuesday night after watching the New York Yankees tear apart his reputable pitching staff.

"We lived by the long ball all season and we died by it in the World Series," said Lasorda after the Yankees hit four home runs, three by Reggie Jackson, to bury the Dodgers 8-4 and win the 1977 World Series four games to two.

"I kept hoping and praying that we could get something started ... but it just wasn't to be," said Lasorda, who in the past had whimsically invoked "the Big Dodger in the Sky" for supposedly supernatural help.

Actually, the only thing supernatural that happened Tuesday night appeared to be Jackson's performance. It was the talk of the stunned Dodger locker room.

"I think it was a night when he released a lot of his emotional tension," said Dodger first baseman Steve Garvey, referring to Jackson's season of controversy in New York. "It sure was some performance. I have never seen one like it in my life in a championship game situation."

Lasorda agreed.

"Let's put it this way," said Lasorda. "No one has hit three homers in one World Series game since 1928, so it has to be a hell of a performance. I have never seen any better in a World Series."

While impressed with Jackson and the Yankees as a whole, the Dodgers would not let the loss of a World Series overshadow their brilliant season.

"Nobody on the Dodgers should feel ashamed," said third baseman Ron Cey, "Nobody believed in us at the start of the year, but we proved we were a great ballclub. You have to give credit where credit is due, the Yankees were able to make all the right plays. Their pitchers made the good pitches, and their hitters got the big hits. I know we'll be back next year."

Garvey and Lasorda expressed similar pride in defeat.

"The thing was we never quit, even in the ninth and we were losing by five runs," said Garvey. "We continued to give 100 per cent. That's typical of this Dodger team."

"I'm very proud of this team and the things that it's accomplished this year," said Lasorda. "Whatever we did, we exemplified the character of a true Dodger team, and many people have told me that our players had a lot of class both on and off the field."

Garvey only wished that the script would have had a Hollywood ending for the Dodgers.

"It's an empty feeling," said Garvey. "It's like writing a book without a climax ... but we'll be back."

Loyal fans meet returning team

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More than 200 Dodger fans turned out in the early morning darkness today to sing "Yankee Doodle Dodgers" and greet the returning team.

Observers at Los Angeles International Airport said the team, which lost the World Series to the Yankees and Reggie Jackson Tuesday night, seemed to be cheered by the sight of the faithful fans.

The crowd treated the weary team to a song that sounded something like "Yankee Doodle Dodgers" when the plane landed at 3:45 a.m. PDT.

Kareem flattens Benson

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Kent Benson will remember his first National Basketball Association regular season game — that is, he may when teammates reconstruct it for him — as the night he took Kareem Abdul-Jabbar right out of the game.

However, Benson did it the hard way. Abdul-Jabbar, reacting to an elbow thrown hard to his midsection by Benson, floored the Milwaukee Bucks' rookie center with one wicked right cross to the eye 2:09 into play Tuesday night.

Abdul-Jabbar was ejected and Benson, who incurred a mild concussion, bruises and lacerations, was sent to Lutheran Hospital for X-rays of his badly swollen eye area. The Bucks, apparently missing Benson less than the Los Angeles Lakers missed the NBA's reigning Most Valuable Player, went on to a 117-112 season opening victory.

Brian Winters poured in 26 points for the Bucks, while rookie Marques Johnson threw in three spectacular baskets in a fourth quarter spurt as Milwaukee outscored the Lakers 9-2 for a 103-93 lead with 4:21 to play.

But, as exciting as Johnson was — the 6-foot-7 former UCLA All-American sank 10 of 17 field goal attempts, scored 21 points, snared 12 rebounds and blocked two shots — his exhibition and the Bucks' charge from a 10 point deficit late in the first half were anti-climactic after the Abdul-Jabbar vs. Benson scrap.

Films showed the 6-foot-11, 245-pound Benson, who had said Monday he planned to push and shove Abdul-Jabbar, hurt the brilliant Laker center by elbowing him in the midsection as they jockeyed for position near the Los Angeles basket.

Abdul-Jabbar, wincing, momentarily doubled up in pain and walked away from the area to catch his breath. Then he abruptly strode back toward Benson and lashed out. Benson collapsed to the floor as the capacity crowd of 10,938, angry and astonished, stood and loudly booed Abdul-Jabbar.

Benson staggered up to a sitting position after several seconds and was examined by Bucks' physicians. They helped him to his feet, but he almost immediately sagged back to the floor and sat in a daze for several minutes.

He eventually was escorted to the locker room, and spoke to reporters there late in the third quarter.

"Coming up the floor, Kareem was elbowing me," he said. "We got back down the floor and I elbowed him back. I tried to play defense, and the next thing I got was hit in the face. That's all I got to say."

It was expected that Benson, the first player chosen in the NBA college draft last June, would not play in the Bucks' game at Denver tonight.

The 7-foot-2, 235-pound Abdul-Jabbar hurriedly dressed and left the arena after his ejection.

"He (Benson) just hauled off and threw an elbow into my gut, right around the solar plexus. He just hauled off and hit me," Abdul-Jabbar said.

"I was thinking about the fact I can't let him do that," he said. "If it's an accident, that's one thing. But if someone deliberately tried to hurt you, that's something else. I've been played rough before by a lot of people. You've seen here what people get away with."

Knicks 120, Kings 113

Willis Reed's coaching debut was a success as Earl Monroe poured in 27 points on 12-for-16 shooting and the Knicks compiled a torrid .551 field goal percentage. Scott Wedman led Kansas City with 29.

Reed said after the game that he likes coaching.

"I feel good, I don't have any bruises, I'm not banged up, I'm not tired — at least not physically. But mentally, emotionally — that's something else," the new coach noted.

Bulls 91, Cavaliers 88

Artis Gilmore scored 34 points and Mickey Johnson added 22 points and 19 rebounds for the Bulls, who held off Cleveland comebacks which moved the Cavaliers within one point three times in the fourth period.

Walt Frazier scored 20 points in his Cleveland debut, one less than Campy Russell, the club's high scorer.

"I didn't like my team tonight," said Cleveland's candid coach, Bill Fitch. "We played like an old man's team, and I don't like that."

Pistons 110, Nets 93

Detroit took a 57-36 first-half lead and coasted past the Nets behind Ralph Simpson's 23 points and Bob Lanier's 22 points in 28 minutes. Bird Averitt had 23 for the Nets.

Suns 100, Warriors 83

Alvan Adams scored 12 of his 27 points in the first 10 minutes of the third quarter, when Phoenix moved out to a 19-point lead, and the Warriors never threatened. Rookie Walter Davis added 20 points for the Suns, who held Golden State star Rick Barry to just six points. Sonny Parker and Phil Smith were high for the Warriors with 18 each.

Wolfpack defense a balanced unit

By MIKE BROSSART
PB Staff Writer

Before the 1977 football season began, Claremont High coach Esper Keiser said his main concern was improvement on defense, the weak link in the Wolfpack's chain last year.

After five games, it appears that he can stop worrying about that aspect of the game.

The 'Pack defensive unit ranks as the best in the valley so far. Claremont has surrendered just 27 points for an average of 5.4 per game.

"That's sure a lot better than last year," said Keiser, "when we gave up 71 points in our first two games (against Bonita and Glendora).

"We're just playing very basic offense . . . nothing fancy. It's been a real pleasant surprise for us."

Keiser has trouble singling out a player or two who've contributed more than the rest.

"We have kind of a 'no-name' defense," said the coach. "It's just a situation where there's 11 of them and if you watch them on film everybody has a hand in it. Everybody's doing his job."

In fact, the Claremont coaches have chosen six different defensive players of the week so far.

Tackle Robert Villanueva was picked in the season-opening shutout over Bonita; safety Scott McBride and linebacker Fred Sawyers shared the honor in a 14-3 loss to Glendora, when no offensive player of the week was named; tackle Neil Andreson and end Elias Contreras were both named in a 7-6 loss to Ganesha; two offensive players were chosen in a 21-6 win over Pomona and, last week, defensive back Scott Kegans was judged outstanding in a shutout over Montclair.

According to Keiser, any one of his remaining five defensive starters — nose guard Mike Sevilla, end Gordon Descombes (only a sophomore), linebacker Rusty Harrison, back Jeff Mace and safety Steve Tipping — is liable to be the team's top defensive player in any future game.

Hollypark chairman wins

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A bitter months-long proxy fight at Hollywood Park has ended with election of a slate led by Board Chairman Vernon O. Underwood and Mrs. Marjorie L. Everett, the racetrack's largest single shareholder.

The slate captured 58 per cent of the vote Tuesday to decisively beat a five-man board audit committee led by Charles B. "Tex" Thornton, who heads Litton Industries Inc. of Los Angeles, and Howard Keck, president of Superior Oil Co. of Houston.

An outside vote-tabulating firm, Corporation Trust Co., gave the Underwood-Everett slate 1,036,160 votes and the Thornton-Keck slate 749,498. The dissidents received roughly 42 per cent of the 1,785,658 votes declared valid.

Results were announced by Underwood at a meeting at the Inglewood race track attended by some 50 stockholders and track employes and the incoming board. There are about 5,000 shareholders.

Bid made for Caliente

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — The state of Baja California and a group of Mexican businessmen are negotiating to buy the privately owned Caliente Racetrack, says Baja California Governor-elect Roberto De la Madrid.

However, De la Madrid said, he will make no further statement on the situation until after his Nov. 1 inauguration in the Baja California capitol of Mexicali.

The horse and dog track is supervised by the Mexican government, which is involved in the talks, since it oversees the operations of all race tracks in Mexico, De la Madrid said.

The governor-elect denied that San Diego businessman John Alessio is involved in the negotiations. But De la Madrid declined to rule out Alessio as a possible manager of the track, a post he once held.

De la Madrid, former director of the National Lottery, said this year the lottery was negotiating to purchase the track as part of a bid to introduce legalized gambling in Mexico.

Duran, Esteban to fight

NEW YORK (AP) — Roberto Duran of Panama and Esteban de Jesus of Puerto Rico will fight in January to determine who is the true lightweight champion of the world, promoter Don King announced Tuesday.

Duran is recognized as champion by the World Boxing Association while De Jesus is considered champ by the Word Boxing Council.

A spokesman for King said the fight will be held Jan. 14 either at Las Vegas, Nev., or New Orleans and will be televised nationally by CBS.

It will be the third meeting between the two fighters.

De Jesus knocked Duran down in the first round and outpointed him in a 10-round nontitle fight in New York's Madison Square Garden in 1972, the year Duran won the championship by stopping Ken Buchanan of Scotland in 13 rounds. It was Duran's only loss against 60 pro victories, 50 of them by knockout.

'Pack defense has balance

"It's a real balanced crew — we don't have anybody making 40 tackles a game," Keiser said. "As long as they keep improving every week the way they have been we'll be all right.

"Our defense will be tested this week by Garey," the Claremont coach continued. The 'Pack will host the Vikings Friday night at Citrus College.

"Garey is overall the fastest team in the San Antonio League," said Keiser. "(Running back Morris) Cole and (wide receiver David) Forte are both track stars. (Doug) Brissette is mighty quick too and (Elijah) Turner is awfully fast for his size (215 pounds).

"It's hard to defend against that kind of speed because all you have to do is make one mistake and they hurt you."

The Vikings are defending co-champions of the league but another loss would probably knock them out of the title picture this year. Garey is 1-2 in SAL play, but the losses were to co-leaders Chino and Damien.

Other SAL games Friday night will find Pomona at Chino, Upland at Damien and Ganesha at Montclair.

Fortunately, two players who looked as though they might have been inured seriously in last week's games are doing fine.

Pomona's John Bullock and Montclair's Todd Dahl were each removed from the field by stretcher and then ambulance. Bullock had the wind knocked out of him and was unable to breath for a moment, but should be able to play Friday. Dahl suffered a jammed neck but is also expected to be back in action this week.

Gladstone is big surprise

By RAY NELSON
PB Correspondent

A current comparison of this week's Hacienda League standings with the pre-season outlook would show little, if any, correlation.

Whereas Walnut and Royal Oak were expected to be the top two contenders for the league crown, only the former has shown any signs of living up to its forecast. Instead of Royal Oak, a surprising Gladstone team shares the Hacienda top spot with the Mustangs with an identical 3-0 league record.

The Mustangs have utilized a balanced offense and a staunch defense to sweep through the first five weeks of the 1977 campaign with an unblemished 5-0 overall slate.

Steve Green, the senior quarterback who most recently engineered Walnut's 77-0 annihilation of Sierra Vista, has provided the Mustangs with a strong passing game.

Gladstone has swept by such Hacienda foes as Sierra Vista and Ontario, before upsetting Royal Oak last weekend.

The Gladiators are paced by signal-caller Jeff Wirth's throwing arm and the rushing skills of Don Sanderlin.

Ontario and Royal Oak currently share the second spot in the Hacienda, both at 2-1. The Romans, however, hold a 2-3 overall slate while the Jaguars are 4-1.

Hacienda

	League w	l	pf	pa	Overall w	l
Gladstone	3	0	68	20	3	2
Walnut	3	0	139	14	5	0
Ontario	2	1	43	48	4	1
Royal Oak	2	1	45	22	2	3
Alta Loma	1	2	36	48	2	3
San Dimas	1	2	40	64	1	4
Bonita	0	3	7	49	0	5
Sierra Vista	0	3	18	131	0	5

Last week's results
Walnut 77, Sierra Vista 0
Ontario 12, Alta Loma 7
San Dimas 13, Bonita 0
Gladstone 7, Royal Oak 2

Friday's games
Walnut vs. Alta Loma at Chaffey College, 7:30 p.m.
Bonita at Sierra Vista, 7:30 p.m.
Gladstone vs. San Dimas at Bonita High, 7:30 p.m.
Royal Oak vs. Ontario at Chaffey High, 7:30 p.m.

The Jags, while scoring only 43 points this season and giving up 48, have also been somewhat of a surprise. A lack of numbers on the Ontario roster was expected to be the Jaguar's downfall this year.

However, mainly due to the running combination of Tommy Jefferson and Albert Newman, in addition to QB Sonny Medina, they stayed at the top of the league before being stopped by Gladstone.

Jefferson, despite being stymied the last two weeks, has gained 615 yards in 1977 on 102 carries. The junior rusher gained only 90 yards in both of his last two contests combined, seeing action only in the first quarter against the Jags' last opponent, Alta Loma, because of a sprained ankle.

Bringing up the rear of the league are San Dimas, Alta Loma, Bonita, and Sierra Vista.

With the burden of having only two starters returning from last season's championship team in Perry Aris and Mike Nunley, the Saints were expected to have few bright hopes.

However, Don Warhurst's squad has shown improvement and registered their first triumph last week by blanking Bonita.

Quarterback Von Suchanek has been, according to the Saints' head coach, the most pleasant surprise. His passing arm has provided San Dimas with a balanced offensive attack.

Suchanek's favorite receiver this season has been Tom Lloyd, who has garnered 24 receptions for 280 yards and two touchdowns.

Alta Loma, despite getting the services of quarterback Jeff Holloday back, has seen its record fall to 1-2 in league and 2-3 overall.

Bonita (0-5), while holding opponents to just 49 points on the year, has had trouble scoring. Bobby Clark's three-yard run in the fourth quarter against Royal Oak (in the Bearcats' fourth game of the season) has been the only score Bonita has been able to muster.

The Bearcats will be looking to escape the Hacienda cellar Friday night when they travel to Sierra Vista, which also sports an 0-5 overall mark.

'Pack netters still perfect

The Claremont High girls tennis squad kept its perfect San Antonio League record intact Tuesday with an easy 16-2 win over visiting Garey High.

The CHS netters are now 5-0 in SAL matches. The Claremont J.V. squad is also 5-0 after having bumped off Garey 6-0.

The Wolfpack's number one singles player, Karen Claussen, won all three of her matches to pace CHS past Garey. The Claremont number one doubles team of Shanna and Diane O'Brien also won all three of their matches.

Claremont will continue SAL play on Thursday as it will host Chino.

Chaffey, five others in running for JRB

LOS ANGELES — With the football season at the halfway point six California teams and a quartet of out-of-state elevens still boast perfect records in their quest for a bid to the Jr. Rose Bowl Game Dec. 10 in Pasadena.

Fullerton has a 6-0 record and has been ranked number one on the nation most of the season. A pair of Metro Conference giants, Pasadena and Long Beach, also are unbeaten, as is Southern Cal Conference entry Santa Monica. Mission Conference entry Chaffey and Taft, which plays a free-lance schedule.

The out-of-state contention found Jones, Miss. edging Gulf Coast 7-6 last week to up its record to 7-0. Navarro of Texas also won last weekend to move to a 6-0 record, while Minnesota powerhouses Rochester and Golden Valley also are unbeaten.

Mesa Community College of Arizona is also unbeaten, but has been tied once.

Tickets for the 23rd renewal of the Junior Rose Bowl Game are now on sale at most southland community colleges, and also at all Mutual and Ticketron Agencies and at the Pasadena Jaycee office at 181 S. Los Robles.

Hall of Fame pitcher Robin Roberts is the all-time "gopher ball" king with 502 home runs deliveries.

3 racquetball duos win club's first tourneys

Claremont Tennis Club has its first racquetball doubles champions in three events.

Bruce Heimlich and Mark Schaffner teamed to win the men's title in the club's recent first annual doubles championships, defeating finals opponents Larry Ryals and Remi Tremblay, 21-16, 21-13.

Ryals was bidding for his second club crown, having won the singles championship earlier this year.

In the women's competition, Billie Oglesby and Doreen Ramsey finished at the top with a 21-18, 21-16 triumph over Bylle Whedbee and Sheryl Matlock.

Jim and Robin Borden earned the mixed doubles title by dropping Jim McJoynt and Billie Oglesby, 21-14, 21-18.

DRIVE THE 1978 RABBIT.

It's just a wonderful car.
We had an advantage: we started with a wonderful car and made it even better.
Over a million people all over the world have been impressed enough to buy them.
What's so impressive?
Easy. If you trade up to a Rabbit from a Mercedes-Benz 280E, believe it or not you'll get better acceleration.†
If you trade up to a Rabbit from a Cadillac Seville, you'll get more trunk space. And there are 32 cars you can trade up to a Rabbit for more people space.*
The '78 Rabbits look better than ever, too. Handsome metallic colors. Touches of chrome here and there to make them even snappier.

The biggest news of all for '78 can't be seen. And barely heard. We've refined the Rabbit's fuel-injected engine to make it quieter and more efficient.
Once we were famous for making a car that looked ridiculous.
Now we make one that makes the others look ridiculous.

Trojans, Irish gear for traditional rivalry

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Sure, we're going to be nervous going into South Bend to play Notre Dame," said Southern California Coach John Robinson. "But so will they, 'cause they've got to play us."

Robinson is a coach who enjoys the big games, and, if Saturday's nationally televised renewal of the tradition-steeped rivalry between the Trojans and Irish is typical, it will be a war.

"The football games between these two schools have been some of the greatest of all time," Robinson said. "The rivalry and all the outside excitement makes it special, then you add to that the fact that this game has players like Ross Browner, Willie Fry and Luther Bradley going against Charles White, Rob Hertel and Randy Simmrin.

"If the game were played in parking lot P lit up by automobile headlights, it would be a great one," Robinson said.

"It's going to be the most physical game in the country. It's a meeting of two big, fast clubs with the same physical philosophy," the USC coach continued.

"Kaboom! A lot of kaboom, a lot of big guys running into each other."

The game will pit fifth-ranked USC's varied and explosive offense — spearheaded by tailback White, quarterback Hertel and wide receiver Simmrin — against 11th-rated Notre Dame's rugged and veteran defensive corps. Outland Trophy winner Ross Browner and Willie Fry rank as the top defensive end duo in the nation, and cornerback Luther Bradley is also one of the country's best.

The Irish defense has been particularly successful against the rush this fall, allowing no touchdowns and a total of just 390 yards as Notre Dame has posted a 4-1 mark.

Southern Cal, 5-1, also has a good defense, led by tackle Walt Underwood and safety Dennis Thurman.

The game being played in South Bend might give Notre Dame a slight edge, but Robinson said the vocal Irish fans aren't what he's worried about.

"What makes it so tough in South Bend," Robinson said, "is not the stadium or the atmosphere or the gremlin dancing on the sidelines.

"It's the Notre Dame football players. They're pretty doggone good."

The weather in South Bend is expected to be some 30 degrees colder than what the Trojans are accustomed to, but Robinson said that shouldn't make much difference.

"I don't really expect it to be all that cold," Robinson said. "But we'll do the best we can to protect ourselves and prepare...and then forget it, because if it's cold for us, it'll be just as cold for them."

Namath must get used to sidelines

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The starting days as quarterback for the great Joe Namath most probably are at an end.

He'll be on the sidelines when the Los Angeles Rams battle the Minnesota Vikings in the nationally televised National Football League game Monday night, just as he was last Sunday.

There is a big difference.

Young Pat Haden, the starter for the Rams in the latter part of 1976, was the starter against New Orleans reportedly because of a swollen Namath knee that kept him out of a couple of practice sessions.

This week Namath can practice all the way, but the 24-year-old Rhodes Scholar Haden still gets the call and will do the play calling. Namath is the backup man.

Asked about switching to Haden after the 34-year-old Namath started the first four regular NFL games, Coach Chuck Knox told newsmen Tuesday that last week Namath had a sore knee that kept him from some practice and also "We felt we needed a little change."

As for this week, Knox said, "Haden is starting because he played well Sunday" when Los Angeles downed New Orleans 14-7.

The Rams, winners of the NFC West division title the past four seasons, currently are 3-2. In the last start by Namath, who became a free agent for this season after 12 campaigns with the New York Jets, the Rams were upset by the Chicago Bears 24-23. Haden came into that one in the final minute and directed a touchdown drive.

Namath said he was all right physically to start against New Orleans and personally felt the coaching staff just wanted to make a change. He had shared the quarterback job with Haden in the preseason and was the choice to start the regular campaign.

With Broadway Joe at the helm, the Rams were 2-2, losing to Atlanta and the Bears while beating San Francisco and Philadelphia.

In those four, Namath hit 50 of 107 pass attempts for a 46.7 percentage, 606 yards and had five interceptions — four by Chicago.

Haden is 12-of-22 for 235 yards, a 54.5 percentage with one interception.

The former University of Southern California Rose Bowl star also gives more mobility at the quarterback position since he can run where Namath cannot because of gimpy knees that have undergone five operations

So it appears that unless Haden is hurt, the blond scholar will be operating the offense. And Knox indicated that the plan of having the quarterback call his own signals will continue. The men on the field called the plays in the preseason but Knox had the coaches calling them in the regular season opener against Atlanta. He returned the duty to Namath in the second game.

For the past three seasons, the plays had been sent in from the bench.

Haden operates on Monday against the team that faced him a year ago in his first NFL start. With James Harris and Ron Jaworski both injured, the job went to Haden in last year's regular season battle against the Vikings. In overtime it was a 10-10 tie. He also started the NFC championship game won by Minnesota 24-13.

In addition to naming Haden, Knox announced that middle linebacker Jack Reynolds would be activated for the Minnesota game. A regular last year, Reynolds has had contract difficulties and was traded. But NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle negated the trade and returned the defensive star to the Rams. With contract difficulties settled, Reynolds has rejoined the club.

Jim Youngblood will start at the middle linebacker spot, as he has all this season, but to make room for Reynolds, the Rams released Rick Kay, a four-year veteran.

Paterno wins big in life

DANVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Joe Paterno has a reputation for winning the big ones — the Orange Bowl, the Cotton Bowl. But the Penn State coach's greatest victory came this week when his 11-year-old son opened his eyes and smiled.

Paterno, one of the nation's foremost college football coaches, was not there last Saturday when his 10th-ranked Nittany Lions beat Syracuse. He was anxiously pacing the halls of the Geisinger Medical Center here, where his son David lay near death.

Inside the intensive care ward, doctors worked frantically to save his son. Outside, Paterno prayed, comforted his wife, Sue, and reaffirmed his commitment to family over football.

"It took a maximum effort to save him," said Dr. Henry Hood, chief of the medical center's neurosurgery department. "It took all the skills, techniques and equipment, but he responded."

David Paterno, a sixth grader, fractured his skull after falling from a trampoline at school Friday, the day before his father's team faced the game at Syracuse.

The oldest of five Paterno children, David remained in serious condition Tuesday, but he regained consciousness and smiled at his parents. The boy's prognosis is good, but it could be weeks before the full extent of his injuries are known.

The accident created a personal and professional dilemma for Paterno. National rankings were at stake and a post-season bowl bid might be in the balance.

But Paterno knew he could not be in Syracuse. Even the crowds, the excitement, and a chance for his 106th career win could not sway him from what he values most — his family.

The Nittany Lions escaped with a 31-24 win. It was the first time in 12 years as head coach that Paterno was not roaming the sidelines on game day.

Paterno returned to Penn State Tuesday, shortly after his son came out of a coma. He spent most of the day with his coaches and players, preparing for Saturday's game against West Virginia.

The Paternos value their privacy and refused to discuss their son's condition.

"He has always assigned the highest priority to his wife and family," Hood said.

It's a Racquet

Something's got to give in Claremont leagues

IT'S CROWDED AT THE TOP in all five of the Claremont city tennis leagues. There are two-way deadlocks for first place in the men's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles leagues, a three-way tie heads the women's doubles ladder and five women's singles players entered the week in a dead heat for the lead.

John Moore and Dennis Robbie have perfect 56-point totals after four weeks of men's singles action and will square off this Saturday to break their standoff. Behind them in the standings are Bob Shamah and Ralph Spaulding, tied at 48 each, and George Morgan and Bob Roser, 46 each.

The men's doubles leaders are the unbeaten teams of Dave Waldman-Bill Grist and Phil Banks-John Rutter, and they'll clash for sole possession of first place Saturday. Behind the leaders' 56 points are Bill and Ed Wojtkowski, 53; Jack Verheyden and Bruce Manheim, 50; and Steve Stires and Wes Davis, 48.

In mixed doubles Rick Pawley and Pat Turner will have a Saturday engagement with their co-frontrunners, Jim and Lynne Oros. With a perfect 56 points, these duos are trailed by Herb and Kate Hoskins, 53; Bob and Sylvia Connolly, 50; and Jerry Baker and Florence Adams, 49.

Topping the women's A doubles standings after three weeks are the teams of Audrey Bates and Mary Lane, Helen Mayne and Geri Johannsen and Ann Baker and Penny Maag, all unbeaten with 42 points. Sue Reed and Nancy Conger rate fourth with 39 and Roxie Hanseth and Wanda Cunningham have 39.

Moving into the third week of Tuesday women's singles competition, five players had won their first two matches: Joyce Schaffer, Sylvia Connolly, Irene Himes, Debbie Spaulding and Phyllis Douglas.

THE DEFENDING CHAMPS have advanced to the semi-finals of this year's doubles championships at the Claremont Tennis Club but two other prominent tandems are out of the running. Perennial winners Stan Clark and Chuck Anderson posted a straight-set conquest of Kurt Dietel and Gerry Gollin last weekend to gain their place in the semis action scheduled for Saturday. But upsets stunned the Jim Lucke-Charles Zetterberg and Dave Click-Ray Reinhard duos, as Rick Roper and Jack Smith edged Lucke and Zetterberg, 7-6, 3-6, 6-3, and Mike Gozansky and Al Bertram ousted Click and Reinhard, 7-6, 6-7, 6-2.

Roper and Smith will oppose Clark and Anderson in the round of four while Gozansky and Bertram face a quarterfinals test against Paul and Carl Skvarna. Another quarters encounter matches Straight Clark and Geoff Clark against Pete Pollock and Dr. C. Balakrishnan. Both semi-final contests are scheduled for 11 a.m. Saturday and the finals will be played at 11 a.m. Sunday.

CITRUS COLLEGE will stage two two-day tournaments for C players on the successive weekends of Oct. 29-30 and Nov. 5-6. Events will include men's singles and doubles, women's singles and doubles and mixed doubles.

Entry deadline is Thursday and the fees are $6 for singles and $8 per doubles team. The college's physical education department, 18824 E. Foothill Blvd., Azusa, will provide entry forms. Tournament director is Citrus tennis Coach Mike Meissenburg.

LEA ANTONOPLIS this week is back in England, the scene of perhaps the major triumph in her young career. Early last summer, she won the Wimbledon junior girls championship over an international field. Now, the hard-hitting 18-year-old from Glendora is in London as part of a five-member team of U.S. girls competing against a counterpart British group which includes Sue Barker. The annual competition is for women 21-and-under. Lea took time out from her freshman classwork at USC to make the trip.

WORLD TEAM TENNIS, its latest controversy and its prospects came under scrutiny in a survey conducted by It's a Racquet during the Island Holidays Pro Tennis Classic at the Royal Lahaina Tennis Ranch on the Hawaiian island of Maui.

The controversial issue was supplied during the U.S. Open at Forest Hills by Bjorn Borg's mentor, Lennart Bergelin. He claimed that the rigors of playing a WTT schedule were responsible for Borg's shoulder injury that forced him to default in the Open.

"Funny," Tom Gorman, player-coach with the Sea-Port Cascades this year, responded in Hawaii, "Bergelin didn't say anything about team tennis when Borg won Wimbledon earlier in the summer. And he didn't say anything about the time Borg was injured in a tournament before Wimbledon two years ago when he wasn't even playing team tennis.

"It's sour grapes, that's what it is. Injuries happen, whether it's team tennis or a tournament."

Gorman, whose team will play as the Seattle Cascades entirely in that city next year, says WTT can have a brighter future only by recruiting the top men players, including Connors and Guillermo Vilas.

"We're talking about maybe six players," Gorman said. "Look, what it really comes down to is money. The owners are going to have to put it up to get the players."

But Cleveland Nets player-coach Marty Riessen doesn't think it will happen and, in fact, doubts his own team will be able to retain star player Borg. "I don't know whether he's going to sign for another year or not, but I don't think he is."

As for Bergelin's statement, Riessen fumed aloud, "He was wrong. It wasn't team tennis that caused the injury at all. I like Lennart very much, but he made a terrible mistake. He never wanted Borg to play team tennis."

Still another viewpoint on the stress of WTT vs. tournament tennis was advanced by Vijay Amritraj, a former Los Angeles Strings player who skipped WTT this past season. "It depends on the player," said the affable veteran from India. "If he's a good player who usually gets into the semi-finals of a tournament, then tournament tennis would be more of a strain than team tennis. But if he's the kind of player who doesn't get past the first or second round, then obviously team tennis is more of a strain."

As for his own attitude toward WTT, Amritraj was all smiles. "I like team tennis, I really do, even though I didn't play this past season. I may play it next year."

JIMMY CONNORS' victory in the Island Holidays tournament boosted the 1976 world's champ into a solid position among contenders for places in the Colgate Masters in January. The eight players heading the Grand Prix points standings qualify for the big event at New York's Madison Square Garden and Connors now ranks sixth, thanks to the 100 points he picked up in Hawaii.

If he ends up in the Masters, as he apparently hopes to do, he'll likely have another shot at Guillermo Vilas and Bjorn Borg, the players who derailed him in the finals of the year's two biggest tournaments, Vilas winning at Forest Hills and Borg at Wimbledon. Vilas ranks first on the Grand Prix list, and Borg is third, with Brian Gottfried second. Below the top three is a tightly bunched group, Raul Ramirez, Manuel Orantes, Connors, Roscoe Tanner, Harold Solomon, Phil Dent and Eddie Dibbs, vying for the final five places.

THE WOMEN'S PHASE of Colgate-sponsored action will have its climactic fling in Southern California Nov. 1-6. The Mission Hills Country Club at Palm Desert will be the site of the Colgate Series Championships, which, like the Masters, will be contested among eight point leaders.

Chris Evert is far ahead of this field, and the next three players in line, Virginia Wade, Martina Navratilova and Betty Stove, also are assured of qualifying for the final $250,000 event. Kerry Reid, Dianne Fromholtz, Sue Barker, Mima Jausovec, Wendy Turnbull, Billie Jean King and Laura DuPont are in a close skirmish for the other four spots.

Rangers drop PCSL game

The Foothills United Rangers dropped a 4-2 decision to the visiting South Bay Vikings recently in Pacific Coast Soccer League Division 4 action.

James Altherr and Aaron Priscock scored the Rangers goals, with assists by Danny Freitas and Jimmy Kennelly.

This weekend the Rangers have a bye. They will resume PCSL action on Saturday, Oct. 29 with a match in Palos Verdes vs. the Palos Verdes Ajax.

Bonita nabs tennis win

The Bonita High girls tennis team ran its Hacienda League record to 5-2 and its season record to 9-2 with a 14-4 win over host San Dimas Tuesday afternoon.

Bonita also took the J.V. match with S.D. by a 18-0 score.

The Bearkittens will continue H.L. net action on Thursday by traveling to Gladstone. That match will start at 3:15 p.m.

The first time Lee Trevino played golf he used a broomstick for a club.

Kickers, Astros vie

The Diamond Bar Kickers risk their hold of first place in the Pacific Soccer League Division III standings this Saturday when they play the second-place Upland Astros in a 3 p.m. match at Simons Junior High in Pomona.

Diamond Bar moved into first place by blanking the South Bay Gunners, 3-0, on goals by Mike Brocki, Jeff Ratajczak and Tony de la Rambelje.

The Kickers were led on defense by fullbacks Mike Spurrier, Jay Mace and Dave Ryan plus midfielders Art Davis, Rocky Crisp and Ratajczak. Goalie Dave Price had several 'point blank' saves.

Saints rally for win

The Diamond Bar-Walnut Saints hold a solid position in second place in the Pacific Soccer League Division IV standings after rallying to beat the Palos Verdes Ajax, 3-1, last Saturday.

Randy Lack, Caleb Suri and Alex Solomon scored the three second half goals which enabled the Saints to rally from an 1-0 halftime deficit.

The Saints' defense, led by fullbacks Harvey Watson, Brian Berrie and Kevin Kaufman, allowed only seven shots on goals which made things easier for goalies Matt Worley and Matt Stone. Midfielders Shawn Hanks, Jeff Robinson and Robbie Cook helped control the play in the second half.

Coach Larry Hanks was especially happy with the way his team bounced back after seeing an apparent tying goal nullified by an offsides penalty early in the second half.

The Saints return to action at noon Saturday against the Palos Verdes Raiders at Chaparral Intermediate School in Diamond Bar.

Mike Stuart faces Chavez

LOS ANGELES — Mike Stuart, 11-2 with five knockouts, will fight Mexico's Mario Chavez, 12-5 with six knockouts, in the featured 10-round main event at the Olympic Auditorium Thursday night.

Lancers play to 2-2 draw

Chris Ayala and Gilbert Davila scored goals for the Pomona Lancers in a 2-2 tie against the Palos Verdes Panthers last Saturday in Pacific Soccer League Division III action.

The Lancers return to action Saturday in an 1 p.m. game against the Manhattan Beach Hurricanes at Simons Junior High in Pomona followed by a 3 p.m. match between the first-place Diamond Bar Kickers and second-place Upland Astros.

Market activity

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks headed lower in fairly active trading Wednesday as investors waited for the government's third-quarter gross national product report.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal said the "marked slowing in the rate of economic growth" expected in the GNP report to be released during the afternoon "shouldn't make us forget our generally excellent economic performance" since March 1975.

Blumenthal, in a speech prepared for delivery in Houston, also said the GNP report should not "obscure the underlying strength and health of the U.S. economy."

Against this background, the Dow Jones industrial average was off 1.12 points to 819.39 shortly before noon EDT. The closely watched average is off more than 180 points for the year.

Declines outnumbered advances, 554 to 444, among the 1,520 issues crossing the tape. The 522 unchanged issues reflected some investor uncertainty.

New York Stock Exchange volume at the two-hour mark amounted to about 8,700 000 shares, compared with 8,090,000 traded during the same period Tuesday.

Rorer Group was the most active NYSE issue, up 1 to 145⅛. Eastern Gas & Fuel was second, off ⅜ to 18⅝.

Jim Walter was third, up ¼ to 28⅜. Jim Walter preferred D stock was fourth, off ⅛ to 30⅝.

Xerox was off ¾. The company reported third-quarter earnings of $1.32 a share, compared with $1.19 a year ago.

Memorex was off 1¼ following sharp losses in the previous two sessions. Analysts were disappointed with the firm's earnings.

Inxeco Oil was off after reporting its third-quarter earnings fell to 29 cents a share from 38 cents a year ago.

Flintkote, which reported higher third-quarter earnings, was ahead ½. The company raised its quarterly dividend payment and declared a threecent extra payout.

Prices were mixed in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange issues. Houston Oil & Minerals was the most active Amex issue, off 1⅝ to 29⅛. Hycel was second, up ½ to 4⅝. Adobe Gas & Oil was third, up ¾ to 18½.

Sales of waterbeds rising

LOS ANGELES (BW) — The 1977 national retail sales volume of waterbeds is projected at $234,800,000 according to Ike Fogel, president of the Waterbed Manufacturers Association.

"That figure represents a 50 percent increase over the year of 1976," Fogel said. He made the projection following an Orlando, Fla. meeting of eastern waterbed manufacturers concluded earlier.

The increase, Fogel said, is due primarily to increased consumer recognition that flotation sleep systems offer a better night's rest. "The image of waterbeds is changing rapidly as people see what the waterbed retailer is offering them," Fogel said. He said that in the early days of the industry's development, people thought of a waterbed as "a sack of water on the floor with a hippie on it."

Broker merger slated

NEW YORK (LENS) — The American securities industry this week became more concentrated. Dean Witter and Reynolds Securities announced plans for the largest merger in Wall Street history.

If the deal goes through, the merged firm will be second only to Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith in revenues ($279 million). In capital ($166 million) it would rank third, after Merrill Lynch and Salomon Brothers.

The new firm will be well placed when listed securities are traded in the over-the-counter market, since this needs substantial capital. The official deadline is Jan. 1, 1978, though the broking community is lobbying for a delay.

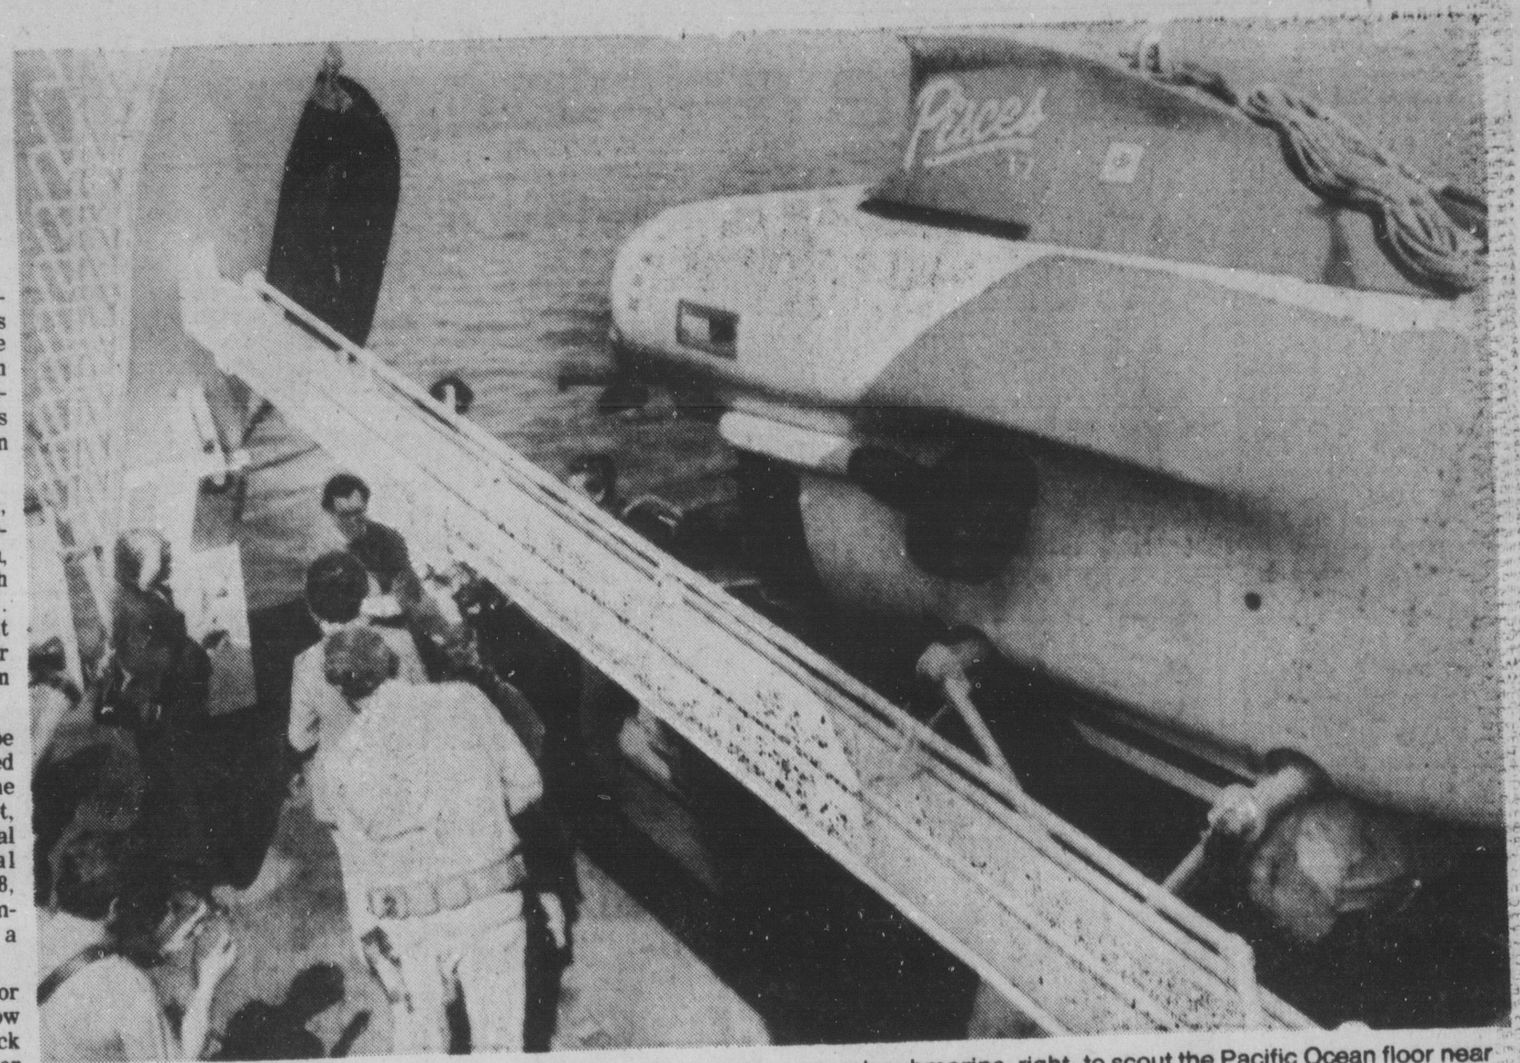
The deal makes sense for both brokers. It will allow them to combine stock orders in one computer operation, thus lowering unit costs — a big saving when the stock market is weak and trading volume low. Dean Witter is well represented in the far West, where it is based. Reynolds is strong along the Eastern seaboard. There is scope for rationalizing outlets in 33 cities. Salesmen and research analysts in many branch offices are looking nervously at their jobs.

The merger especially favors Reynolds, which has lagged behind the profit performance of other retail brokerage firms. Dean Witter will bring rich investment banking clients and underwriting business to the combination. The exchange of shares will dilute the 17 per cent stake in Reynolds held by Compagnie Arabe et Internationale d'Investissement (50 per cent owned by Arab financial interests) into a less imposing 6 per cent of the combined group.

The deal hurries the recent drive towards concentration on Wall Street, where the 25 largest brokers now have 64.5 per cent of the capital, 56.4 per cent of the commission business and 63.9 per cent of the revenue. Firms like Shearson, Hayden Stone; Paine Webber, and Drexel Burnham Lambert, which have been adding branches, must again get out their slide rules to see if they should get bigger.

A fierce bear market would trigger further concentration. Before the merger with Reynolds was mooted, Dean Witter was having talks with Rauscher Pierce, one of the largest firms in the Southwest. These talks could yet be revived.

Mergeritis has revived the argument over whether the freedom of many brokers to negotiate commissions leads to the survival of the fewer, fatter and oligopolistic brokers — and thus in the end to a reduction of competition.



CHECKING OCEAN FLOOR — Robert S. Dyer, facing camera, talks with news people in San Francisco shortly before scientists went out to sea where they will use the small research submarine, right, to scout the Pacific Ocean floor near a radioactive waste dumpsite to gauge the extent of the contamination from leaking drums.

Datsun price for 1978 up 3.3 percent

CARSON (BW) — Nissan USA announced prices for six of its 1978 model passenger car and truck lines which will go on public sale in late October and November.

Robert O. Link, vice president and general manager of sales, said the prices represent a sales-weighted increase of 3.3 percent, or $148 per vehicle, over the equivalent 1977 models.

Link attributed the boost in the suggested retail prices to higher costs for material, labor and shipping. "We still consider our cars and pickup trucks to be competitively priced in the marketplace and an outstanding value in quality and economy of operation," Link said.

The lowest-priced Datsun for 1978 is the standard two-door sedan version of the B-210, with a suggested retail sticker of $3,148.

The four-model B-210 line, two front-wheel drive F-10 models, the 200-SX sports coupe and two Z sports cars will be introduced in more than 1,000 Datsun showrooms later this month.

The 1978 version of two 810 models and three pickup trucks will reach dealerships in mid or late November.

Link also said that prices for an all-new mid-sized line to replace the 710 series will be announced shortly.

Following is a list of Datsun's 1978 prices in comparison with 1977 figures:

The suggested price includes vehicle preparation charges, but not destination and handling charges, or state and local taxes, if any.

Due to special emission controls in California, 1978 models sold in that state are $74 higher, except for the fuel-injected 810 and 280-Z which are $84 higher.

Steelmakers resent government attitude

PITTSBURGH (AP) — If domestic steelmakers practiced the same below-cost pricing used by foreign exporters to the American market "it wouldn't take 60 days to throw them in jail," said Edgar B. Speer, U.S. Steel Corp. chairman.

The Clayton Act (of 1914) outlawed the pricing of goods below cost in order to drive competition out of business, and the Trade Act of 1974 restated it, said Speer, reading the latter act's statement of purposes.

Paragraph 4 of the statement declares as one of the aims "to provide adequate procedures to safeguard American industry and labor against unfair or injurious import competition." Section 301 authorizes the President to impose quotas.

But, he said, when foreign producers sell at below production costs "we think it's lovely" instead of enforcing promptly the legislation on the books. The 20 million tons of imported steel, he indicated, is the equivalent of 100,000 domestic jobs.

Eager to point out the implications of steel's difficulties for the local and national economies, the chairman contrasted the $30-a-ton discount obtained by the American buyer of foreign steel with what he said were much higher costs in unemployment compensation and lost domestic production.

In a blunt interview Oct. 12, the day before he and other steel company executives met at the White House, Speer expressed resentment over what he felt was a failure of Washington to respond to the industry's difficulties.

Since 1974, he said, steel producers have tried without success to win the ear of federal officials about imports. "Now we're invited down in 1977." He paused. "Invited," he said again, drawing out the pronunciation. "In 1977 ... big deal."

Speer said the industry finally won attention to its problems — imports, environmental regulations, capital shortage — only when they became social problems, with plants closing and "60,000 people hitting the bricks."

He was said to be more optimistic after the meeting with President Jimmy Carter, encouraged by the likelihood of limits on "dumped" imports as well as possible relief from strict enforcement of environmental regulations.

Commenting on a wide range of steel-related subjects, Speer referred to what he claimed was the illogical administration of environmental regulations and interference by government in pricing.

"We're in 100 per cent agreement with the objectives" of the environmental effort, he said, but he questioned the "uneconomic" applications of the regulations.

It is unrealistic to expect companies to spend millions of dollars refitting plants that soon will be phased out, he said, advocating instead that newly built plants only be held to "standards that meet the best known technology."

Chairman also of the American Iron and Steel Institute, and thus a chief industry spokesman, Speer said some of the industry's problems were compounded by Washington's attitude toward pricing. In effect, steel is a regulated industry, he said.

"It is not formally regulated, but informally it is just as tightly regulated as other basic industries," he said, naming among them natural gas, oil and transportation.

In shirtsleeves, speaking tartly, Speer observed that "every industry the government puts under control is in trouble." Leaning forward, he snapped that the government couldn't operate a house of ill repute at a profit.

Too often, he suggested, the industry's complaints that it and its workers are being hurt by subsidized imports have drawn the reaction that the problems arise from the cyclical nature of the industry or from mismanagement.

How to become top management

LOS ANGELES (BW) — If you want to be a member of top management earning at least $30,000 a year, you statistically stand the best chance of moving up the corporate ladder with a background in marketing and sales and a degree in business administration, a national executive recruiting firm said.

But, according to Los Angeles-based Hergenrather & Co., a financial background is likely to get you a bigger salary . . . while a general staff background — or one in finance — may get you to the top just a little sooner.

Those are among the findings of a computerized survey of background data on nearly 3,000 top executives in all industries and professional fields conducted by Hergenrather, which pioneered executive recruiting on the West Coast 23 years ago.

The survey covered executives with backgrounds in five basic job functions — marketing, manufacturing, finance, engineering and research, and general staff (including positions in management information systems, legal and medical specialists, and college and public administrators).

According to the Hergenrather survey:

—Nearly 50 percent of all executives studied had held positions in marketing before they entered executive management.

—But the highest paid executives come from finance backgrounds: some 75 percent of these executives earn above $40,000 a year, compared with 50 percent of the executives with financial backgrounds (8.5 percent).

—The largest number of young executives — age 36 and under — reached top management from general staff backgrounds (8.6 percent of those reporting) followed closely by executives with financial backgrounds (8.5 percent).

—By contrast, executives with manufacturing backgrounds tend to reach general management later than those from any other categories studied — by 43 years of age, on the average.

—The average executive works for four different companies before he gets to a top management post, with those from engineering and research backgrounds making the most changes — five.

The Hergenrather study also found that business administration was the major subject of study in college for 54 percent of all the executives surveyed, and for at least half of the executives from every function except engineering and manufacturing.

Executives with marketing backgrounds, however, had fewer graduate degrees than executives from any other function. The greatest number of doctorates are held by executives with engineering and research backgrounds — and 55 percent of these executives earn over $40,000 a year, the second highest percentage after finance.

Champagne aristocracy challenged by reds

REIMS, France (AP) — A new Communist mayor in this capital of French champagne has turned the opulent city hall from a select gentlemen's club into a center for leftist politicking.

Mayor Claude Lamblin and his Communist-Socialist city council have made few concrete changes in their six months in office. But their new, frankly political style has profoundly troubled the "champagne aristocracy" that used to administer Reims like a private business.

The leftist victory here in last March's municipal elections was part of a sweep that catapulted the Socialist-Communist alliance into control of 70 per cent of French cities with more than 30,000 inhabitants.

Lamblin's triumph in a middle-class provincial capital, and his administration since then, illustrate political shifts across the country that have given the leftist alliance an edge in crucial national elections next March.

The upset win, by about 1,500 votes in a city of 200,000, closed an 18-year era of traditional government presided by Mayor Jean Taittinger, scion of the region's best known champagne family and a supporter of President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

Since then, the former city fathers have criticized Lamblin's team for everything from inertia to economic naivete to sinister political manipulation — to wearing sandals and turtleneck sweaters around city hall.

"This can't last; it can't last," said Dominique Hanrot, president of the Chamber of Commerce and Industry headquartered in a former 18th century baron's mansion. "The Communist party is trying to put its grip on everything."

In an effort to extend municipal control, city hall has installed envoys on governing bodies of a number of private charities that traditionally have handled social needs such as child care centers or sports fields.

It has set up neighborhood committees to discuss city policies — and, critics say, prepare for the national elections next March.

Plans are under way to expand the 1,500-strong municipal work force to take over services such as garbage pickup, park maintenance and street lighting traditionally farmed out on contract to private companies.

"It's the setting up of the Communist apparatus in Reims," said Jean-Louis Schneiter, former assistant mayor and centrist candidate for the National Assembly poll in March. "What was administration of the city for the last 20 years has become political action in the optic of the legislative elections."

Lamblin, true to form in a salmon-colored turtleneck sweater, tells a visitor that his city hall work fits "into the perspective of making profound changes in the country."

"Changes on the municipal level are important," adds the 40-year-old former school teacher in his lush Renaissance-style office. "But only after changes on the national level can they really bear fruit."

An unemployed Reims laborer who wrote to Lamblin asking for work as a truck driver on the city payroll got a similar campaign speech instead of a job.

"The only satisfactory solution is a change in policies on the national level," responded Michel Delaitre, Lamblin's top assistant, in an Aug. 5 letter. "As for us, we support the proposals of the left. (Their) application is the only real way out of the crisis."

Despite being locked into a budget voted by the outgoing administration, the Lamblin city hall has made several gestures to its Socialist-Communist image.

It increased by about 300 the number of children getting cutrate or free school lunches, but had to cancel free tennis lessons in a workers' neighborhood to do it.

It also gave civil service job protection to 176 more municipal employes and promised to add another 75 to the rosters. Labor union subsidies went up about $5,000.

These measures were designed to appeal to residents of the new suburban neighborhoods that increasingly ring Reims and cities across France, providing a growing electorate for Socialist and Communist candidates. Lamblin himself lives in the biggest such quarter in Reims, called the Red Cross.

"I voted for our mayor because he... took care of us pretty well," said a middleaged woman waiting for a bus in the Red Cross area. "I've always voted left. I think they take care of the workers a lot better."

The ultramodern Red Cross complex houses 26,000 persons. Like many such recent developments, it seems vaguely hostile to families arriving from surrounding villages for jobs in Reims factories.

The influx has boosted the Reims population from about 135,000 when Taittinger took over in 1958 to 167,000 10 years later to the more than 200,000 now.

"I used to tell Mr. Taittinger, these new neighborhoods are going to beat you," said Jean Falala, a rightist parliament member who lost to Lamblin after Taittinger declined to run again.

Nose hair remover

WARREN, Ohio (AP) — The father-son team of James E. and James F. Ciortan set out to build a better mouse trap. Or, to be more precise, a better way for people to rid themselves of nose hairs.

Tweezers seemed too cumbersome to the Ciortans, so they invented the electric nose hair remover.

Like tweezers, the nose hair remover is small enough to be carried in a pocket. It plugs into household electrical sockets. And there's a tiny rotary blade up front that snips hair but never pulls it, the inventors say.

They have applied for patents in the U.S. and Canada. When it goes into production, the nose hair remover is expected to cost "under $10," the elder Ciortan says.

Confident of their product's success? Of course the men say.

"Have you ever stood next to someone with nose hairs sticking out? Why, it's just vulgar," the senior Ciortan said.

Report claims West German industrialist has been slain

PARIS (AP) — A communique received by an extreme leftist Paris newspaper Wednesday said "the existence of Mr. Hanns-Martin Schleyer has been ended." Schleyer, West German industrialist, was kidnaped by German terrorists Sept. 5.

The communique was signed "Commando Siegfried Houssner R.A.F."

That was the name of the German terror group that said it kidnaped Schleyer and threatened to execute him unless the West German government released 11 terrorists from West German jails and flew them to the refuge of their choice with nearly half a million dollars in ransom.

The government has not met the demands.

Earlier, police in Mulhouse in eastern France said they had received telephoned tips that Schleyer's body was in the trunk of a car. They said they were checking the car for booby traps and awaiting the arrival of the local district attorney to witness the opening of the trunk.

Police were alerted to the car by several telephone calls. An officer said one caller claimed he was from a news agency and another said he was German. This immediately raised suspicions that Schleyer, kidnaped Sept. 5, or his body could be in the trunk.

Schleyer, 62, was kidnaped by West German terrorists who threatened to execute him unless 11 of their jailed comrades were freed and flown to a refuge of their choice with nearly half a million dollars in ransom money.

Several deadlines for a West German government response went by without word as Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and his aides dealt with the hijacking of a Luftansa airliner commandeered in apparent coordination with the Schleyer case.

The hijacking ended at Mogadishu, Somalia, in the darkness Monday night with an assault and rescue of 86 hostages by specially trained West German anti-terrorist commandos.

But this left hanging the fate of Schleyer, executive in the giant Damlier-Benz automotive combine and president of the West German Employers' and Industrial Association.

Earlier rumors had circulated in France and West Germany that his body was found in the Seine River in Paris. This reflected widespread fears he would be executed as the kidnappers had threatened.

The car, a green Audi 80 sedan with German license No. HGAN 460, was found in the northern sector of this city near the West German border and about 280 miles southeast of Paris.

Five in area eye assessor's job

By BOB NAGEY
PB Staff Writer

Seventy-nine persons, including five from the valley, are seeking the position left vacant by the retirement of Los Angeles County Assessor Philip E. Watson this month, records showed today.

One of the five local applicants is Margaret Gibbs of Claremont, a former City Council member and trustee of the Citrus Community College District.

The $49,500 a year job is now open, and the county Board of Supervisors hopes to fill it by December.

Chairman Ed Edelman has asked the supervisors to pare the list down to 20 finalists by next Monday.

The finalists will then be interviewed publicly.

Those applying from the valley are:

—Mrs. Gibbs, who currently is teaching at Cal State San Bernardino.

—Eilehue Stanback, a Pomona businessman and a former county deputy assessor.

—Norman Karschner, 49, of Diamond Bar, a business executive.

—John Marshall Blackburn, 44, of Rowland Heights, a deputy district attorney and a former deputy assessor.

—Bryan W. Stevens, 56, of Valinda, a high school teacher and La Verne College law student.

Each of the supervisors will choose four names so a pool of 20 finalists will be available for interviewing, probably in two weeks.

None of Watson's top deputies appear on the list.

The number of applicants was a surprise to the supervisors who had expected little interest since the position had become highly controversial during the past two years.

Watson has filed for disability payment in connection with his retirement. He contended his heart problem was caused by his running feud with the supervisors over the past several years. He served as a county assessor for 15 years. His present term had another year to run.

The supervisor's appointee will fill out Watson's unexpired term. The new assessor then will be chosen in a general county-wide election.

SHATTERED REMAINS

A bomb federal authorities believe was set by professionals left only a shell of Evansville oil millionaire Ray Ryan's 1977 Lincoln Continental Tuesday. Ryan was killed in the blast, which shook nearby businesses and broke scores of windows in an apartment complex.

Hint multiple drugs Presley death cause

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Ten drugs were present in Elvis Presley's bloodstream when he died in August and they probably contributed to his death, a published report said today.

The Commercial Appeal quoted sources as saying Dr. Jerry Francisco, Shelby County medical examiner, may rule multiple drugs as the cause of the singer's death.

Francisco, reached at his office late Tuesday, would not confirm the reports but said he would probably hold a news conference on the autopsy Friday.

Francisco originally ruled Presley died of cardiac arrythmia from unknown causes. He said at a press conference held nearly six hours after the death that there was no evidence of drug abuse.

Among the drugs the sources said were found in Presley's bloodstream were an antihistamine often used to control hay fever or allergies; codeine, a derivative of opium often used to relieve pain and found in some cough medicines; Demerol, a narcotic used as a sedative and analgesic, and several tranquilizers including Valium.

Concorde lands in N.Y., ending 18-month battle

NEW YORK (AP) — The Concorde SST swooped down through an overcast sky today and landed at Kennedy International Airport, marking the end of a 1½-year struggle to keep the noisy, faster-than-sound passenger jet out of New York.

The plane, carrying the colors of both its British and French developers, touched down at 11:09 a.m. EDT. It had taken off from Toulouse in southwest France, where it was built, at 7:25 a.m.

Its maiden entry to New York was a familiarization flight. The plane carried technicians and other personnel, but no passengers.

Regular commercial service by the 1,350-mile-an-hour plane is scheduled to begin Nov. 22. It cuts in half the normal flying time to New York from Paris and London to 3½ hours.

A heavy security force was out to cope with any crowds or unanticipated events, but anti-SST forces had no protests planned at the airport today.

Shortly before the takeoff, a union of French aerospace workers appealed to New Yorkers to accept the inevitable and welcome the Concorde as a symbol of transatlantic amity.

Under an umbrella of hovering helicopters, the jet pointed its beak-like nose toward hangar 17 and taxied to that relatively remote part of the airport, which will be its home for the next few days.

Nearly 100 persons lined the edge of runway 4 Left as the Concorde settled down.

"Loud!" cried a policeman, who covered his ears with his hand.

"Super!" exclaimed Carol Craft, a British Airways publicist.

Meanwhile in Newark, N.J., the Port Authority, which operates Kennedy and the other New York jetports, continued hearings on noise standards that it hopes will ultimately bar the Concorde in its current form.

In Lawrence, one of the communities on the JFK flightpaths, the PTA held a rally outside an elementary school "to show President Carter we are not taking this lying down," said Anita Cuchel, the PTA president.

Today's flight by Concorde 002, a test craft, was piloted by Pierre Dudal of Air France and Jean Franchi, chief test pilot for Aerospatiale, the French co-manufacturer of the plane.

About 30 passengers were listed for the flight, including technicians, publicists and other representatives of the two airlines and of the two government enterprises that build the plane, Aerospatiale and the British Aircraft Corp.

The Concorde is scheduled to make a practice flight around the New York metropolitan area on Thursday and several takeoffs and landings Thursday and Friday. It will fly to London Friday afternoon.

Light drizzle falls in area

A light drizzle, the first rainfall in two months, dampened the valley this morning, and the weatherman said it may stay until the evening.

The drizzle will hold temperatures down to the 70s today and Thursday with partly cloudy skies expected to follow the precipitation.

Although the moisture made the streets slippery, only fender bumping accidents were reported by the California Highway Patrol and local police.

The last time rain fell here was on Aug. 18, when a three-day storm dropped 2.7 inches on Pomona.

House vote hints survival of Saturday mail delivery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saturday mail deliveries and small post offices stand a better chance of survival following action by a House committee to prevent their elimination.

The House Post Office Committee, voting Tuesday to reorganize the Postal Service, included guarantees that Saturday mail deliveries and rural post offices won't be done away with to save money.

The legislation says these services must be continued and authorizes approximately $2 billion for them and other postal operations. The Postal Service received about $1.5 billion in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30.

The 19-4 vote sent the legislation to the full House, which may not get to the bill in this session.

The Postal Service has said eliminating Saturday deliveries would save $412 million a year.

And the service, following a year's moratorium, is once more gradually closing small, uneconomical facilities.

Rep. Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif. says Saturday deliveries are important to many Americans. Country post offices, he says, are a part of small town life.

Wilson is a cosponsor of the Postal Service reorganization bill.

"The post office in a lot of communities — even though it may not be profitable — serves as a meeting place," Wilson said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

"The post office is not supposed to be a break-even project. People throughout the country should be entitled to the same type of service.

Recovered body may be that of valley doctor

Utah state medical examiners in Salt Lake City have a body tagged John Doe they think may be that of a Claremont doctor who drowned in Daggett County while on a fishing trip five years ago.

A woman in the medical examiners office said this morning that identification still had not been determined on the body which washed up Sept. 12 at Flaming Gorge Reservoir in northeastern Utah on the Utah-Wyoming border.

Four California doctors were on the trip, and all four drowned, authorities said, on April 22, 1972.

The lowering of the reservoir because of the drought has brought the recovery of three bodies.

Two of the bodies have been identified as Dr. Michael Mathews, 34, of Garden Grove, and Dr. Charles Wolverton, 43, of Long Beach.

Daggett County Sheriff Kenneth Reed said Wolverton's body was washed up two weeks ago, and Mathews' body was found in June.

The body found Sept. 12, may be that of Claremont Dr. Marshall Hodge, 45, or the fourth member of the party, Dr. Aldirado Person, 62, of Tarzana.

Suicides of 3 terrorists spur bombings and demonstrations

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Extremists bombed West German targets in Italy and marched in cities across Europe today to protest the deaths of three imprisoned German anarchists whose freedom was demanded by kidnapers and airline hijackers.

Bombs exploded today at German car showrooms in Bologna, Milan, Leghorn and Turin and a building housing the West German consulate in Genoa. Leftists marched in Rome, Milan, Genoa, Athens and London. In Vienna they spraypainted the monument of waltz king Johann Strauss with the slogan: "The bourgeoisie has had its last dance."

European leftists expressed fear that the West German commando raid in Somalia that killed three hijackers and freed the 86 hostages, and the prison deaths announced hours later marked a revival of neoNazism in West Germany.

"These events prove in a tragic way how such climaxing violence is developing in Germany, opening the way for neofascism in that country," said a statement by Socialist March, a small political party in Greece.

Most newspapers in Europe and elsewhere hailed the commando raid as an effective measure against terrorism.

West German officials said Andreas Baader, Gudrun Ensslin and Jan-Carl Raspe committed suicide and a fourth imprisoned terrorist, Irmgard Moeller, tried to kill herself at Stuttgart's maximum security Stannheim Prison.

Heinz Funke, a lawyer for Baader who was present at his autopsy, said Baader died of a bullet wound in the back of the neck and expressed doubt it was self-inflicted. West German officials did not explain how Baader or Raspe, who also died of a bullet wound, got guns.

Seventeen West Berlin lawyers who have represented terrorist suspects said they feared the prisoners were killed to avenge the five-day seige of the Lufthansa 737 jet by hijackers apparently working in league with kidnapers of West German industralist Hanns Martin Schleyer.

There has been no word on Schleyer's fate since last week, when the terrorists who abducted him in Cologne Sept. 5 threatened to kill him last Sunday unless the West German government met the hijackers demands for release of 11 German anarchists including the three who were killed.

Describing the seven-minute battle on the hijacked plane, Interior Minister Werner Maihofer said the GSG-9 commandos "eliminated" two of the four hijackers after "determined resistance" in the cockpit.

"Another terrorist in the first class compartment ... opens fire from there," he continued, speaking in present tense. "Although hit by two bullets, he then hurls a hand grenade towards the rear of the plane. This explodes under a seat.

"And after this terrorist is hit by more bullets ... he detonates another grenade even while falling, which injures several hostages in the feet," Maihofer said.

"When this had been eliminated too, suddenly a terrorist — later found to be a woman — in the rear toilet opens fire on GSG 9 through the door" before being gunned down too by the troops, he said.

KKK warned not to patrol border

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Police are warning the Ku Klux Klan not to patrol the Mexican border to help stop illegal aliens.

Fifteen members of an activist coalition picketed the county jail Tuesday demanding the release of Salvador R. Amercado, 29, who was charged Sunday with smashing the windshield of a Klan member's car during a protest at the border.

"I think this is a vigilante type of action and I strongly question their motives," said Police Chief William Kolender. "They could cause racial dissension and increase the problems for all law enforcement agencies involved."

David Duke, national head of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, toured the border area Sunday and said 500 to 1,000 Klan members would help the U.S. Border Patrol stop people from illegally entering the country. Duke said the Border Patrol cannot cope with the volume of illegal aliens.

Carter wins one for change, if only on procedural vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House handed President Carter a victory today on his proposed legislation calling for shipment of more oil imports in tankers flying the U.S. flag.

Although the 249-167 vote was on a procedural question, both supporters and opponents of the bill had said in advance that it would be a good indication of the final outcome.

A vote on the bill was expected later today.

The procedural vote came after debate in which Republicans urged the House to refuse to take up the bill until it had heard testimony from administration officials who may have argued against the proposal.

"Without further testimony, the cloud that hangs over this bill can not be dispelled," Rep. James H. Quillen, R-Tenn., declared.

Backers of the measure, which is known as the cargo preference bill, argued that it would strengthen the merchant marine. Opponents said it would increase oil and gasoline prices.

BIG ON STYLE

Nancy Austin, herself a designer of clothes for large women, models one of her wedding outfits at the first major exhibit of fashions for fat women in Los Angeles this week. Theme of the show was "Big is Beautiful." Nancy, who tips the scales at 273 pounds, said more than 22 million American women wear large sizes and deserve special consideration.

Styles for the fat woman make show huge success

LOS ANGELES (AP) — While toothpick-thin models paraded past buyers at the California Mart, a heftier contingent was staging a much larger trade and fashion show.

"Big Is Beautiful," the first major national exhibit of fashions for fat women, drew an overflow crowd to the Mart theater this week to view bulky models bouncing down the runway in jogging suits, negligees and evening gowns.

There were shouts, applause and wolf whistles.

"The message of the show is that just because you're overweight, you don't have to look dowdy and ugly," said Marilyn Wheeler, the Mart's special events coordinator who planned the unique three-day exhibit and fashion show.

"There are intelligent, aggressive, witty big women who don't want to wear a tent forever," said Miss Wheeler.

The trade show features 62 manufacturers specializing in the large and half-size market — sizes 18 to 52.

There were a few problems backstage, Miss Wheeler noted. "We realized we couldn't have the models changing back-to-back. And a size 20 sample just didn't fit all of them."

David London, whose wife, Nancy Austin, is a top designer for heavy women, said, "Over 30 per cent of the women in this country are in large and half sizes. That's 22 million American women in our market."

Seven years ago London and his wife — who now weighs 273 pounds — opened a small Las Vegas boutique for "Queen-sized women."

Ms. Austin, a comedienne, had appeared on a TV show and was inundated with mail from big women asking: "Where can I find clothes like yours?"

"We opened our boutique with 300 garments and in the first week we sold all but 23 pieces," she recalled.

Nancy Austin Fashions now has four stores and a factory that distributes to specialty shops across the country. They also sell large-size patterns for home sewers.

Ms. Austin, who prefers that designation, said she's fighting fashion stereotypes imposed on fat women. "We make very few garments in black ... I remember having nothing to choose from but black button-down-the-front dresses.

"We emphasize color and a youthful look," said Ms. Austin, whose new collection includes decorated jeans, brightly printed handkerchief-style blouses and a long lacy peasant dress that doubles as a bridal gown.

At the Mart's fashion show, Ms. Austin arrived in a dowdy dark coat and hat, then let the audience watch her change into a glamor girl in sequined evening gown and saucy red wig.

"When I do that Cinderella transformation for a room full of heavy women, the response is incredible," she says. "It's like kids at the movies on a Saturday afternoon. It's all 'oohs and aahs.'"

OMS law suits reach settlement short of court

By MAE TATE
PB Staff Writer

Two years of court battles are over with the settlement of suits involving the Ontario Motor Speedway board and a former operator of the speedway.

Sam Crowe, attorney for the nonprofit board, announced this week that a long series of suits had been settled Friday in the West Valley Superior Court in Ontario. He attributed the legal solution to the disputes to the joint efforts of Parnelli Jones and Velko Miletich.

Jones and Miletich, business partners, were among the owners of the Ontario Motor Speedway Operating Co. (OMSOC).

Crowe explained that about two years ago, OMSOC leased the speedway premises from the speedway board andacted as operator of the facility. When OMSOC vacated the facility, a series of suits and countersuits were filed.

The speedway board claimed OMSOC broke the lease and asked the court for damages while OMSOC sued, asking the court to determine whether or not it had broken the lease.

Later, Crowe continued, Jones and Milotich filed a $21 million suit against the speedway board for defamation of character. Additionally, the speedway board filed another suit claiming it owned the restaurant equipment at the speedway and requesting $800,000 from OMSOC in damages for the equipment.

Superior Court Judge Howard Wiener sat as the settlement judge in the hearing, but the various parties managed to work out an agreement without dictation from the court.

OMSOC agreed to pay the speedway board $400,000 and to relinquish future claim to the restaurant equipment; and all parties agreed to dismiss all other lawsuits, said Crowe.

"The key factor in the settlement was Miletich and Jones. They worked pretty hard in putting the settlement together," Crowe said. "Everybody worked out a settlement. The speedway board is very happy about it and approved the agreement at a special Monday morning meeting."

Inner-city loans spurred by law against redlining

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California's tough new anti-redlining regulations are stimulating increased mortgage lending to inner-city neighborhoods, state Savings and Loan Commissioner Saul Perlis says.

Releasing an inch-thick, two-volume report here Tuesday, Perlis said: "Although the precise measurement of the influence of the regulations themselves cannot be reliably determined, their effect is unquestionable."

The regulations against redlining — the practice by some lenders of refusing to make loans in low-income areas — became effective Aug. 1, 1976.

They were bolstered last month when Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. signed legislation creating the toughest anti-redlining law in the nation.

The report, issued by Perlis' department as the first in a series which will monitor the impact of California's anti-redlining drive, concluded that lending to so-called "mortgage-deficient areas" has shown "strong and steady growth" since May 1975, when government hearings on redlining were announced.

Judge announces his support for West End juvenile court

By BOB SWETNAM
PB Staff Writer

Prospects for a Juvenile Court in the West End of San Bernardino County improved this week when a Superior Court judge recommended such a facility be constructed in Ontario.

County supervisors have discussed for several months the possibility of opening a Juvenile Court in the West End because of increased juvenile cases and the area's growing population.

At present, all juvenile cases in the county are processed at a juvenile justice facility in San Bernardino.

Superior Court Judge Henry M. Busch, seeking county funds for a $60,000 remodeling project at the central juvenile justice facility, told supervisors he was recommending a new Juvenile Court be established in the former county health building located in the West Valley Court complex in Ontario.

Such a facility is needed to fulfill the need for more decentralized court services within the county, he said.

"We need two adult courtrooms and a full Juvenile Court in the West Valley district," he told supervisors.

The judge, who was criticized two weeks ago by the board for opposing an immediate move of juvenile facilities to the rapidly growing West End, appeared more receptive to the decentralized concept when he appeared before supervisors Monday.

Supervisors had postponed a decision on the financing for court remodeling at the San Bernardino facility until judges agreed to work towards establishment of a Juvenile Court in Ontario, Chino or tri-communities of Cucamonga, Etiwanda or Alta Loma.

The issue of interim facilities for handling local juvenile cases, however, is still under dispute.

Speaking for the majority of judges, Busch said he favored moving new courts to the West End as soon as possible. But he noted he was still opposed to Supervisor Robert Townsend's proposal to utilize empty courtrooms at the newly-built Chino Municipal Court until the Ontario facilities could be completed.

The judges would oppose attempts to put courts in "far-flung" area of the county, he added.

Since the cost of transporting juvenile offenders to San Bernardino for trials has been cited as a main reason for locating a Juvenile Court in Ontario, Busch said the same problems would occur if juveniles from Etiwanda or Upland had to be transported to Chino for court hearings.

In addition, court costs would increase dramatically if a new court was started in Chino, he said.

But supervisors noted that if Chino would be an inconvenient location for an interim facility, they would like to see evidence from the judges on why it would be inconvenient.

Supervisor Dennis Hansberger of Yucaipa criticized the judges for stating it would be too expensive to have an interim Juvenile Justice Court in Chino without providing the statistics.

Supervisor Joseph Kamansky, whose district includes much of the West End, said new court facilities — particularly juvenile justice facilities — were urgently needed.

"The law and justice needs in the West End are increasing daily," he observed.

Supervisor Townsend of Chino supported decentralizing the court system and bringing more courts to the West End.

"We recognize the need to improve court facilities in the West End," he said.

Earl Goodwin, county administrative officer, said his staff would examine an interim plan for juvenile courts in the West End, using information provided by the judges.

The county staff will examine various interim possibilities, their costs and practicalities, he added.

Goodwin said use of the empty courtroom in Chino should be examined as a possible interim location.

Kamansky said, "The biggest problem today is our interim plan. I am tired of waiting and would like to see something concrete. We've kicked this around for months."

Supervisors also indicated they would examine the possibility — as is being done in El Cajon — of allowing Municipal Courts to hear juvenile cases.

At present, trials for juveniles must be held in specially designated courtrooms.

High speed chase lasts 130 miles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 130-mile high-speed chase from Palm Springs to Inglewood came to a stop on a dead-end street after the driver of the speeding car sideswiped two other cars and allegedly tried to run into a motorcycle officer.

Michael J. Martin, 23, of Palm Springs, was arrested Tuesday on charges of assault with a deadly weapon against a peace officer, reckless driving, grand theft auto and hit-run driving, police said.

The chase began when police in Palm Springs spotted Martin's 1977 Oldsmobile whose lease had not been paid up. When officers tried to pull the car over, it sped away, police said.

Officers said the car swerved to hit a California Highway Patrol motorcycle officer on the outskirts of Palm Springs, but missed him. The motorcycle spilled on the freeway, but the officer was unhurt.

Martin then headed toward Los Angeles at speeds of up to 110 miles per hour, officers said.

He drove off the freeway briefly in Baldwin Park, east of Los Angeles, and was involved in two minor non-injury accidents before reentering the freeway and heading for Inglewood, police said.

The 130-mile chase ended when Martin again took to surface streets and found himself trapped in a dead-end street.

A CHP spokesman said 15 ground units and a helicopter joined the pursuit.

Pesticide not tested enough says researcher

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal standard set in 1961 limiting worker exposure to the pesticide DBCP was probably unsafe and researchers were wrong in recommending the guideline without more study, one of the researchers admits.

DBCP or dibromochloropropane has been blamed for sterility among dozens of chemical workers. Fears are it may eventually cause cancer in some of them, or in people who eat produce tainted with residues of the pesticide.

Charles Hine, a professor of occupational and environmental medicine at the University of California, said Tuesday the federal standard, in effect for 16 years based on research done by him and others, was "probably too low."

"With the present data relative to human exposure, I would be concerned myself that 1 part per million is a safe and reasonable level," Hine said at a hearing on DBCP.

In 1961, the pesticide was registered with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and worker exposure limited to one part per million based on research published that year by Hine and others. Their work was subsidized by the Shell Oil Co. and the Dow Chemical Co., the only domestic producers of DBCP.

Its production was halted in August when tests showed many of the workers had zero sperm or abnormally low sperm counts.

Hine said researchers erred by suggesting the 1 ppm standard without testing it first to make sure it had no detrimental effects on animals. A dose of 5 ppm caused some changes in the tissues of animal testicles, while higher doses caused rats' testicles to waste away and their sperm counts to drop.

Hearings about coastal nuclear plant continue

SAN LUIS OBISBO (AP) — The Atomic Safety and Licensing Board continued hearings today on the controversial Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant. Fully operational, it's two reactors could generate ten billion watts.

On Tuesday, witnesses from Pacific Gas & Electric and the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission said the $1.2 million facility needs no modification. Efforts by opponents of the plant to shake the testimony were largely unsuccessful.

The plant is on the Pacific Coast about 12 miles southwest of San Luis Obispo.

James Shiffer of PG&E said a test emergency drill at the plant last August was successful and no changes in emergency plans were required as a result of it.

An attempt by attorney Simon Klevansky, representing opponents of the plant, to challenge fire protection plans was ruled out of order by the licensing board.

Also Tuesday, the licensing board heard statements by 28 citizens, most of them residents of communities near the Diablo plant, supporting and opposing licensing.

Richard Hubbard, a former nuclear engineer, challenged the plant's inspection program, saying 62 of 1,675 wells in the plants' cooling system had to be repaired after a leak in one water pipe was discovered.

Karl Kempton, a poet who lives 10 miles from the plant, said endangering lives to obtain nuclear energy would amount to "human sacrifice."

Hijack hostages OK

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Christine Santiago of Santee, held hostage for five days on the hijacked Lufthansa jet, underwent a complete medical checkup today at the U.S. Army Hospital here.

Her 5-year-old son Leo, who was also a hostage, was being cared for by an uncle in the Frankfurt area, a spokesman for the U.S. Consulate said.

Col. George Foegen, the hospital's executive officer, said Mrs. Santiago, 44, was exhausted by the 120-hour ordeal but apparently in good condition. She was expected to leave the hospital in the next two days, he said.

"We've got the chief of internal medicine and other departments working with her to make sure there's no illnesses we don't know about," he said.

Sandra Goode moved

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Sandra Goode, a follower of convicted mass murderer Charles Manson, has been moved to a federal women's prison at Alderson, W.Va., where two other Manson disciples are imprisoned.

Miss Goode, 33, was transferred Tuesday from the Metropolitan Correctional Center, where she had been for one month after the Terminal Island Prison was converted into an all-male facility, according to Warden Walter Lumpkin.

Miss Goode will join Susan Murphy and Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme at Alderson. Miss Goode and Miss Murphy were convicted of conspiring to send death threats to businessmen and government leaders. Miss Fromme is serving a life term for attempting to assassinate former President Gerald Ford in Sacramento.

Strikers meeting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Striking machinists have met with Lockheed Corp. for the first time in two weeks to seek an end to a nine-day-old walkout by 8,500 Southern California aerospace workers.

In Northern California, talks were to resume today for another 4,000 workers at Lockheed's facility in Sunnyvale, near San Francisco.

The three-hour bargaining session in Los Angeles Tuesday, the first since Oct. 5, was arranged by a federal mediator called in to get the stalled talks moving again.

Lockheed spokesman H. David Crowther termed the talks "a positive session" and said negotiators spent the time defining the issues on which they disgreed.

Considers congress

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Lt. Gov. Mervyn M. Dymally, whose relations with Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. have been tenuous, is considering running for Congress next year, it was reported today.

Dymally, who has made no secret of his disappointment that the lieutenant governor's post had not proven more influential, said Tuesday that he would decide by Dec. 1 whether to seek the Los Angeles congressional seat of Rep. Yvonne Brathwaite Burke.

Mrs. Burke, a Democrat, has said she intends to run for state attorney general next year.

Religious leaders criticize Chavez' Philippines trip

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some major church leaders, among the staunchest backers of farm labor leader Cesar Chavez, have threatened to withdraw their support of the United Farm Workers in a dispute over Chavez' recent trip to the Philippines.

"I was and still am disturbed by Chavez' visit," the Rev. John P. Brown, acting executive director of the Northern California Ecumenical Council, said in a telephone interview from San Francisco Monday.

Stressing that his organization considers Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos' government unacceptably oppressive, Brown said, "Our support for Chavez' union has to be tied to support for human rights around the world. The two issues cannot be separated."

The Rev. Wayne Hartmier Jr., director of the National Farm Workers Ministry in Los Angeles, said Chavez had received many letters expressing "regret," "disappointment" and "deep concern" from such organizations as the National Council of Churches and the U.S. Catholic Bishops Conference.

The influential Protestant magazine "Christianity and Crisis" published an open letter to Chavez suggesting that the labor leader's trip in late July was "being used" by the Marcos regime, Hartmier said.

He explained that Chavez, whose union has many Filipino workers, is highly regarded by Philippine labor leaders and workers.

Human rights leaders have suggested that Chavez' meeting with Marcos undercut Marcos' critics in the labor movement.

"A good number of the churches have said, or at least strongly implied, that they would withhold support from the union until this matter is clarified," Hartmier said.

During his trip, Chavez met with some 60 labor and peasant leaders in 13 provinces and held closed-door talks with Marcos at which Chavez reportedly urged him to allow free national elections. When Marcos later said he would hold such elections, Chavez praised the decision.

400 expected to apply for Pomona police work

About 400 applicants, the same as two years ago, were expected to file papers for the position of police officer trainee Tuesday and today at Pomona City Hall.

Personnel technician Faye Brown said the police department needs a new eligibility list since the old list is depleted.

The examinations two years ago resulted in an eligibilty list of about 50 persons.

She explained that candidates who qualify successfully and are placed on an eligibility list will retain their eligibility for one year.

She noted that minimum requirements are graduation from the 12th grade or equivalent, a minimum age of 21, proportionate height and weight, and hearing must be normal.

She said that about 75 percent pass the written exam, and a lesser number the agility test.

The test given at Rio Hondo Academy at Whittier requires candidates to do at least 25 sit-ups, 15 burpees, dragging a 180-pound manikin 25 feet, pushing a patrol car 20 feet, five chin-ups or pull-ups, a 440-yard run in at least one minute, 40 seconds, and completing an obstacle course in 90 seconds.

"Candidates must pass each phase of the written exam and the agility test with a minimum score," she said.

She said that it would probably be 2½ months before the agility test is given.

Testing will probably result in 50 candidates on an eligibility list.

Starting salary is $1,106 a month.

Sports encourage kids' obesity?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exercise is as important as good eating habits in preventing obesity in children, but athletic programs centered on playing star athletes discourage many children from developing good exercise habits, says a Mayo Clinic nutrition expert.

Dr. Ralph A. Nelson said Tuesday the consequences of sitting on the bench during athletic events and physical education classes are more than just disappointment and frustration.

Discouraged youngsters don't have a desire to stay active or physically fit for the rest of their lives, thus increasing the risk of heart disease, high blood pressure and many other conditions when they get older, he said.

Nelson said current physical education programs emphasize team games that tend to be monopolized by natural athletes at the expense of less gifted students.

"We have to have programs with activities that develop the skills each child does best, whether competing on a team or with himself. We should offer prizes for the most improvement in something as well as winning," Nelson said.

"It might be helpful if people rotated positions on teams and made sure everyone played, but this may mean downplaying the idea of winning for the sake of physical fitness," he continued.

Speaking at a forum on childrearing, the associate professor of nutrition at the Mayo Medical School said parents dismiss the consequences of overweight children by saying they'll grow out of it.

But, Nelson said, "If a child enters adolescence obese, chances are one to four against he or she ever achieving a normal body weight."

"If a child leaves adolescence obese, chances increase to about 28 to 1 against ever achieving a normal body weight," he added.

Nelson said about 20 per cent of adult Americans are either overweight or obese, a condition he said is also common among children.

In a five-year study Mayo scientists conducted using about 2,000 Rochester, Minn., school children, 18 per cent were classified as overweight and another 14 per cent obese, he said.

Fatty blood cholesterol was higher in the fat children than thin ones, "indicating that already at ages 6 through 16 the obese kids were carrying around an increased risk of coronary artery disease," he said.

Nelson noted that the study confirmed previous ones showing that on the average, normal weight and fat children consumed about the same number of calories. Individual differences in exercise and how well the body burns food appear to account for most of the weight disparity, he added.

Studies show that professional individual nutrition counseling can teach fat children to limit calories and eat properly to control their weight.

But this time-consuming and expensive process is difficult on a large scale, Nelson said, so people should try instead to control their weight by using up excess calories.

"The first step which should be taken towards prevention of obesity in children would be to develop a successful exercise program for all school children," he said.

Officers attacked with baseball bat

A man and a young woman were arrested by two off-duty Upland police officers Tuesday night after a man reportedly attacked the officers with a baseball bat following a traffic stop at Euclid Avenue and Seventh Street, said investigators.

The girl, a juvenile, was arrested for investigation of driving while under the influence and released to her parents pending further action.

Also arrested was Lucas Lee Brian, 20, 1461 W. Mission Blvd., Pomona. He was held for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon and carrying a concealed weapon.

Officers Martin Thouvenell and Steve Thorsen reportedthey had gone off duty about 9:30 p.m. and were driving on Euclid Avenue near the San Bernardino Freeway when they noticed a car driving erratically ahead of them.

The officers, believing the driver to be driving while intoxicated, stopped the vehicle at Seventh Street after flashing their badges out the windows.

The officers said that as they got out of their car a man exited from the vehicle swinging a baseball bat.

The two officers managed to subdue the suspect.

Rescue 2 after mountain plunge

By JACK BURSON
PB Staff Writer

Two teen-age Glendora youths were in satisfactory condition this morning in Arcadia Methodist Hospital where they were recovering from injuries suffered when their car plunged off Glendora Mountain Road Sunday night, precipitating a 44-hour ordeal which ended with their rescue Tuesday afternoon.

Scott Jensen, 16, and Michael Rodriguez, 18, were rescued and flown to the hospital after a Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department helicopter crew spotted one's blue jacket hanging from a tree. When the pilot decended the crew was able to see the victims' demolished car hidden beneath trees.

The pair was found 500 feet below the road and about three miles west of Mt. Baldy Road. Their rescuers said the injured youths were about 300 yards apart and about 800 feet from the auto.

The ordeal began Sunday night when, according to the youths' statement to the California Highway Patrol, they were forced off the road by an oncoming car.

Both were thrown from the tumbling vehicle with Jensen suffering a broken ankle and Rodriguez a knee injury.

The youths spent the balance of the night there and never were able to reach one another. They could communicate by yelling however, deputies said.

Monday afternoon Jensen's father, Kurt, reported the pair missing and sheriff's deputies, on the ground and in helicopters, searched the area of Glendora Mountain Road without success.

The victims spent Monday night in the open — an experience Rodriguez described later as "horrible." He said it was very cold and he buried himself in sand to keep from freezing.

The search resumed Tuesday with helicopters and the blue coat and then the victims were spotted from the air shortly before 3 p.m. Paramedics were taken to the scene and the victims were treated and then removed by a rescue team.

Arrest girl for robbery

A 16-year-old girl was arrested Tuesday night for investigation of armed robbery shortly after the Stop n Go market at 1855 N. Baker Ave., Ontario, was robbed by a man and woman armed with a shotgun, Ontario police reported.

Police said that one and possibly two other men were being sought in connection with the robbery.

Police said a man and a woman entered the market and confronted the clerk with a shotgun. The clerk said the woman held the shotgun while the man grabbed a paper bag and ordered him to fill it wish cash from the register.

The pair fled out the door and jumped into a waiting car.

The clerk was able to give police a good description of the vehicle, which was broadcast to other local law enforcement agencies.

A short time after the broadcast, West End sheriff's Deputy Rudy Olvera spotted a vehicle matching the description on Grove Avenue north of the San Bernardino Freeway and made a traffic stop.

Ontario police responded to the scene of the traffic stop and after searching the vehicle arrested the 16-year-old girl.

The girl was turned over to juvenile authorities for disposition.

Juvenile authorities said they had released the girl to her parents pending further action.

Helter-smelter

A Southern Pacific freight train sliced a truck and trailer and the 100-ton smelting furnace it carried in half early this morning in a collision at the Nogales Avenue crossing near Industry, sheriff's deputies said.

Damage was estimated at more than $100,000.

The collision occurred shortly after 4:30 at Railroad Street. Andrew Evans said that as he was crossing the tracks the mechanical crossing guard arm dropped on his 32-wheel rig and it was struck by the train a few seconds later.

Engineer Phillip Patton said he saw the truck-trailer on the tracks and began braking about a quarter of a mile west of Nogales. He wasn't able to stop the train until it was about a half mile east of crossing, however.

Deputies said debris from the crash littered the intersection which was expected to remain closed until it was cleared late this morning by heavy equipment summoned there.

The truck driver was outside the vehicle, attempting to lift the crossing arm from the rig, when he saw the train approaching and eventually crash into the truck, trailer and aluminum furnace.

Faces another charge

Roosevelt Williams, already facing murder and felonious assault charges, now also must answer an unrelated robbery charge.

Williams, 25, of Pomona, was bound over by Pomona Municipal Court Judge Thomas Nuss on robbery and an additional assault charge connected to the holdup of the Fair Motel, 1770 W. Holt Ave., Pomona, on May 27. His arraignment was set for Oct. 31.

On Oct. 28 Williams will enter his plea in Superior Court to the murder and assault charges in connection with an incident in which a 7-year-old Pomona boy was shot and killed. The victim was killed by an errant police bullet fired during Williams' arrest. Williams himself was wounded and has been in the jail ward of County-USC Medical Center since the June 10 incident.

HONG KONG (AP) — The 64-nation International Federation of Air Line Pilots Associations (IFALPA) says many of its 55,000 members are in favor of a 48-hour worldwide airline strike unless the United Nations convenes a session to discuss anti-hijacking measures.

The response of the IFALPA members was prompted by the murder of Juergen Schumann, captain of the West German Lufthansa Airlines jet that was seized by four terrorists over southern Europe last week and flown 6,000 miles before its passengers were freed in a commando-style action early Tuesday.

Prisoner uses guile to escape

By TONY AULT
PB Staff Writer

Valley law enforcement agencies this morning continued their search for a 28-year-old Fontana man who managed to escape from the West End sheriff's substation jail in Ontario Tuesday night and drive away in his own car parked nearby.

Sought for escape is Jose Peredez, who was arrested earlier Tuesday by Ontario police on a warrant for burglary and being under the influence of a drug.

Peredez is described as a Latin, 5 feet 7, 170 pounds with black hair and brown eyes.

At the time of his escape, he was wearing blue denim pants, a shirt and jacket.

Sheriff's deputies said Peredez was brought into the jail for booking by Ontario police about 5 p.m. Deputies said the inmate was booked and issued a set of jail clothing similar to the clothing issued to jail trusties. Deputies said they then allowed Peredez to make several phone calls from the jail booking area.

As the prisoner was making the calls, a bus with other prisoners drove into the jail complex and deputies escorted the prisoners to and from the bus.

During the activity, a sheriff's spokesman said, Peredez slipped out the back door, seemingly unnoticed, by deputies.

Deputies said it is believed that Peredez then jumped a fence or the wall surrounding the sheriff's parking lot behind the jail and walked several blocks down to the FedMart parking lot on Mountain Avenue, where Ontario police had initially arrested him and left his car.

Deputies said the prisoner then drove away from the area.

About 10:30 p.m., the prisoner's car was discovered parked on E. Holt Boulevard, but a search of the area did not reveal the escapee.

Deputies said that the prisoner is not considered armed or dangerous, but citizens upon seeing anyone matching his description should immediately contact the nearest law enforcement agency or the West End sheriff's substation.

Deputies said that Peredez has a tattoo of a skeleton on his left arm.

Carter, Torrijos clarify the treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. negotiators of the Panama Canal treaty said today a clarification worked out by President Carter and Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos may help public understanding of the pact, but need not be incorporated into the document.

The statement of understanding issued by the two leaders last Friday did not carry their signatures because "it added nothing to the treaty itself," former Ambassador Sol M. Linowitz told the Senate Foreign Relations committee.

He repeated the White House position that there never was any difference of views between Carter and Torrijos as to the meaning of the treaty's provisions for future U.S. defense and use of the canal.

Questions about interpretation of those provisions arose when the word "intervention" was injected into the debate over the treaty. But neither he nor fellow negotiator Ellsworth Bunker ever used that word, Linowitz said.

Linowitz and Bunker were invited to appear before the Senate panel to explain and defend the clarifying statement that Carter hopes will secure the treaty's approval by the Senate.

Although they said there was no need to make it part of the treaty, some senators said they thought it should be given more official status.

"It seems to me that the American people would be better satisfied if this understanding were formalized in some way," said Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho. "I see nothing to be lost by that, and I think people would be reassured to know that both countries understand the meaning of the treaty the same way."

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., said he was "sympathetic" to Church's view, but said the Senate should resist demands that it attach "reservations" to the pact when it is ratified. "I hope we'll recognize that these demands for reservations are just another way of trying to destroy the treaty," Javits said.

As the hearing began, aides distributed copies of a report that Panama's chief negotiator, Romulo Escobar Bethancourt, had told a news conference in Panama on Tuesday that there is no difference in the U.S. and Panamanian views of the treaty's security terms.

Escobar was quoted as saying both countries recognized that after the canal is turned over to Panama in the year 2000, each will have a right to defend the canal's neutrality.

INVADER

Startled airmen at Charleston AFB, S.C., found this 6-foot 2-inch alligator wandering along a runway. He apparently sauntered onto the base from a nearby swamp. After a hose down to cool him by Sgt. Danny Bollinger, Air Police turned the reptile over to state fish and game officials.

Huge fireball over Texas

DALLAS (AP) — An enormous fireball that seared the evening skies over Texas and Arkansas and provoked hundreds of phone calls in five states apparently disintegrated without hitting earth.

The light from the fireball, believed to be a meteor, was so intense that that residents in three Texas cities hundreds of miles apart swore it hit near them.

"It lit up my cockpit and I saw it split up into bits and pieces," said Air Force Capt. William Latham, who spotted the fireball while flying a jet at 16,000 feet. He estimated its altitude at 50,000-60,000 feet.

But astronomers gave conflicting opinions on whether the fireball struck the ground or burned up in the air.

The fireball was sighted at about 8:15 p.m. CDT in portions of Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Missouri. One witness in Texarkana, Tex., described the object "as big as a house." Other pilots in Louisiana and Texas also spotted it.

"It was definitely a meteor," said Joe Patterson, an astronomer at the McDonald Observatory in Fort Davis, Tex. "When one is that large and that bright, it's likely to have reached the ground intact."

But Col. Gary Gosdin, spokesman for Shepard Air Force Base officials, said the object burned up and exploded in a bright flash in the air.

Federal Aviation Administration officials in Fort Worth said their radar tracked the object across the sky, but said it "fell apart" in the air.

Law enforcement officials, newspapers and radio stations were swamped with calls from witnesses.

"The typical caller said, 'There has been an airplane crash a couple of miles from my home,'" said Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman Jim Robinson, who said police began checking for airplane crashes until the widespread sightings were reported.

"It was coming down real slow and big chunks of it were falling off. It was too slow to be a shooting star. It was a plane on fire and it must have crashed out by Randolph Air Force Base," one frantic caller told a San Antonio newspaper.

In Arkansas, a state police spokesman denied reports that the object struck the ground. Police at Dumas, Ark., searched a forest near Oakwood Bayou for about two hours after hearing the reports. They found no trace of the reported object.

A spokesman for the North American Air Defense Command in Colorado Springs, Colo., said, "We are in a peak period for meteor showers in that part of the United States."

He said the object was probably a bolide meteor, which is a large meteor that enters the atmosphere at a very high angle, but often explodes and flashes because of its size and speed.

Slip on galoshes and stomp a grape

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you plan to make wine by crushing grapes barefoot, the Agriculture Department advises that "a clean rubber boot" should be worn and Form 1541 filled out.

In its 1977 yearbook "Gardening For Food and Fun" published today, the department has included a chapter on how to grow grapes and turn them into wine.

Jack Hayes, the editor, said in an interview that "there were a few" eyebrows raised about including the chapter.

"But we decided that a lot of people are interested in this, and there has been a big increase in wine drinking," Hayes said.

Included in the chapter was an explanation about the legality of making wine at home:

"Under federal law the head of a household may make up to 200 gallons of wine a year for family use, but is first required to notify the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms on Form 1541."

The yearbook costs $6.50 and can be ordered from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, or purchased at government bookstores.

Author is cited for contempt

CHICAGO (AP) — Nobel Prize-winning author Saul Bellow has been sentenced to 10 days in jail for failing to make alimony payments to his third wife.

Bellow, 61, did not attend the Circuit Court hearing Tuesday that resulted in the jail sentence. He was granted five days to file an appeal bond which would put off the jail term.

Judge Mary Ann McMorrow handed down the sentence after an attorney for Bellow's former wife, Susan Glassman Bellow, told her that Bellow has not made any of the $2,500-per-month alimony payments that were scheduled to begin last April. The judge said she might drop the jail sentence if Bellow agrees to pay the $11,150 he owes his former wife.

Their divorce was granted in 1968 at the request of Mrs. Bellow, who cited desertion and mental cruelty as her grounds. She agreed to a $150,000 property settlement and was granted custody of their child, Daniel, now 13.

But a judge later ruled that the property settlement was based on "fraud and misrepresentation" by Bellow and the settlement was nullified. Bellow was ordered to pay $2,500 a month in alimony, plus $650 a month in child support, $400 more than he had been paying.

Mrs. Bellow's attorney said Bellow earned a total of $461,303 in 1976 from roylaties on his books, his salary as a University of Chicago professor and the $160,000 of prize money he received with the Nobel Prize for literature.

A trial to decide whether the now-temporary alimony payments should be made permanent is scheduled to begin Nov. 12.

Poet's neighbors don't understand

WOLCOTT, Vt. (AP) — Like a spurned suitor, poet and author David Budbill sits in the one-room hillside cabin where he writes. He puzzles over the irate reaction of his neighbors to a book of poems meant to pay tribute to their inventiveness, creativity and backwoods genius.

The residents of Wolcott, a tiny north central Vermont town, inspired many of the characters in Budbill's book, "The Chain Saw Dance," which tells of the residents of a fictional town called Judevine.

His tales of Arnie, Anson and Old Man Pike quickly made the rounds via the town's unofficial library — a shelf beneath the counter of the local garage. Residents thought Judevine was Wolcott, and they didn't like it.

Within four months of the book's February publication, tales drifted up the hill to Budbill, his wife, Lois, who illustrated the book, and their two children of irate neighbors and feelings of betrayal from those he had intended to praise.

Residents complained of the book's "vulgar language" and "explicit sexual overtones."

One angry woman demanded Budbill's resignation as chairman of the town school board. Another denounced the Vermont Council on the Arts for its involvement in funding the book's publication.

"There is a lot of ugliness and a lot of beauty in Vermont," says Budbill, an intense man of 37 whose words rush like cold air beneath a drafty door.

"What I'm trying to say in some of the poems is that people shouldn't jump to conclusions about what is ugly and what is beautiful. They are terms that need redefining."

Beauty, for Budbill, is found in an old washtub transformed into a flower bed for marigolds outside the local garage, and the abandoned railroad boxcar that serves as a shed in a Wolcott backyard.

But mostly, it is found in his neighbors, whom he views as nothing short of heroes who in his eight years here have taught him of their genius for survival.

"The people here have been very good to me," he says sadly. "They've treated me very well and I feel very close to them."

The book tells stories of Hermie, who lived in a bread truck at the edge of Bear Swamp, of Anson, thrown off his father's home for back taxes, and of Arnie, with his dripping nose and ragged jacket.

Among the rusty trailers, penny fuses and dripping noses are the ski bunnies, white house and pretty barns of Vermont's postcard image.

"Judevine and Wolcott are not the same place," Budbill says emphatically. "The people in the book resemble the people here — they have the same sense of humor, the same ability to take a difficult life and make it enjoyable."

Having viewed "The Chain Saw Dance" as a book of love poems, Budbill says he is confused and hurt that it was so misunderstood.

But his loyalty to his neighbors is unwavering.

Before 30 critics and supporters at a school board meeting last spring, Budbill apologized. But he stayed on the board despite opposition, anger and even threats.

"You can't go through an experience like this without something happening. I thought very hard for a long time about leaving Wolcott, but I don't want to go.

"I don't want to live anywhere else — I have grown roots on my feet and when I try to pull them up, it hurts."

"Driving Home at Night"
From "The Chain Saw Dance"
By David Budbill

Midnight. Outside the car
it is 15 below.
A foot of new snow.
The village is deserted, dark,
except for eight street lamps
and the light in the window
at Jerry's Garage that says:
BEER.
The smell of woodsmoke seeps
into the car.
Judevine, ugliest town
in northern Vermont, except
maybe East Judevine.
Disheveled, wretched,
Judevine — my town —
is beautiful
in the night.
It is beautiful because its couple hundred souls
have given up their fears,
their poverty and worry.
For a few hours now they know
only the oblivion of sleep
and the town lies quiet
in their ease.

PHOENIX (AP) — Iranian Ambassador Ardeshir Zahedi says he roamed the streets of Phoenix earlier this week, looking for a restaurant where he worked as a busboy nearly 30 years ago.

"I walked around downtown trying to find the restaurant where I worked as a dishwasher in 1948," he said. "I can't remember the name of the place. It's probably gone, but I hunted for it Sunday and Monday."

While in the United States as a student in the 1940s, Zahedi said he had jobs ranging from the steel mills of Gary, Ind., to the railroads in Alaska.

"We were on the road and broke most of the time," he said. "I can't remember how many times I've shaved in the restroom of a service station and slept beside the road in a sleeping bag.

"I came to learn about your country and that seemed to be the best way," he said.

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — The Rev. Clennon King and his Divine Mission have been given until Friday to come up with $550 in back rent for the mission's building.

Otherwise, the mission will be evicted.

Malone replied, "Miracles do happen."

Susie M. Ellis, administrator of the Ellis estate, which owns the property, told the court she did not want King's rent money.

"I just want him out," she said.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — A closed-door, pretrial conference on divorce petitions filed by Gov. George C. Wallace and his wife, Cornelia, has been set for Dec. 5.

PRESIDENT JIMMY CARTER will be the honored guest at a fund-raiser for the Democratic National Committee Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles.

Called the "Western Salute to the President," the dinner will include members of the DNC's national finance council and its executive committee, cabinet officers, White House senior staff members and Kenneth M. Curtis, the Democratic Party chairman.

Dinner committee headquarters may be reached by calling (213) 556-2096.

THE SAN BERNARDINO COUNTY DEMOCRATIC CENTRAL COMMITTEE and the RIVERSIDE COUNTY DEMOCRATIC CENTRAL COMMITTEE will meet Oct. 27, from 6 to 8 p.m., at 303 W. Third St., San Bernardino.

Purpose of the joint meeting is to conduct a public hearing on proposed recommendations of the Winograd Commission. The discussions will center around the presidential primary delegate selection process to the National Convention prior to the National Committee meeting.

After the hearing, the San Bernardino County group will hold its regular meeting. Both meetings are open to the public.

ASSEMBLYMAN BILL MCVITTIE, D-65th Dist., Upland, will speak at a dinner meeting of the Mt. Baldy Chapter of the California Credit Union League Oct. 25.

The meeting will be held at Henri's Restaurant at 7 p.m.

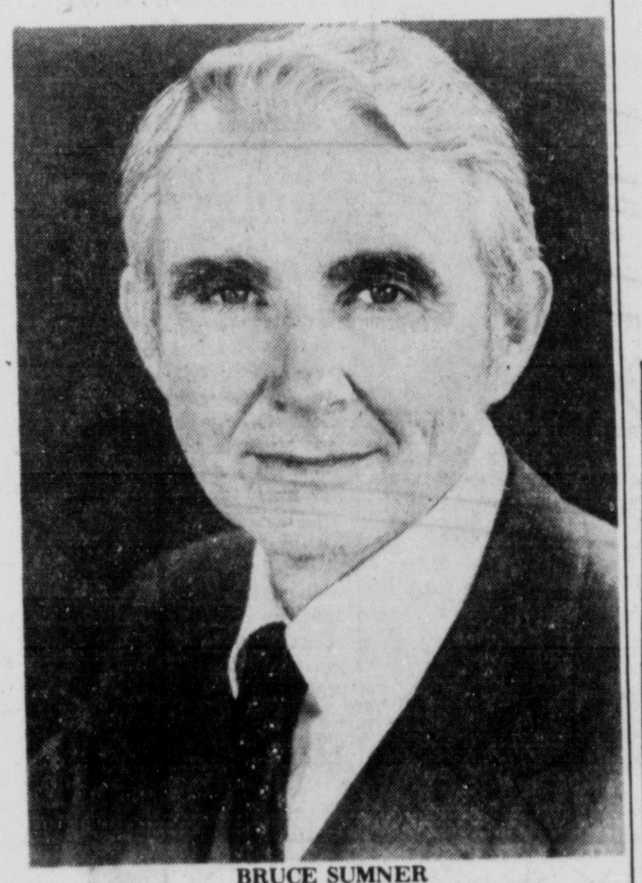
McVittie will bring credit union members up to date on legislation affecting credit unions which was enacted during the first half of the 1977-78 session of the state Legislature.

MCVITTIE will speak at a meeting of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce Nov. 3, beginning at 8:15 a.m. Chamber meetings are held at 123 W. D St.

SEN. H.L. "BILL" RICHARDSON, R-25th Dist., Arcadia, has introduced legislation to provide an automatic three-year term for persons who threaten or harm witnesses or victims of crime.

"The problem of threatening and intimidating victims and witnesses has become a grave one," said Richardson. "Threats and actual reprisals by criminals, or their cohorts, are making it increasingly risky for victims to press charges and for witnesses to give testimony. Those who take the risk live in constant fear of a convict's early release under present permissive sentences."

Richardson's bill does not apply only to threats or reprisals against victims and witnesses but also to those against their relatives and associates. The three-year term will be consecutive and in addition to any other term for which a perpetrator has been sentenced.



BRUCE SUMNER

"I am scared, upset and tired of being ripped off."

According to Orange County Superior Court Judge Bruce Sumner, a candidate for the office of state attorney general, this is the feeling of millions of Californians today.

"They are afraid to walk the streets at night, upset when they watch their courts in operation and feel that fraud is too much a way of life," said Sumner.

"The average citizen becomes more cynical than proud of courts after observing the seemingly endless motions, postponements, continuances and literally years of appeal that characterize both criminal and civil trials."

Sumner, 53, a native of Bozeman, Mont., said he is seeking the Democratic nomination for the office of attorney general because he believes he can give the state the mature and experienced leadership that will not only improve and streamline court operations, but will be tough and unrelenting in dealing with crime.

Sumner served in the state Legislature from 1958 to 1962 during which time he was chairman of the Assembly Judiciary Committee; was a trial judge 12 years; served 10 years as chairman of the California Constitution Revision Commission; was named presiding judge of Orange County Superior Court in 1972; and this year was given a Supreme Court appointment to sit on five cases.

"Because I believe so strongly in what I want to do and that the attorney general's office is the place from which the leadership should come, I have taken a leave of absence without pay from my judgeship and am devoting fulltime to this campaign," said Sumner.

"I want the job, but it is not mine for the asking. The next move is with the people."

Sumner was named Superior Court Judge of the Year in 1972 by the California Trial Lawyers Association. He and his wife, Ginny, and their two children, Scott and Ann, live in Laguna Beach.

California prisoners now have the right to informed consent in all medical experimentation under a bill by Assemblyman Richard Alatorre, D-Los Angeles, which has been signed into law by GOVERNOR BROWN.

Under provisions of the new law, California prisoners can be used in medical experimentation only after they have been told about the risks or benefits of the experiment and have given written informed consent.

The bill, A. B. 1752, insists that prisoners be paid wages comparable to subjects outside prisons, and it establishes a board of three doctors, a pharmacist, two academics and an inmate to determine what research would be permitted.

The bill now gives prisoners protection from unethical and often hazardous medical experimentation, a protection not currently afforded to all Californians.

Assemblyman Herschel Rosenthal, D-Los Angeles, has written a similar bill which would guarantee these same rights to all Californians. This bill is called the Human Experimentation Act.

NEWHALL (AP) — Thieves have stolen five and possibly eight cars from a Chevrolet dealership, Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies reported.

Thieves in a red pick-up truck cut a lock in the chainlink fence around Vince Wiese Chevrolet around 9 p.m. Sunday night, deputies said.

They apparently took four 1978 cars, one 1977 car, and as many as three other vehicles, deputies added.

PLAY EQUIPMENT — The first piece of play equipment has arrived at Weber Park in northwest Pomona and city officials joined the Kiwanis Club of Pomona in checking it out. From left are Joey G. Fuentez Jr., administrative assistant; R.D. Im Hof, chairman of the Kiwanis youth services committee; J. Edgar Adamson; Kiwanis Lt. Gov. Edward J. Weber; and David Johnson, city park superintendent. The equipment will be bought over a three-year period.

County sheriff's hiring practices ruled legal

Los Angeles Superior Court Judge William P. Gray has ruled that written examinations, height and educational standards utilized by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department for hiring deputies do not constitute illegal discrimination, nor do they violate Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 or the U. S. Constitution.

A suit was brought recently as the result of the contention that some of the standards required for entry into the sheriff's department discriminated against Mexican-Americans.

Statistics during the hearing indicated that over the past three years, 16 to 23 percent of the newly hired deputies were Mexican-Americans, said Sheriff Peter Pitchess.

He added, "The (court's) decision has, in effect, assured that the sheriff's department will not be tied to a 'quota system' in the hiring of minority candidates."

The sheriff said that the plaintiffs in their suit claimed that the written qualification test was in violation of the U. S. Constitution and Civil Rights Act because Mexican-Americans as a class did poorer than whites.

In addition to an injunction prohibiting use of written tests and minimum height standards, the plaintiffs also sought several million dollars in back pay for applicants who failed the tests plus a quota hiring order that required that at least 33 percent of all new deputies be Mexican-American, Pitchess said.

Pomona Kiwanis donate Weber Park equipment

Playground equipment for tiny tots has begun arriving at the partially developed Weber Park in northwest Pomona.

The equipment is part of a three-year purchase program by the Kiwanis Club of Pomona, which will donate $4,666 toward the purchase.

Included in the first-year selection are heavy-duty double top rail swings, a stainless steel mainliner slide, and sculptures.

Play apparatus for the second and third years will be mutually agreed upon by both the city and the club in May 1978 and May 1979.

The city will install the preschool equipment.

The city Parks and Recreation Commission took official action this past spring to approve the Kiwanis proposal.

The commission has met with the city's architect, Cashion and Horie, and expects that firm to suggest future pieces for the final two years of the program.

Pomona coordinates local agencies jobs program

The city of Pomona has agreed for the second year to serve as prime agent for six agencies which will receive $505,000 in CETA Title I funds during 1977-78.

The agencies and their allocations include:

—Cal State University, Los Angeles Foundation, Center for Mental Retardation, $26,812.

—State Employment Development Department, $41,494.

—Mexican-American Opportunity Foundation, $269,073.

—North-West College of Medical and Dental Assistants, $32,024.

—Pomona Unified School District, $90,170.

—Sawyer College of Pomona, $45,803.

Cal State will use its allocation to train eight local residents for six months in food service, maintenance-custodial, factory, horticulture or handyman work.

Six persons are expected to complete training, with at least five projected to find jobs.

The local state employment office will use its allocation to find on-the-job training for at least 20 unemployed or disadvantaged persons in the Pomona area for six months. Fourteen are expected to complete the training. Trainees are selected on the basis of success potential, coupled with a need for training.

Employers are selected for contracts on the basis of their abilities to provide training in occupations having sufficient demand and versatility to provide reasonable assurance of continuing employment.

The department expects to find jobs for 13 trainees.

The Mexican-American Opportunity Foundation, to receive the greatest allocation, proposes to provide four months of classroom training, followed by two months of on-site training for at least 11 local persons; work experience for at least 12 persons, 16 to 18 years old, not to exceed one year and 14 adults, not to exceed nine months; and on-the-job training for at least 50 Pomona residents for a six month period.

The classroom training will consist mainly of "English as a Second Language" since the participants will include three Asians and three Latins.

North-West College has agreed to train 10 persons as medical, dental, veterinary or pharmacy assistants, or medical receptionists during the next seven months.

Seven persons are expected to complete training, with at least six finding jobs.

With its allocation, the Pomona school district has agreed to provide work experience in school for 72 disadvantaged youths, 14 to 18 years of age, and work experience — new careers for two others.

Up to 15 percent of the work experience trainees may be high school seniors. Of the 72, two are Asians, 33 are black, 28 Latins, and eight are white. Forty are girls 16 years and older. Thirty participants are educationally deficient and 15 are handicapped.

The in-school program is designed to help youths from low income families to stay in school. By providing part-time work, coupled with counseling and — when necessary — related remedial education and vocational training, the program will strive to increase the holding power of the schools.

During a six month period, Sawyer College will train up to 15 persons in stenographic, general clerical, or assistant bookkeeper positions. At least 11 persons are expected to complete the training, with 10 projected to be placed in jobs.

Shirley Smith, city administrative assistant, explained the CETA Title I programs cover 649 Pomona residents in classroom training, work experience in and out of school for youths, on-the-job training, and manpower services.

"The programs are beneficial to our residents," she said. "They are really worthwhile and are monitored by our staff monthly."

The term, "prime agent" as pertaining to Pomona is non-existent outside of Los Angeles County, she added.

The county was late starting the programs in 1975-76, and thus had $16 million in surplus funds to carry over to 1976-77, she added. That money was part of the past year's funding, and since it is gone the county cut the 1977-78 allocations by 25 percent, she noted.

She explained the county selected Pomona as a prime agent for its own residents because before 1976-77 the program was "exceedingly difficult to administer.

"The city staff knows what agencies we have in our area and their needs," she said. "Previously, we didn't know how those agencies were performing, how many people they were helping, or about their programs."

She said Joe Korpsak, assistant to the city administrator, worked with county officials in establishing the mechanism of the program before he left the city job.

CPR course offered

The Pomona Adult School will offer a Red Cross certificated cardio-pulmonary resuscitation course Nov. 15 and 17 from 6 to 10 p.m. at Yorba Elementary School.

Course material teaches how to restore heartbeat and breathing in emergencies and increases awareness of early warning signs, risk factors and symptoms of the potential cardiac arrest victim.

John Clinton will teach the eight-hour course.

Registration will be conducted in the classroom or in the Pomona Adult School office at 800 S. Garey Ave. Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Monday through Thursday from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Additional information may be obtained by calling 623-5251, ext. 250 or 249.

ENERGY

The President

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said today that the performance of Congress this year and his first 12 months in office, at least in domestic matters, will be measured by the energy program that Congress produces.

Carter predicted that his administration would ultimately be successful in winning congressional enactment of his energy program, which won approval in the House but which has been battered in the Senate.

Carter told the chairman of a special House energy committee that a "balanced" program would be one that meets conservation goals and avoids a run on the budget.

"I think what we do on energy will determine the success or failure of the year of congressional work, I think, in the minds of the American people," Carter told Rep. Thomas L. Ashley, D-Ohio, in an Oval Office meeting.

"I think it's legitimate to measure the success of Congress and my own administration, at least in domestic affairs, on what happens to energy," Carter said.

Ashley believes Carter should give a House-Senate conference committee a free hand to work out a compromise energy bill and says the President should not close his mind to possible compromises or try to impose too many conditions.

The Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter should give a House-Senate conference committee a free hand to work out a compromise energy bill, says one of the President's top allies on that panel.

Rep. Thomas L. Ashley, D-Ohio, says the President should not close his mind to possible compromises or try to impose too many conditions.

As the panel prepared to hold its first session, Ashley said the conference committee, of which he is a co-chairman, must have as much flexibility as possible to fashion a final bill.

On Monday, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., leader of the Senate conferees, said that President Carter appears unwilling to accept any compromise energy legislation that would lift price controls from natural gas, even gradually.

Jackson said that as a result, "there is a chance there will be no bill on natural gas" this year.

Presidential spokesman Jody Powell agreed with Jackson's assessment that the White House would not support any compromise leading to removal of gas price controls.

Silent but cheerful classroom

DENISE WINSHIP TEACHING

CARLSBAD (AP) — The classroom at Magnolia Elementary school is silent. There are no measured tones of instruction, no pupils' whispers. But learning goes on, the deaf teacher communicating easily with her seven deaf students.

The students have been part of a special learning program for five years. This fall, a deaf teacher was added to the staff of three who have normal hearing.

Denise Winship, 23, the deaf teacher, can't recall ever having heard a thing.

"I've always wanted to teach," she says of her first job, "but I didn't think it would be to deaf children."

"The rapport is fantastic," says Kathy Hoste, a fellow teacher. "She's someone the pupils can identify with. She tells them, 'I know what you're going through,' and they realize it."

Mrs. Winship, deaf since she had spinal meningitis at 3, earned a bachelor's degree from California State University at Northridge. She also holds special teaching credentials in elementary education and special education and is completing a master's degree at Northridge.

She also teaches — without pay — 20 deaf adults and young people each Thursday at the Carlsbad school.

She teaches with the help of finger spelling and facial gestures as well as sign language and lip reading.

Deputy California attorney general William Winship says his wife is "dynamite, dynamite." Until they met, Winship never knew a deaf person.

Raise legal question in girl's death

LONDON (AP) — Doctors switched off the life-support machine for a young woman "clinically dead" after a brutal sexual attack, and the action has raised a complicated legal issue of whether her assailant can be tried for murder.

In a decision reminiscent of the Karen Ann Quinlan case, the victim's anguished parents and fiance gave their permission for doctors to turn off a respirator and allow her to die, the local coroner in the northern English city of Bradford reported Thursday.

Some legal authorities said that, if and when apprehended, her assailant could charge that the physicians who disconnected her life support were responsible for her death.

Carol Wilkinson, 20, was attacked Monday while on her way to her job as a bakery sales clerk in Bradford. Her assailant flung her over a wall, sexually assaulted her and battered her about the head. Her facial features were obliterated beyond recognition. She was robbed of one pound — $1.75.

Doctors said Miss Wilkinsion was "clinically dead" when she was admitted to the hospital emergency room, but the hospital staff attached her to a respirator that breathed for her and drugs were administered to aid her heart, kidney and circulatory functions.

Detective Chief Superintendent Denis Hoban, in charge of the hunt for her attacker, said Thursday she could not have survived her injuries.

"There were discussions between the surgeon, the coroner and myself. Carol's parents and the boy she was to marry were fully involved and told everything," he said.

"They realized and accepted that the injuries she had received were such that there was no way she could have lived.

"There is no doubt in my mind at all that her assailant meant to kill her, and did so. I am satisfied the man left her for dead quite deliberately," he said.

Doctors administered a variety of tests to determine brain stem activity because guidelines issued by the British Conference of Royal Medical Colleges and Faculties provide that life-support systems may be withdrawn if tests confirm brain death.

All of the tests showed irreversible brain death.

"When they told us the final test had proved there were no signs of life at all, we had to let them switch off the machine," said the victim's mother, Audrey Wilkinson.

Miss Quinlan survived without the respirator and is still in a coma in a Morris Plains, N.J., nursing home.

San Dimas dam bid

An apparent low bid of $1,183,363 had been turned in by G. B. Cooke of South El Monte for the improvement of the San Dimas Dam in the foothills overlooking the valley.

The offer was the lowest of four submitted Monday to the Los Angeles County Flood Control District.

The bid will be given a quick check as to its form and legality by the district engineers and then the Los Angeles County supervisors will award the contract. Supervisor Peter Schabarum said the action probably will be a formality.

The project includes modification of the dam's spillway to increase its capacity for controlling storm waters more effectively. The district also plans to stabilize the dam's east abutment and to install inclinometers to monitor earth movement along the sides of the dam.

Work on the project is expected to take about a year and financing is included in the current budget of the flood control district.

One who got away, away, away...

PONTIAC, Ill. (AP) — Harold Hemminger is "the one that got away" — over and over again. He is back in jail after four years on the lam, awaiting trial on charges of escape, of course.

"Harry's one of the best jailbreakers there ever was," said an officer assigned to keep him from slipping out of the courtroom in an appearance before Circuit Judge William Caisley.

It is hard to find a jailer or prisoner who won't smile when talking about Hemminger. He's never taken a hostage or harmed a guard during any of his escapes. "Hell," he said with a grin during an interview. "I ain't out to hurt anybody."

Hemminger, 36, was recaptured earlier this month in Viroqua, Wis., after spending four years "hunting and raising kids" when he was supposed to be in Pontiac Correctional Center in Illinois.

He escaped in 1973 after being sentenced a year earlier to a three-to-10-year term for burglary.

In 1971, Hemminger escaped from the maximum security facility at Waupun, Wis., where he also was serving a sentence for burglary.

It is hard to tell how many jails Hemminger has escaped from. A prison official says five. Hemminger says four. And the Vernon County, Wis., sheriff who arrested him said "jails all over the country" had reported him missing.

Jailed several times for nonviolent crimes, Hemminger said he had never run away unless he found it "absolutely necessary."

He said he escaped once in Wisconsin out of hunger. "I mean, I get hungry, too," he said. "And that damned sheriff was a belly robber."

Hemminger, who weighs about 150 pounds, said he had wasted away to 110 pounds in the jail. So he took down the ceiling light in his cell, knocked a hole in the ceiling and went to get something to eat. He never returned.

How about Leavenworth, Kan.?

"I was framed," Hemminger said. "The courts should have let me go but they didn't. So it was necesasary to leave."

That time Hemminger was put to work loading scraps of metal into barrels, which were then taken to a junkyard outside the prison walls. Hemminger squeezed into a barrel and was loaded onto the truck.

"I kicked the lid off and jumped off in downtown Leavenworth," he recalled.

When arrested most recently, Hemminger tried to escape by climbing onto the roof of his rural home, but there was nowhere to run. On the ground below him were about 80 coon dogs, which he had been training and hoped to sell, and the two children he said were born during his years as a fugitive.

The escapee said he had lived pretty casually. "I hunted every night ... after the first year," he said. "I figured they'd just stopped looking."

ROOM FOR ONE MORE? — Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau appears to be asking Queen Elizabeth II to share her umbrella during the queen's Canadian visit. The queen has been appealing for unity in Quebec where French separatists are seeking a separate nation.

Capital ideas

WASHINGTON (AP) — By a coincidence surely not intended, the day the House voted not to consider a reform commission's recommendations for improving its practices, its Judiciary Committee approved a measure to set higher ethical requirements — in the executive branch.

The bill would require officials to disclose their financial affairs more fully and to refrain from using their government contacts for private interest after leaving office.

Rep. Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., the chairman, said that, "with growing public skepticism of our government officials, it is necessary that we move very rapidly to enact safeguards against conflicts of interest by officials in the federal executive branch."

Rodino, incidentally, voted to consider the proposed House standards and procedures.

When Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W.Va., asked the House to agree to a conference on a bill to admit bobsleds and luges duty-free, members sat up and listened.

It wasn't that they were that keenly interested in winter sports, but that the Senate in its freewheeling style had tacked 169 pages of energy legislation onto the minor bill.

Then again, Staggers was having trouble pronouncing luges. He gave it several variations, while the House chuckled, and the clerk, reading the measure, had still another twist.

The dictionary says a luge is a small sled of Swiss origin and that it rhymes with rouge.

Cambodian refugees flocking to Vietnam

EDITOR'S NOTE — Horst Faas, the Associated Press photographer and writer who won a Pulitzer Prize for his coverage of the Vietnam War, recently returned to the country with a German tourist group.

An AP News Special
By HORST FAAS
Associated Press Writer

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — Some 60,000 Cambodians have been granted asylum in Vietnam in the past year and are living in desperate conditions on the outskirts of Saigon and in the provinces west of the former South Vietnamese capital, diplomatic sources in Hanoi say.

At least 16,000 of these refugees are trying to leave Vietnam and have asked the Hanoi office of the U.N. High Commissioner For Refugees for help.

Most of the refugees are reported to have been small traders, businessmen, manufacturers or employes in shops, business houses and manufacturing concerns.

Most are said to be from towns from which the entire population was moved forcibly to the countryside after the Communist takeover in 1975.

"The Vietnamese government has been looking after the Cambodian refugees despite its own food shortages and economic difficulties," one diplomat said. "The Cambodians are receiving rice rations that just keep them alive and are under the ration of 14 kilos (30.8 pounds) every Vietnamese gets per month."

The source also said the Cambodians are allowed to work as small businessmen and vendors.

"That means they can peddle their last belongings to stay alive," he said.

A diplomat from a nonaligned country who is stationed in Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital, reported during a visit to Hanoi that he and his colleagues know almost nothing about what is going on in the country.

"We have to live in a hotel in downtown Phnom Penh which we can never leave," he said. "The food is delivered to us from the outside. We cannot even go out on the pavement outside the hotel."

Western observers in Hanoi say they have practically no information about the situation along the Cambodian-Vietnamese frontier. Last August, some Vietnamese newspapers reported clashes along the border. But in a visit with a German tourist group to a province about 20 miles from the Cambodian frontier, this reporter could see no sign of military activity or preparedness.

Cambodia and Vietnam have full diplomatic relations. But diplomats in Vietnam say they believe the Vietnamese government has not returned any refugees to Cambodia.

"In this respect the Vietnamese have acted with more respect for basic human rights than some of the other Southeast Asian nations," one Western diplomat said.

He was referring to governments that have refused to admit refugees from the Indochinese countries.

Of the 16,000 Cambodian refugees who have asked the U.N. commissioner for help, 3,000 have received entry visas for France. Seventy have received West German visas, and U.N. officials believe West Germany may take 150 more. Belgium also will take 150.

"We have stacks of requests in our desks," said an official of the West German embassy in Hanoi.

The exodus from Vietnam to France, which has received some 1,000 refugees from Indochina each month since the end of the Vietnam War in April, 1975, came to a halt recently. The Vietnamese government canceled Air France's landing rights in Saigon — which the Communist regime calls Ho Chi Minh City — because of the French goverment's refusal to close its consulate there.

U.N. officials here hope the flights will resume soon.

Try a different parks tour next

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tired of fighting crowds at the Washington Monument? Too jaded for the Grand Canyon? If so, the National Park Service invites you to visit the Saugus Iron Works.

The major attractions are not the only government sites for tourists to visit, the service says. There are lesser-known places. Some of them are very, very lesser known.

Take, for example, the iron works. On this national historic site in Saugus, Mass., the first integrated iron works in North America has been reconstructed. Your eyes can feast on a furnace, a forge, and a rolling and slitting mill.

On your return home, you can describe the works to your friends without fear of learning they've already seen it. The iron works definitely does not attract as many visitors as the Statue of Liberty.

If iron isn't your bag, try the Fort Union Trading Post, a national historical site straddling the North Dakota-Montana border. It celebrates the principal fur trading depot for the Upper Missouri region from 1829 to 1867.

Admittedly, the view does not match that of Mount Rushmore. All that remains of this frontier outpost are crumbling foundations. But you won't have to battle throngs of hot and sweaty tourists.

The park service maintains 173 national historic sites, created either by act of Congress or presidential proclamation to preserve areas of America's past.

The park service can provide you with the names of all the historical sites maintained at taxpayer expense. Not all are obscure. Included in this classification, for example, is the White House.

Then there's Mar-A-Lago in Palm Beach, Fla., billed in a government brochure as a "private mansion representative of the affluent society's way of life in the 1920s."

Alas, the same brochure says the mansion "is not open to the public."

This is only proper. What could be more "representative of the affluent society's way of life" than snubbing summer hordes of tourists with screaming kids?

Actually, the huge estate, built for $8 million in 1927, is simply too expensive for even the government to keep open.

One home you can enter is that of the late Augustus Saint-Gaudens, the turn-of-the-century sculptor of American heroes. The New Hampshire site memorializes his studio and gardens.

A journey here can provide you with conversational one-upsmanship for years when you casually cite Saint-Gaudens' works. Even an Interior Department employe admitted Saint-Gaudens "is not as well known as Michaelangelo."

Pomona school board OKs three children's centers

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

Pomona school board Tuesday night approved a plan to establish children's centers at Yorba, Arroyo and Madison elementary schools in a major overhaul of the troubled program.

Approval came on a 3-2 vote with trustees Frances Livingston and Eugene Whitlock dissenting.

Whitlock earlier had said he supported one central location for a main children's center, at Lincoln Elementary School, and was opposed to the three-site plan because financing was not available.

The plan introduced to the board calls for the present main center at Madison Elementary School to be relocated on the campus in a site closer to the school's main buildings.

The main center has been the scene both last spring and in recent weeks of numerous gunshots, with several bullets being fired into the buildings during non-operating hours.

District officials are hopeful that by moving the main center closer to the school buildings such incidents will cease. At present the main center is set apart from the other school buildings by a playground.

District Supt. Charles Carpenter told the board that early plans call for the establishment of the three centers with relocatable buildings at the sites. He believes the district can operate and develop the three sites at a cost not much greater than the operation and development of the one main center proposed by Whitlock.

The present children's center program is composed of nine sites throughout the district with many centers located in rentals at church buildings.

Officials indicated Tuesday that by establishing the three main centers, access to a center capable of handling more children would be improved and could conceivably reduce the 301 children presently on the waiting list for enrollment at the centers.

In a memo to the board, Assistant Supt. for Educational Services Ralph Taylor said, "In terms of cost effectiveness there will be a savings to the program in terms of greater utilization of staff and monies being applied to the purchase of a building rather than their rental."

Trustee C. J. Mendoza was assured by staff that cost for the program would not impact the general fund of the district, with all expenses being financed through the child development tax.

The Yorba site has a large amount of available space, is convenient to the San Bernardino Freeway and is expected to draw students from Harrison, North San Antonio and San Jose schools.

Arroyo, officials reasoned, will draw its students from Arroyo, Roosevelt and Kellogg schools with the possibility of establishing the center on the former site of the Barbara Greenwood Kindergarten building. This could create some space problems at the school if and when the current inadequate kindergarten facilities at Arroyo are replaced. Children from Diamond Bar would also be placed at Arroyo, but Diamond Bar children have never composed even 1 percent of the program's makeup.

The Madison site is located conveniently, said officials, to Alcott, Lexington and Hamilton schools and will enroll a large number of Spanish-speaking students. Emphasis on Spanish will be placed on the staffing at the center.

The administration is expected to come back to the board in the coming weeks with a funding proposal.

SPIDER'S LACE

This is one piece of the lacy, thick, white spider web Mrs. Dorothy Finke of 1662 Elaine St., Pomona, awoke Tuesday morning to find on her front lawn. It looked fragile, she said, but really it was quite thick. A La Verne resident said she found the same webs draped over her porch light Tuesday morning. Last week, San Francisco was littered with the filmy, white webs which experts said was the work of millions of baby spiders. Mrs. Finke said it appeared the webs had floated down from the sky and literally covered her front lawn.

Pomona City Council

Progressive taxing system considered for bingo games

By GEORGE MacLAREN
PB Staff Writer

The Pomona City Council has decided to look at a sliding scale of taxing the gross receipts of bingo operators in the city.

The bingo ordinance, adopted by the council Oct. 10, provides for a 10 percent tax on the gross receipts of each bingo operation.

But City Clerk Larry Thomas last week pointed out that four organizations will make money, while two will show minus net after the tax.

Based on reports filed between April 30 and June 30, the Church of All Faiths reported a gross revenue of $84,904.37, a net revenue of $27,049.17, and a 10 percent tax of the gross revenue of $8,490.44. That resulted in a net after the tax of $18,558.73.

On the other hand, the Eagles Lodge during the same period reported a gross of $4,563.45, a net of $338.31, and a 10 percent tax of $456.34, with a minus net of $118.03 after the tax.

The VFW reported a gross revenue of $6,178.25, a net of only $414.42, a 10 percent tax of $617.83, and a minus net after tax of $203.41.

Thomas explained that for the largest operator the tax amounted to 30 percent of the net profit, and to more than 100 percent of the net profit of two of the fraternal organization.

"This tax, as applied to some operators, is confiscatory," he said.

Thomas said he believes the intent of the Legislature was that the maximum profit derived from a bingo operation should be devoted to charitable purposes, "and thus I recommend that the city tax be eliminated or kept to the barest minimum commensurate with our cost of administration."

Councilwoman Georgia Grove said Monday night that "We've an ordinance to enforce. To enforce it takes manpower. Manpower requires money."

Councilman Adrian Wright suggested a sliding scale of taxing with the largest organization paying the largest percentage of tax. "Just like income tax," he said.

"That's discrimination," Mrs. Grove countered.

Councilman G. Stanton Selby tended to go along with Wright's suggestion.

"That would put us into quite an auditing position," said Mayor Charles Bader.

Wright moved to hold the matter over for two weeks, while a sliding scale is formulated.

The motion passed.

Chino crime rate increases after police crackdown ends

By BOB SWETNAM
PB Staff Writer

A followup report on a recent police crackdown on crime in Chino shows that crime incidents have crept back up slightly since the program was stopped.

Police Chief Gerald Doyle told the City Council Tuesday night that crime had risen 13 percent during a 90-day period following the police department's discontinuance of a high profile program that drastically cut crime in that city between February and May.

The City Council had requested the police program after several incidents of youth and gang-related crimes were committed near City Hall.

Tuesday's report indicated that effects of the program were still being felt within the community.

While serious crimes decreased 29 percent during the original crackdown, they were still down significantly from the period which preceeded the program, said officials.

During the post-program period which ended Aug. 16, officials said one homicide was reported, no rapes, 17 robberies, 60 assaults, 207 burglaries, 140 larcenies, and 22 auto thefts.

Robberies were up 70 percent over the high profile period, assaults were up 9 percent, burglaries up 23 percent, larceny up 3 per cent, and auto thefts down 8 percent.

"The total reflects a 13 percent increase in crime since the program's termination," said Doyle. "This increase demonstrates the result of returning to a normal patrol force operation."

During the police crackdown, many officers worked numerous overtime hours. All available officers were put on field assignments to combat street crime.

Doyle said the program had proven a success, but added that police officers could not maintain such a schedule for long periods.

"We expected crime to go back up once we discontinued the program," he added. And although the 13 percent crime hike was not good news for the community, it did indicate the program and its after-effects had made a significant impact, he said.

Doyle reported that crime generally increases during the summer months (the post high-profile period.)

"We can conclude, therefore, that high visibility is a major factor in reducing crime."

Doyle said the addition of five police officers and the newly developed anti-crime methods will probably begin to bring down crime rates in Chino even further.

NEA chief says newspapers must re-define their roles

Admitting he may be accused of committing the "sin of elitism," Newspaper Enterprise Association (NEA) President and Editor Robert Roy Metz Tuesday in Claremont said a liberal arts education and a superior newspaper may not be products for the masses of today.

Metz, 48, speaking at a joint Scripps College and NEA Founders Day celebration, addressed a near-capacity crowd in Garrison Theater.

"The day of constant expansion of newspapers into more and more homes may be past," Metz told the students and alumni observing Scripps College's 50th year and NEA's 75th year.

Ellen Browning Scripps and her half brother, E. W. Scripps, founded NEA in 1902. She founded Scripps College in 1926. NEA now has become the largest feature syndicate in the country.

Discussing "Choices and Chances: The Liberal Arts and American Media," Metz said that "in the print media, there is too much truth for readers to assimilate . . . so they have a tendency to turn it all off.

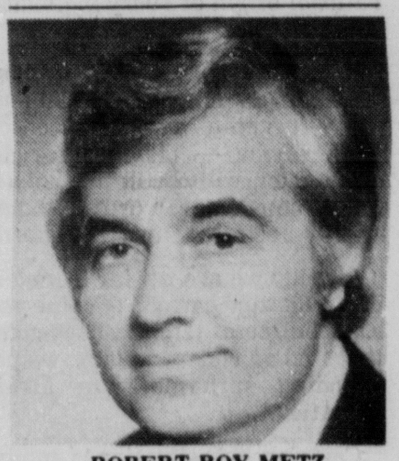
"This is one reason, I believe, why people turn to television. There news is more solid. And, it must be true. There it is in living color," said Metz.

Since the end of World War II, there has been unparalled growth in both private colleges and newspapers, he continued. Now, however, enrollments, subscriptions, grants and contracts are down, and both colleges and newspapers have turned to computers as cost and time savers.

The decision made by many Americans is clear, Metz said. "Quite a few have made it clear they can do without a subscription to a daily newspaper. But, this current, somewhat depressed situation is not all bad.

"We in print media have the task of defining our roles, and it is not an easy one."

Metz said newspapers must decide what is news and then analyze it through positive and negative processes and give readers information on which to make intelligent decisions.



ROBERT ROY METZ

Australian visitor heads home

Retired Town Clerk (city manager) William Downie of Mildura, Australia, wound up a several-day visit to Upland and today flew home.

Mildura is a sister city of Upland. It is located in the arid desert north of Melbourne and is similar to Upland's coastal relationship with Los Angeles, Downie said.

The ramrod straight, 6-foot plus Downie, retired this year as Mildura's chief city executive after 50 years of public service, including 4½ years of service in the Royal Australian Air Force in the South Pacific during World War II.

Mr. and Mrs. Downie now are completing a 15,000-mile, multi-nation, round-the-world trip of four months.

Downie described his city as an oasis city of 40,000 where wine grape growing is the chief industry. Currently, summer is beginning along with average daily high temperatures of 95 degrees, he said.

County OKs Live Oak Dam study

Los Angeles County supervisors Tuesday approved a re-analysis of the Live Oak Dam located northeast of La Verne at a cost of $215,168.

County Flood Control District officials requested the study as part of an ongoing program which re-examines the district's 18 major dams.

Live Oak is the eighth concrete dam to be investigated under the program. The San Dimas Dam and the Big Dalton Dam have already had the periodic checks.

A. E. Bruington, the district's chief engineer, said the project's purpose is to ensure that any changes in the condition of dams are found before damages become extensive.

Ontario council

Guard approved for dangerous corner

By MAE TATE
PB Staff Writer

With nearly 100 parents crowding the council chambers, the Ontario City Council Tuesday conceded the unique speed and configuration problem with the Sixth Street and Grove Avenue intersection, and approved a crossing guard for the location.

The council unanimously approved a $1,320 transfer from the contingency account to the police department budget for the Vineyard School guard. However, admitting that they will probably be faced with similar requests from four other schools in the city, members stipulated that this decision would not necessarily set any precedence for future actions.

Councilman Robert Abel made the motion for approving the crossing guard because he believed the "council should have flexibility to deal with unique situations."

Councilman Homer Briggs, former superintendent of the Ontario-Montclair schools, strongly supported the Vineyard crossing guard, but added "I want to point out here and now to friends from Vineyard and other schools this is, in my opinion, an unique situation. This does not mean that a similar number of students will get the same kind of concern from me."

The council action overruled recommendations from City Engineer Ed James, the city's Safety Commission and the Ontario Police Department for denial.

Last spring, Vineyard Principal Marjorie Gillespie and parents asked the city to provide a crossing guard at the dangerous intersection because of the speeding motorists, insufficient timing on the signal to cross the street, the high incidents of "near misses" between children and motorists, the volume of traffic and children, the lack of sidewalks for children to stay out of the street, and several other safety factors.

The Safety Commission denied that request, but concerned parents appealed their grievance to the council.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Stewart and Mrs. Gillespie made the main presentations before the council, giving specific details and diagrams of the intersection and adjacent areas.

Parents cited past accidents in which a teen-ager was killed, another young girl crippled for life and several children injured. They complained about speeding motorists ignoring the pedestrians in the crosswalk. One woman said, "Last year, I fell on my face to save two other kids."

Roberta Norris noted the situation will worsen when the foggy season sets in. She said children and fog and people rushing to work equals hurt children.

James defended the city staff recommendation for denial, saying the intersection does not meet the minimum criteria established by the city to justify placing a crossing guard there.

He said the 74-feet wide street takes about 21 seconds to cross, and the signal there allows 22 seconds — 10 seconds of walk (green), 12 seconds of flashing red (don't walk) as a clearance for pedestrians in the crosswalk and three seconds of yellow.

He said only five accidents had occured in the past three years and he was unaware of the accidents cited by parents. In an update of the speed limits in the city, it has been recommended that 35 miles per hour be set on Sixth west of Grove and on Grove south of Sixth; 40 mph on Sixth east of Grove; and 45 mph on Grove north of Sixth.

The Bakke case: the hidden issue

The case of Bakke vs. the Board of Regents, now before the Supreme Court of the U.S., centers on the issue of whether or not government may require racial quotas in admitting students to institutions of higher learning. This, at least, is the obvious issue, which has served as the focal spot for most of the controversy that has surrounded this potential landmark decision.

But there is another, less obvious issue that is no less important: if we give government the power to accord preferential treatment to minorities, do we not also give it the power to decide which minorities shall be so favored?

This question has serious implications. As Nathan Glazer, a Harvard University professor, has written in his book on "Affirmative Discrimination": "We are indeed a nation of minorities; to enshrine some minorities as deserving of special benefits means not to defend minority rights against a discriminating majority, but to favor some of these minorities over others."

An outrageous example of this favoritism at work is the case of DiLeo vs. the Board of Regents, presently before the Colorado Supreme Court. It seems that young DiLeo applied to the University of Colorado Law School, and was admitted under the mistaken belief that he was of Mexican descent. When it was learned later, however, that his roots were not Mexican but Italian, his admission was revoked. And yet are not the Italians as much a minority as the Mexicans? Or, for that matter, are not the Jews, the Poles, the Finns, the Letts, the Rumanians, the Chinese or any of the other groups that made their homes on these shores also minorities?

Somehow, professor Glazer observes, the government civil rights agencies have managed to turn the civil rights legislation of the last decade completely around. The Civil Rights Acts passed between 1964 and 1968 declared that no account should be taken of race, color, national origin, or religion in voting, jobs, education, or housing. Yet no sooner was this legislation enacted than we "entered into unexampled recording of records of color, race and national origin of every individual in every significant sphere of life."

It is not inconceivable, if this process of classification and recording continues, that we shall shortly become as racially conscious a society as South Africa — although for different motives. What, then, will the future hold for the individual who is half Mexican or half Indian? Will he or she also be accorded favored minority status?

Already we are not far from a situation depicted in a magazine cartoon of some years back — a personnel director telling a dark-complexioned female that "As an under-30 black woman with a Spanish-sounding surname, I'm afraid you're overquotafied."

Certainly this situation is unfair to all concerned. A selective lowering of standards is not only a hardship to those who qualify as members of the "majority," it is an insult to those minority group members who want to be accepted on the basis of their individual worth and not their racial or ethnic backgrounds.

In a society that spends billions of dollars to raise living standards, to help the disadvantaged overcome a wide variety of handicaps, and to improve the quality of education for all, is it too much to ask that people be judged on their own merits?

Driven to drink?

Maybe somebody should be worrying about this new compulsion among small fry to collect empty beer cans. Instead of lining their walls with dog-eared books, thousands of 12-year-old boys are now combing the gutters for empty cans of Olde Frothingslosh or Death Valley Pilsener or something equally obscure.

What would grandmother say if she knew that little Matthew is falling off to sleep in a sea of dead soldiers each night?

More to the point, what can a father say when junior insists that he go out and drink a few beers — and bring back the cans?

It's a terrible situation, plainly, that can lay such a load on parental responsibility.

Creepy stuff

From Basildon, England, comes the tale of a tomcat named Sam who saved the town from hysteria by devouring a giant Mexican red knee spider that reportedly could jump three feet off the ground and pluck birds out of the air.

All we can say is that the fellow who invents these strange stories will be extended every courtesy by the proper authorities if he turns himself in without a fight.

Testing for food sensitivity

Dear Editor:

In Dr. Lamb's Sept. 18 article, he gave your readers some outdated information.

He stated that sugar could not affect the nervous system which controls the muscles in less than 30 minutes. Experiments conducted by scientists at the University of Chicago and the University of Toronto, and reported in Science of February 1968, showed that a new route to the brain had been discovered whereby radioactivity glucose reached the brain in seconds.

John Yudkins of England recently reported that excess sugar consumption is statistically associated with atherosclerosis and heart attacks. On the basis of his studies, Yudkins states, "It would mean, for example, that a person assessed by our dietary history as taking more than 110 grams of sugar a day (4 ounces) was perhaps five or more times as likely to develop myocardial infarction as one taking less than 60 grams a day."

In my book "Touch for Health," I discuss the use of manual muscle testing to determine food allergies and hypersensities. We now have through the Touch for Health Foundation a state of California-approved vocation training school, and have trained over 500 instructors to train lay persons and others to use such tests to help themselves and their families to learn what food they have hypersensitivities to.

The Touch for Health classes are now being given at the University of California, Riverside and San Diego, Los Angeles Valley College, Los Angeles City College, Harbor College and many other community and private colleges. We have also been approved for license renewal courses for registered nurses.

The letter to Dr. Lamb stated that the weakness would last for weeks. This was probably a misquote of the person showing the methods, as that would be a rare case for such a small amount of sugar to affect the muscles for so long. However, in extreme hypersensitivity, it could and probably does occur.

WASHINGTON — The wining and dining of Pentagon procurement officers apparently has become a major industry. A confidential congressional study charges that defense contractors have spent "several million dollars annually" on this sort of revelry.

Such massive entertaining, the report adds gravely, presents "a threat of significant proportions to the integrity of public contracts and the procurement process."

Many a contract is consummated over a shotgun barrel in a fog-sheathed duck blind. Or some inside information, worth millions to a contractor, might be dropped casually on a golf green. The way to a defense contract may also be greased by booze and blondes at a swinging night club.

The congressional study found "repeated hospitality to many of the same federal employees." They weren't shown a good time for the pleasure of their company, the report suggests. More likely, the contractor hoped in return for his largess "to obtain advance or inside information and to secure preferential treatment in the course of doing business with the government."

Two years ago, we wrote a series of columns about defense and space officials accepting free hunting and ski trips from military contractors. We identified the hosts as the giant Northrop and Rockwell corporations, which were called on the carpet by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the Joint Committee on Defense Production.

The publicity died down, but the committee continued its investigation. Painstakingly, the committee examined the entertainment practices of more than 40 leading defense contractors. The report, just completed, is still confidential. However, we can reveal the highlights:

— The report listed these gratuities, which contractors commonly make available to government procurement people: "Tickets to sporting and cultural events; hunting, fishing, golfing or similar recreational outings; entertainment and meals; dinners, balls, banquets and night clubs; transportation, lodging, meals and refreshments, especially in connection with hospitality suites at professional meetings; and visits to lodges and resorts."

— The committee determined, for example, that at least 30 of the 41 contractors surveyed had given government officials tickets to sporting and cultural events. During the three years covered by the survey, 30 companies had sponsored about 1,200 hospitality suites, where the booze flowed freely. At least 35 of the companies acknowledged purchasing meals for government employees.

— At least 16 firms sponsored sporting activities that included government officials. These activities ranged from golfing matches to hunting trips. Some corporations paid for transportation, hunting licenses, ammunition, meals and lodging, hunting and guide fees. Some even arranged for the preparation of the game.

— The acceptance of the aforementioned favors, the report charges, violates a 1965 executive order. "Entertainment of government officials," cautions the report, "can undermine the integrity of government contracts." For instance, a contractor may obtain intelligence or advance information on government requirements and specifications, thereby gaining an unfair advantage over his competitors.

— One witness, interviewed by an investigator for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, stressed that "one of the purposes of developing liaisons with NASA employees was to develop inside sources who could be telephoned for advance or inside information." Anyone who provides such information, the committee warns sternly, "is in violation of departmental standards of conduct."

Putting brakes on GOP skid

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS

BRETTON WOODS, N.H. — (NEA) — There were fat cats and functionaries, journalists and security men, staff aides and party pros — more than 400 registered participants in all.

But the hardest folks to find at this year's Republican Governors Conference here in the White Mountains were the Republican governors themselves.

There are only 12 of them, down from 32 just seven years ago.

And unless the 1978 elections augment their ranks considerably, not only the GOP governors but the Republican party itself could wind up on the endangered species list.

That is why this year's conference was a school for candidates hoping to capture state houses around the country during the 36 gubernatorial elections next year.

Somewhat belatedly, national GOP leaders have realized that the party's traditional focus on the White House and Congress has resulted in a withering of its roots at the state and local level.

With reapportionment looming after the 1980 census, Republicans could be written off the political map of America unless they are strong enough to influence the drawing of new election district boundaries.

Notwithstanding the Supreme Court's one man, one vote ruling of a decade ago, political boundary lines still follow partisan strength. The GOP's current weakness is vividly reflected in the gap between its vote count in the 1976 congressional elections and its seats in Congress.

Republican candidates for Congress last year drew 42.2 percent of all votes cast, according to the GOP National Committee. Yet Republicans hold only 33.3 percent of the seats in the House.

"There are 30 states right now where the Democrats control not only the governorship but both houses of the state legislature as well," noted Dick Thaxton, a political pro for the Republican Governors Association.

"We're not going to be able to regain control of more than a handful of state legislatures before the next reapportionment. So unless we can take some of those governorships, we can be redistricted out of existence," he said.

No less an authority than John Connally, whose own ambitions are exclusively national at this juncture, is urging an all-out drive on the state houses next year by the national party apparatus.

"The Republican National Committee should seriously consider allocating at least one-fourth of the total funds available to it next year to gubernatorial races," Connally told the New Hampshire conference.

GOP Chairman Bill Brock was already ahead of Connally. The Republican Governors Association, which has never before engaged in fund-raising activities, hopes to collect $500,000 for next year's campaigns and the National Committee will add $250,000 of its own to that pot.

The prospects are reasonably good. Party professionals think Republican candidates will be viable competitors in all but about eight of the 36 gubernatorial races next year. There is almost no chance for Republicans to gain the state house in the two biggest states — New York and California — or in Southern states like Georgia, Alabama, and Arkansas.

But the West, where GOP Gov. Jay Hammond of Alaska is all by his lonesome right now, offers a golden opportunity, especially after President Ford's sweep of the region last year. Oregon, Colorado, Wyoming, Arizona, Idaho, New Mexico, South Dakota — all may be ripe for the Republicans.

Even the optimists at the GOP National Committee acknowledge the best the Republicans can hope to do is to double their present pitiful numbers in the state houses, from 12 to 24 or 25 governors.

That might not seem like an ambitious goal, but for a party facing possible extinction through reapportionment, it may be the GOP's last best hope for survival. Governors don't generally draw political boundary maps, but they can veto them. And that would put the brakes on the Republican party's long skid towards oblivion.

Just in jest

All trains passing along the ocean front near the San Clemente estate of former President Richard M. Nixon have for some years been required to slow down to a sedate 40 miles per hour. But now there is a movement under way to eliminate that 40-mph railway speed limit. The whys and the wherefores of the proposal are not entirely clear, but mark my words, if its sponsors are successful, you can be almost certain of what is going to happen next. Because, like elephants, one's political enemies never forget, their next move will undoubtedly be a proposal to eliminate the 55-mph speed limit on the freeway which passes along the eastern boundary of the Nixon estate.

Restraining Brown's veto

By EARL G. WATERS

Some fancy footwork was engaged in by Gov. Jerry Brown in the closing hours of the 1977 legislative session in an effort to avoid what he feared might become a rash of veto overrides and thus indicate a diminishing of his strength.

Governors have long been exercising their veto power virtually without restraint. It had been nearly three decades since a veto was overridden when the Legislature overturned one of Ronald Reagan's. With this knowledge, Brown, since taking office, has been brazen in his rejection of bills and it wasn't until earlier this year that he suffered his first legislative "reprimand." That was when the lawmakers, egged on by an aroused public, overrode his death penalty veto.

Apparently assuming that to be an exceptional case, Brown has continued to act roughshod in the use of the veto. Obviously he had misread the mood of the solons for, in rejecting the bill authored by Sen. Al Alquist designed to ease the Medi-Cal and welfare cost burdens on county governments, he stirred the members.

Alquist had fought too hard for his bill to accept defeat and set out to gather the necessary 27 votes for an override. He got 31. Indications of support for his bill in the Assembly were sufficient to promise override there, too. To head it off, Brown quickly had the provisions of the Alquist measure amended into an Assembly bill, letting it be known that he would sign it.

In the same manner he headed off override of another Senate bill, this authored by Sen. Ray Johnson. It was a relatively unimportant measure which reimbursed tiny Trinity County for costs of an educational program which had been encouraged by the state. The amount involved was only $22,150 but Brown rejected it out of hand.

Angered by this cavalier treatment of a small constituency, Johnson appealed to his colleagues and won override in the Senate. Again the provisions of the Johnson bill suddenly were to be found in an amended Assembly bill headed for the governor's signature.

The two instances, joined with the death penalty override, point to a new enthusiasm for the override. Spawned by years of faintheartedness on the part of the lawmakers to it, governors have grown to the belief the Legislature does not dare do it. This has led to the mistaken myth that an override is an "embarrassment" to a governor, a sign of weakness on his part, as well as a total misconception of the reasons the veto power is granted the governor.

It was not given as President Benjamin Harrison so profoundly stated "upon the principle that he should approve only such as he would have voted for had he been a member." Rather it was granted for the purposes detailed by one of the state's greatest legislators, the late Sen. George Miller Jr., "of protecting the public from sectionalism, expenditures for which there are not sufficient funds and inadvertent errors in legislation."

Stomping on the idea that the governor can veto willy-nilly, Miller declared, "In exercising the veto power simply because he does not like the policy decided by the people's representatives, the executive in effect is declaring that he, and not the people, will make the laws of the state and the representatives of the people cannot impose policy upon the executive."

"The executive," Miller added, "is neither king nor dictator. This is a people's government and the executive branch must carry out the policies which the people's representatives have determined."

It now remains to be seen whether Brown's demonstrated concern over the new-found potential for override will serve to make him more restrained in the use of the veto.

Ann Landers

An odor or just imagination?

Dear Ann Landers: Some "kind soul" sent me a recent column of yours in the mail. Anonymous, of course. This is not the first time I have received an anonymous letter on this subject. I can remain silent no longer.

I know I have an unpleasant odor. I am aware that I have been offending people for years. It's an awful feeling but I've learned to live with it.

I have been to three physicians. They suggested various pills, soaps, deodorants, anti-perspirants, and two baths daily. Nothing helps.

The last doctor made the most sense. He said about one person in 100 has a chemical condition that produces a body odor that nothing can be done about.

I wish my friends and co-workers with the delicate noses had to walk in my body for 24 hours. It would be interesting to see how well they could suffer the slings and arrows of my — Outrageous Fortune

Dear O.F.: I, too, checked with three doctors about the one in 100 theory and none of them have heard about it. This is not to say it isn't correct.

Two of my consultants mentioned an odor phobia. It seems that certain individuals who feel rejected by family or friends imagine they don't smell right. They go from doctor to doctor about the "problem." No doctor can smell the odor they insist is present and offensive. The next step is a psychiatrist.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a beautiful daughter who has a great deal of talent and an outstanding personality. I learned only recently that she is in love with another young woman.

I have tried to talk to her about it but she says she is very happy and doesn't want to discuss it any further. This is tearing me apart inside and I can't sleep at night. Being a self-supporting widow I must work and it is very difficult to keep going with all this strain on me.

Do you know of a good doctor in this city who can help my daughter get straightened out? — Desperate Mother In San Jose

Dear Mother: There is no way you can force a lesbian to get "straightened out," if she is happy with her lifestyle. Since you are the one who is having sleepless nights, I suggest counseling to help you adjust to the situation. Also, consider inquiring about organizations and groups for parents of gays who feel as you do. Check with Community Referral — in the phone book. From all reports, these groups have been immensely helpful to many. And good luck, dear.

Dear Ann: In spite of the vigorous campaigning against cigarette smoking, I read where the inhabitants of the United States are the heaviest cigarette smokers in the world. About 600 million cigarettes were smoked in our country last year at a cost of 13 billion dollars. I'm writing to you since you have been one of the most anti-cigarette people in the country. What do you make of it? — Baffled Benjie

Dear Baff: A lot of people think "the worst" will never happen to them — it's always "the other guy" who gets it. Then, of course, there are the addicts who are hooked and those who say, "Well, I have to die from something." To them I reply, "For your sake — I hope it's something else." Lung cancer is a terrible way to go.

Buy Family Circle magazine today and read the candid and provocative article by Ann Landers — "How Much Do We Owe Our Children?"

Are drugs O.K. if you learn how to control them? Can they be of help? The answers are in Ann Landers' new booklet, "Straight Dope on Drugs." For each booklet ordered, send a dollar bill, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (24 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

How Japanese control crime

Q. "How do you account for the fact that a person here statistically is 208 times more likely to be robbed than is a person in Japan?"

A. Maybe because the Japanese police have little stations, called Koban, within eight blocks of every city house. Also, the Japanese police make so-called courtesy visits to each home twice a year. Consider, too, that 500,000 Japanese householders volunteer to serve as "contact points" where other citizens can report crime complaints. Essentially, they've broken up the whole country into exceedingly small police precincts wherein both the officers and the volunteers are well known to their neighbors. Please add to your remarkable robbery statistic the facts that a citizen here is 10 times more likely to be murdered than in Japan and a woman here 13 times more likely to be raped.

Six hundred years ago, breakfast time was five in the morning, dinner was about nine, and supper was at four in the afternoon. Four hundred and fifty years ago, breakfast was at seven in the morning, dinner at eleven, and supper at six.

CONTUMELY

The word "contumely" is an excellent set of syllables which the big book at hand defines as "rude language or treatment arising from haughtiness and contempt." I can only recall seeing it in Shakespeare, but nowhere else in print. Odd that it's a word so little used when what it means is so common everywhere. In the market, at the cafe, beside the ticket window, wherever, there's more of that arrogant overbearing contumely going on than just about anything. What's needed around here is an anti-contumely campaign.

In some of the movie theaters of Thailand, live actors stand behind the screens to speak the lines of the silently projected characters.

Sun lamps OK, but cautiously

DEAR DR. MILLER: I was just recently willed a squirrel monkey and I am trying to do the best I can with it. My only question currently is about sun bathing. I don't dare let Jo-Jo out, but am considering a sun lamp. Good idea? — V.L.

DEAR V.L.: It might be, if employed very cautiously. If you use a red-bulbed sun lamp, carefully screened to prevent burning and carefully timed to prevent sun-burn, plus adequate space to prevent overheating — then, yes, Jo-Jo could benefit physically and psychologically from brief sun (lamp) baths.

DEAR DR. MILLER: It was a terrible shock, and I hate to even think about it, but maybe in writing I can save other poor little birds. What happened was our dear little parakeet, for some strange reason, flew into the toilet bowl, couldn't get out, and drowned. It won't help me any to know, but I can't help but wonder, does a parakeet that falls into water always drown? — M.J.

DEAR M.J.: A parakeet might dip onto the water surface and zoom quickly up again. A bird once settled into an open body of water would be hopelessly trapped. Slick sides of water-containing bowls (basins, bathtubs or what-have-you) would be likely to prove deadly. There are many household hazards for uncaged birds, and certainly water — as little as a few cups in a small container — can be a deadly trap for small birds.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Prior to breeding our boxer, she got a clean bill of health from the doctor. She always has. The stud boxer used also had a clean bill of health. Neither are from dogs with any signs of hereditary problems. In spite of this, her litter had two puppies with defects of the mouth the doctor called congenital. First, exactly just what does "congenital" mean and second, how could Spanky (our bitch) have had these puppies? — R.N.

DEAR R.N.: Congenital defects are those abnormalities of the body which are present at birth. One of the most common patterns involving congenital defects is one in which the normal parent carries an abnormal, recessive defect gene. If two normal parents each carrying this abnormal gene are bred, an average of one in four of their offspring will show the congenital defect. Therefore, these recessive defects may remain in a breed for several generations and come to light only when such dogs are mated to others with similar recessive defect genes.

For Thursday, October 20, 1977
Your Birthday, Oct. 20, 1977

More attention should be devoted this coming year to artistic, musical or creative pursuits. Involvements in these areas will broaden your perspective and could even provide a source of profit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) This is not a good day to press people you know on a purely social basis for financial or business favors. Request of this nature jeopardizes relationships. Having trouble selecting a career? Send for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify your birth sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your material prospects look rather encouraging today, but there's a chance you could mess things up by doing something erratic. Watch your temper.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're a bit too gullible today, and you could be deceived by someone with ulterior motives. Don't take everyone at face value.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Keep prying noses out of your financial and business affairs today — especially those who offer abundant, but unsound, advice.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Normally you're a very easy person to get along with. You usually treat others with objectivity and friendliness. Today, however, your methods could be dictatorial.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Although your intentions are noble today, your tactics may leave something to be desired. To achieve results, the means must be of equally high standards.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Friends will cooperate today, but only if you treat them with kid gloves. Throwing your weight around could cause a serious problem.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) An enormous amount of persistence is required if goals are to be attained today. Don't let down!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Some of your ideas are quite clever and ingenious today. However, the ones you have regarding money won't be included in the group.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Enter into no business arrangements today with problem persons from the past. Old wounds could be opened.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be cooperative with others today, but don't make impulsive concessions you might regret. Sound judgment is essential.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Make haste slowly today if working on a new or unfamiliar project. Costly errors are possible if you're careless.

Putting a stop on the non-stop

Homo sapiens is a wonderful creature. Although he is well known for his ability to start things — wars, riots, revolutions, etc. — man is also remarkable for his ability to STOP things. He can stop grass fires and mighty rivers. He can stop almost anything he chooses.

The one thing he cannot stop is a magazine subscription.

Commencing a magazine subscription is nothing — a child can do it. Mine often have. Through the agency of my 12-year-old daughter I recently found myself the beneficiary (if that's the word) of a three-year subscription to "True Screen Confessions." My 10-year-old son landed me with a year's subscription to "Monster Tales," with a bonus of a shrunken head.

You don't even have to send money to start the magazine coming. Just a card saying "Send it" and they send it. And send it and send it and send it and send it.

Having once launched this flood of glossy or pulp pap toward your mail box, you are like the girl in the fairy tale who forgot the words that would stop the porridge flowing from the magic kettle. (Personally, I would rather have a lot of gluey porridge glutting my mail box than most of the magazines they publish today. Against spectacular odds, magazines have finally reached the subhuman level of television and movies. O tempor, O mores, O Purina Chow!)

"Thank you for my one-year subscription to Perverts Post," I write. "I wish to let it expire. Please send no more. Yours truly." "Dear Reader," comes the reply by return mail, "there is no better time than NOW to renew your subscription to . . . " And another copy arrives.

"Dear Subscription Department: No thanks. I don't want the magazine any more. Please terminate my subscription forthwith." "Dear Subscriber: A special bargain price of only $36 — a saving of $42 on the newsstand price — is being offered FOR A LIMITED TIME ONLY to our regular subscribers..." And another issue.

So ignore. Play it cool. Read the magazine and forget it. "Dear Sir: For six weeks we have been sending you . . . We are sure you have been entertained by . . . Our NEW subscription rates are only . . . " And another copy.

Today I received by 179th copy of Time Magazine, to which I have not subscribed since 1968. I'm still getting copies of Liberty and Collier's. New Yorker lingered for several months, but finally languished. Possibly they have quit publishing.

Magazines hate to let go once they have caught your interest (and signature). More than that, I think they CAN'T let go. I think your name is engraved on their addressographs like an epitaph chiseled on a marble slab. Only time, wind and weather will wear away your name and relieve you of the four-color conglomoration.

Man can stop anything in the world but a magazine subscription.

How to train, not strain

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am an inmate in a correctional institution and have put a lot of effort into becoming a better person physically and mentally. Lately I have become discouraged over my weight training program.

I would like to ask you a question pertaining to your statement a person should train, not strain. How do you know you have done enough while training but not to the point of straining?

Are high repetitions better for development than heavy-weight, low-repetitions, for example lifting 150 pounds 10 times for 10 sets or 200 pounds three times for 10 sets.

DEAR READER — Most weight training authorities agree that your maximum benefit from resistance exercises or weights is obtained by lifting the weight no more than 10 times, then resting and repeating such a set of 10 no more than three times. Apparently doing this every other day will provide the maximum benefit you can get for any weight. To maintain your muscles one such exercise session a week appears to be adequate.

The choice of a weight should be one that you can lift easily three times in succession but not one so light that you can lift it 10 or more times in succession without difficulty. As soon as you can lift a given weight 10 times in succession for three sets (a total of 30) you should certainly progress to a heavier weight. Excessive repetitions will not-speed muscle growth or development of muscle strength. A lighter exercise in any form that is repeated, as occurs with running, is considered an endurance exercise as opposed to strength exercises. Obviously there is a great deal of overlap, though, with many forms of exercise.

Some authorities believe you can obtain progressive muscle growth with only two sets at each exercise session. If you send me your address I'll send you the Health Letter number 5-1, Weight Training for Energy and Weight Control. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y., 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read all of your writings. I am 91 years old and have had nine operations, mostly hernias, gall bladder and appendix, years ago.

I live with my daughter in Oregon now and she's a wonderful person and cook. We eat lots of vegetables, pot roasts with vegetables around the roast in a steam cooker — no grease.

I eat four to five tomatoes every day and one banana. I want to know if these tomatoes are all right. I put sugar on them.

DEAR READER — You sound like you are doing great. I want to take this opportunity to comment that boiling or using a pressure cooker is a good way to avoid grease. Particularly if all of the excess fat is removed before cooking.

A good pressure cooker can result in very tender meat and help people avoid fat with its excess calories and its effects on obesity or fatty-cholesterol deposits in arteries that cause heart attacks and strokes.

Fresh tomatoes are great for you. The sugar is all right if you are not overweight. Sugar may cause dental problems so it is a good idea to brush the teeth well after eating sweets of any kind.

Opening lead — K♣

In this duplicate hand there were just about as many bidding sequences as there were pairs. The most popular final contract was five hearts played by South.

When a club was opened South would ruff in dummy and lead a spade. Some Easts rose with the spade ace and led a trump. South would then make the rest of the tricks by the simple expedient of drawing trumps and eventually discarding his last club and third diamond on good spades.

Other Easts would duck, South would win, ruff his last club, cash dummy's last trump and lead a second spade to East's ace.

East could then give his partner a spade ruff. Otherwise South would make six.

When North played in spades he always had to lose a spade and a diamond, but a couple of North players were doubled at five spades for very good scores.

Those East-West pairs who sacrificed at six clubs came out near the top. They would lose a spade, two hearts and a diamond for minus 500 and near tops.

A few North-South pairs went to six. One went down one for a bottom; the others were lucky enough to get their opponents to seven clubs down 700.

Ask the Jacobys

A California reader wants to know if West's two-spade bid is forcing in the partnership sequence: West, one spade; East, two clubs; West, two spades.

It is not forcing in standard American nor in many expert partnerships. On the other hand some players use the convention that a player who responds at the two level promises to bid again.

Swelling ranks

Ham operation now getting CB's 'finest'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CB radio phenomenon is spilling over into the ranks of ham, or amateur radio, according to the American Radio Relay League, the nation's largest ham organization.

The ARRL says there now are 325,000 licensed amateurs, up from 280,000 a year ago. Another 50,000 persons are attending classes this fall to get their ham "ticket," it says.

"Many of these newcomers are CBers, and we're getting the cream of the crop — people really interested in two-way radio communications," Peter O'Dell, ARRL's public information officer, explained in a telephone interview from his Newington, Conn., office.

Is it difficult for a CBer to get a ticket, as hams call their licenses? Not at all, replies O'Dell, who cites as an example a 4-year-old boy who passed the novice exam recently.

The novice, or first of five amateur licenses, requires ability to send and receive International Morse Code at five words-a-minute and knowledge of the most elementary theory needed to operate a radio.

The novice is eligible to use portions of four of the ham bands to send code, but no voice communication.

"But with relatively simple equipment, a novice can literally work around the world," O'Dell says.

Is ham equipment expensive? O'Dell says a beginner can pick up a good used radio for less than $200, or a new set for about $250.

"Of course, like anything else, one can spend whatever he wants," O'Dell adds, noting a top-of-the-line transceiver costs about $6,000.

The Morse code requirement apparently frightens some potential hams. In fact, the government is considering a "communicator" license that would not require code.

But O'Dell says people can learn enough code in two hours to pass the novice test.

Why is code necessary? First, it's required by international treaty. It's also the most effective means of radio communication and uses less expensive equipment than that needed for voice transmissions.

The easiest way to get a ham license, O'Dell says, it to attend amateur classes.

"If an interested individual will write the league," he says, "it will put them into contact with a local instructor." Just write ARRL, Newington, Conn. 06111.

After mastering the novice requirements, many hams start climbing the other rungs in the amateur ladder.

Carter, aides out to salvage economic plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with the realization that their economic program isn't working, President Carter and his advisers are back at the drawing boards trying to salvage what they can.

All indications point to yet another attempt to win business support and to stimulate investment in new industry, which the country badly needs.

The failure of businessmen to step up investment activity has been the largest single factor undermining progress toward Carter's original targets of a balanced budget, lowered employment and sharply reduced inflation by 1981.

Some private mutterings are being heard from the administration that Carter already has done too much for business without any results to show. For example, Carter never put forth the tough anti-inflation program he wanted because business opposed it and he withdrew plans for the $50 per person tax rebate, also opposed by business.

But Carter appears willing to make one more try this time through tax incentives to increase business profits and encourage investment.

He also disclosed last week that he is considering tax cuts for both businesses and individuals in 1978, one year ahead of his original scheme, if the economy shows signs of floundering again, as some experts now fear.

Very little in the economic program Carter unveiled in January has worked out according to plan.

Inflation and unemployment both have remained stubbornly high, the nation's huge trade deficit has started another attack on the dollar and interest rates have reached the danger level again.

In the first major retreat from its economic program, the administration has abandoned hopes of achieving a balanced budget by 1981, barring an economic miracle. There is no more talk, as there was during the campaign, of the $60 billion budget "dividend" in 1981 to help pay for new government programs.

Carter's advisers are now telling him that if he wants to meet his goals for an unemployment rate of 5 per cent or below by 1981, the best he can hope for is a budget deficit of $20 billion to $25 billion.

Besides the failure of businesses to step up investments, another fly in the economic ointment has been the nation's trade deficit, estimated at $30 billion this year, which has cut into employment and production in this country.

The administration appears to be seeking to reduce the deficit by encouraging an increase in the value of the Japanese yen and the German mark in relation to the value of the dollar, which would make U.S. goods cheaper in those countries while raising the price to American consumers of German and Japanese products.

The carter administration is the third to try to tackle the problem of lagging business investment, but so far Carter has been no more successful than Richard M. Nixon and Gerald R. Ford.

Charles L. Schultze, the chairman of Carter's Council of Economic Advisers, said last week administration surveys show business is increasing its inflation-discounted investments by only 6 per cent annually while an investment rate of 8 per cent to 9 per cent is needed to achieve the administration's eocnomic targets.

Businessmen basically say their profits are too low to justify substantial increases in investments.

The administration takes this lament at face value and plans to include several measures in its proposed tax reform program to increase business profitability.

The measures likely will include a reduction in corporate taxes or a scaling down of the current double taxation of corporate dividends.

In fact, there has been a pronounced shift in emphasis in recent weeks from tax reform to tax reduction, especially in tax cuts for businessmen, although there will be significant reductions for individuals too.

When Carter first began proposing tax reform, his emphasis was on closing tax shelters and loopholes with little said about helping business, but all that has changed now.

Secretary of Commerce Juanita Kreps also indicated over the weekend the administration may be preparing a new statement of its economic policies, in part to meet complaints by businessmen that they don't know what the administration is doing now.

Tri-community candidates

This is the third in a series of statements presented by candidates for five city council seats in the proposed Rancho Cucamonga election in Alta Loma, Cucamonga and Etiwanda Nov. 8.

PALM E. GUERRA

Palm E. "Shorty" Guerra has been a resident of the tri-community area for 24 years. Guerra is 61 and has been married 37 years. He has two children who attended local schools and four grandchildren who are now attending local schools. He is an active member of the Cucamonga Men's Service Club.

For the past nine years, he has been financial secretary-treasurer of Plumbers, Fitters and Refrigeration union, Local 364, Riverside. He will retire in November.

He has been a member of the Economic Development Committee of San Bernardino County since 1973 and the Tri-Community Master Plan Advisory Committee.

His major concerns are to advance public health and safety measures for the new tri-community city. He would support improvement of fire and police services, as well as development of adequate traffic and circulation facilities.

LEONARD R. GORCZYCA

Leonard R. Gorczyca, a resident of Cucamonga since 1960, feels planning is the most important aspect of incorporation.

"Area planning and growth control will require a city master plan and a strong planning commission, with representation from each of the tri-communities, to study all growth requests within the city. This would receive my utmost consideration," said Gorczyca.

He said organization of the city government must insure representation from each of the three areas.

To that end, Gorczyca said he favors the formation of subcouncils in each community, which could "process the needs and desires of the residents and submit them to the City Council."

Gorczyca is the director of a medical laboratory. He is also an instructor at San Beranrdino Valley and Chaffey Colleges.

He is a resident of 7426 Onyx Ave. in Cucamonga.

EARL R. KUNKEL

An opponent of incorporation, Earl R. Kunkel says he is running for office to make sure the average citizen is represented if the new city is formed.

"I am against the incorporation of three cities into one. I believe in smaller government because of local contol. My purpose in running for the tri-community city council is to serve as a watch dog should the tri-community concept pass on the ballot," said Kunkel.

If incorporation is approved, and if he is voted to the council, Kunkel said he "would definitely support formation of community councils."

"I believe in the village concept and would strongly advocate it," said Kunkel.

The tri-communities, said Kunkel, will have to find a "happy medium" between the interests of developers, large land owners and taxpayers.

Kunkel is a foreman at Pacific Press Inc. in Los Angeles. He and his family have lived at 8990 Citation Court in Alta Loma for two years.

DOROTHY LAWSON

Formerly a proponent of Alta Loma incorporation, Dorothy Lawson feels the incorporation of the tri-communities will provide a wider tax base.

"I participated as chairperson of the phone committee on Citizens for Incorporation of Alta Loma. With the gaining support of tri-community, I have re-evaluated my position and feel the community must have a better tax base," she said.

A licensed real estate salesman, Mrs. Lawson said the new city must be sensitive to the viewpoints of all its citizens.

"I believe I can effectively serve by drawing on my experiences as a parent, property owner, community worker and businesswoman," she said.

Keeping growth in balance with the ability to deliver city services will be the main problem for the new city, Mrs. Lawson predicted.

Originally from Boston, she lived in Burbank for 23 years before moving to Alta Loma two years ago. She lives at 9072 Hillside Road.

Seek yacht info

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department is asking the Vietnamese government to clarify circumstances surrounding that country's detention of three Americans whose yacht was intercepted in the South China Sea last week.

The Vietnamese informed U.S. officials Monday that it has detained the three Americans after the yacht Brillig was towed to Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon, last Saturday.

"They (the Vietnamese) said the three crew members are well and that the Vietnamese government is continuing its investigation," a State Department spokesman said.

He said the Vietnamese government claims the yacht, boarded Wednesday was in Vietnamese waters. Sources in Bangkok, Thailand, said the Americans claimed in their last message that they were 35 miles from the Vietnamese shore.

The 39-foot Brillig was enroute from Thailand to Brunei and Singapore when its crew sent a distress signal that a boat had opened fire and the yacht was "about to be rammed."

Youths turning to alcohol, as well as drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teenagers are increasingly turning to booze, a White House aide says, but that doesn't necessarily mean they're turning away from drugs.

"A lot has been written that teenagers are switching from drugs to alcohol," said Dr. Peter G. Bourne, President Carter's assistant for health issues.

"But it seems that teen-agers are using alcohol as well as drugs," he said.

In a recent telephone interview, Bourne said youngsters get the impression that using drugs is bad, while drinking heavily — a habit shared with many adults — is all right.

"A young person feels that getting drunk on beer is quasiconformist," the presidential aide said. "Using drugs is more rebellious."

Bourne said some parents seem to share that view and take a lenient view toward teen-age drinking.

"Too often parents are accepting of drinking heavily because they (the children) are not using drugs," he said. "They say, 'Well, all kids experiment.'"

Bourne said he feels youngsters are more likely to drink if their parents do. "If parents look at alcohol as a way of solving their problems, their children will pick this up as acceptable behavior," he said.

He said the availability of cheap wines and other alcoholic beverages aimed at young people has added to the problem of teen-age drinking.

Federal studies estimate that five per cent of high school students get drunk at least once a week.

Shutdowns for lack of natural gas now not likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — The threat of thousands of factory shutdowns this winter due to natural gas shortages apparently has vanished because of precautionary purchases of higher-priced emergency gas, a federal agency says.

The staff of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission reported to the commission that four of the six pipelines which had expected major shutdowns now anticipate no industrial disruption. The other two now expect only a limited impact.

Plant closings totaling in the thousands had been feared because of reports issued by the commission in September based on supply information filed by the six pipelines last May and June.

But updated supply figures show major purchases under federal rules which allow interstate pipelines or their customers to buy emergency supplies at essentially unregulated prices. Usually, interstate purchases come under price controls.

The difference in cost is substantial. Regulated gas in interstate pipelines sells for about $1.44 per thousand cubic feet. Unregulated gas sells for about $2. The extra cost is passed on to the consumer.

The commission reports show the pipeline companies are depending on these higher-priced emergency purchases to bolster their supplies enough to avoid major shortages, though some shortages still will exist.

The four now expecting to avoid any significant plant shutdowns are United Gas Pipeline Co., Tennessee Gas Pipeline Co., Tennessee Natural Gas Lines, Inc. and East Tennessee Natural Gas Co. The last two companies depend on Tennessee Gas for their supplies.

In last month's report, United was forecasting that "30 industrial customers could be forced to shut down." Tennessee Gas Pipeline said it was trying to head off 134 plant closures in normal winter weather, or up to 199 in a winter 10 per cent colder than normal.

East Tennessee Natural Gas had expected up to 113 plant closings this winter in last month's report, and Tennessee Natural Gas' parent firm, Nashville Gas Co., feared up to 172 plant closings.

The companies now are not forecasting any plant closings.

Transcontinental Gas Pipeline, which previously estimated some 613 shutdowns in a normal winter, or 780 in a severe one, now expects only one plant to shut down this winter.

El Paso Natural Gas Co., in last month's report, feared that "certain industrial customers may have to shut down," but would not identify them. In the new report, the staff said Arizona Public Service Co. is the only distributor on the El Paso system still forecasting plant shutdowns, and Arizona Public Service was still refusing to identify the threatened industries.

In last month's report, the commission found no significant threat of plant shutdowns on 23 other interstate pipelines, although most of the lines expected gas shortages.

Some of the expected shortages also will be taken up by industries that can switch to other fuels.

Calls computer search 'abuse of personal privacy rights'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man who headed a federal commission on privacy says the government's plan to ferret out welfare cheaters would infringe on Americans' right to privacy.

"Welfare cheats can and must be identified and removed," David F. Linowes told the secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Monday. But Linowes called the planned computer search "an abuse of personal privacy rights."

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr., speaking last week to a closed meeting of executives of some of the nation's largest businesses, proposed making computer tapes of welfare rolls available to private employers.

As part of Operation Match, HEW's campaign to hunt down cases of cheating and fraud, the welfare roll tapes would be compared against payroll tapes.

"We would provide the welfare tapes and run them against names of employes to preserve the right of privacy and turn in names where they are found to match," Califano explained to reporters after last week's meeting.

Linowes said he was "surprised that this kind of program could reach this stage with him personally presenting it this way."

"The biggest threat to privacy today is computer-to-computer linkage," he added in a telephone interview.

If Soviets attack

General says U.S. will weaken home units to bolster forces in Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army will take equipment and manpower from its units in the United States and send them overseas to strengthen Western Europe's defenses against any huge, short-warning Soviet ground attack, it was announced Tuesday.

Gen. Bernard W. Rogers, Army chief of staff said, "We must sacrifice a bit of the unit readiness ... here in the continental United States" in order to increase the ability of U.S. Army divisions in Europe to meet any Soviet attack and blunt it in the critical first 30 days of any European war.

"The gains we will obtain through this focus on early force readiness for Europe, however, will not be without their price," Rogers said in a speech prepared for the annual meeting of the Association of the United States Army.

"Yet the threat exists now, and we must act with dispatch," he said.

Rogers did not specify how much additional equipment, weapons and ammunition would be positioned in Europe, but other sources indicated that enough for two additional Army divisions is contemplated.

Some of the stockpiles may be placed in the north German plain, which is considered one of the most vulnerable avenues of invasion.

The Army chief of staff's remarks underscored mounting concern in the Pentagon and Congress over what is now perceived as a Soviet ability to launch a major attack on Western Europe with only five to seven days of preparation, compared with the 23 days of warning time formerly assumed by North Atlantic Treaty Organization planners.

U.S. Army strategists believe a critical point may come in 1981-82 when, they say, the Russians will have finished reequipping their army divisions and air force squadrons facing NATO with powerful new weapons.

A recent series of articles by The Associated Press disclosed problems in American military readiness in western Europe and elsewhere.

With a shortage of strategic cargo airlift, U.S. military thinking now aims at increasing the combat readiness of forces already in Europe and building up stockpiles of weapons and equipment that troops flown from the United States in any emergency could draw before going into action.

Rogers indicated the plan is to increase the weapons, ammunition and equipment stockpiles "pre-positioned" in Europe and to flesh out the five U.S. mechanized infantry and armored divisions, plus other combat units principally in Germany.

The four-star general made it plain that both regular Army and reserve units based in the United States will suffer to some extent.

"The equipment needed to increase the number of artillery units and to create new unit sets of pre-positioned equipment cannot all come solely from the production line," Rogers said.

"We have no alternative but to withdraw some equipment from both active and reserve component units (which include the National Guard) and divert some existing production output previously allocated to continental United States units.

"Similarly, in order to increase the personnel fill of our forward deployed units in Europe, our continental U.S. units will likely feel a decline in their strengths," he added.

Rogers said that after increasing the readiness of forces in Europe or earmarked to be deployed during the first 30 days of any war, the Pentagon's "priorities will shift successively to those units required in subsequent periods."

This indicates that the Army hopes eventually to restore equipment and manpower resources taken away from U.S.-based units, an effort officials say could take several years.

The Army now has stocks stored in depots in Europe intended for three full armored and mechanized infantry divisions, plus 10 separate battalions whose troops would be flown from the United States in Air Force transports and civilian passenger planes during any crisis.

These "pre-positioned" stocks were severely depleted to replace Israeli combat losses in the 1973 Middle East war, but those stocks "are well on the way to being reconstituted," Rogers said.

However, he said, "we will be increasing the level of prepositioned stocks so that more units can be flown over from the continental United States on short notice."

Key legislator critical of Carter tax revisions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A key congressman is telling President Carter his contemplated tax revisions try to do too much at once.

Without eliminating some of the controversial proposals, says Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., the plan would stand little chance this year in Congress.

Ullman, whose House Ways and Means Committee must work on Carter's tax plan when it is formally presented, says Congress cannot digest all the major reforms Carter wants in one year.

Ullman wants Carter to drop his request to end tax breaks on capital gains. Ullman also wants to keep alive the full business lunch tax deduction, which the Treasury Department wants to halve.

Ullman wants Carter's bill simply to restructure tax rates, make tax forms easier to fill out and encourage long-term business investments. He also supports ending double taxation on dividends.

"If we get bogged down in loopholes, we won't get a tax bill," Ullman told businessmen last weekend.

The administration Monday stuck to its position that the entire program should be acted on at once because some parts are dependent on others.

The package Carter is considering would reduce income taxes for nearly everyone making less than $100,000 a year while changing many tax deductions.

Ullman wants Carter to delay any request to end a variety of deductions, including those for sales, personal property and gasoline taxes.

Such a move has been suggested to the President by members of his administration.

Carter is also considering a proposal to limit medical and casualty deductions and remove tax exemptions for such fringe benefits as group term life insurance.

During his presidential campaign, Carter pledged to juggle tax rates to make them more fair and end certain deductions and special preferences.

He would tax capital gains, a tax haven for many businessmen, as income and would eliminate the practice of taxing corporate dividends.

Carter also is considering raising the income at which taxes are first due for a family of four, from $7,600 to $9,500.

In one recent draft made public, the Treasury Department suggests that the tax liability for such a family with an annual income of $15,000 to $20,000 be reduced by about $300 to $1,360 a year.

Even with the fast congressional action, Carter's tax plan would not take effect until 1979, although Carter indicated last week he might ask Congress to begin the tax cuts next year to stimulate spending.

Church mixing business, religion

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Members of Good Shepherd Baptist Church believe in mixing business with religion, and they plan a string of projects like their service station to stem the decay in their bi-racial neighborhood.

"We have an evangelistic ministry," said Dr. Harold Pinkston Sr., pastor of the church whose 350-member congregation owns the Good Shepherd Gulf Station next door and two blocks of frontage on a busy Columbus thoroughfare.

"We feel the church should be the spiritual center of the community and a place people can look to for guidance," the minister said.

The service station, open daily except Sunday, was originally purchased for more parking space, but the church decided to run it, with a church trustee as manager.

"We trust the station will generate community interest and participation and funds which will enhance the total church ministry itself," Pinkston said.

As pastor, Pinkston is president of Good Shepherd Investments and Enterprises Corp., the legal owner of property the pastor values at more than $500,000 and the business he says is worth a quarter of a million dollars, all tax-free.

"We eventually intend to turn the whole area into a multi-purpose block called the Good Shepherd Block," he said. "Underground, there may be banquet facilities, youth activities such as a swimming pool, basketball courts and an indoor track.

"On the ground level, there will be business enterprises of every sort. And above ground, there will be high-rise efficiency apartments for the aged."

He said the facilities would be open to use by non-members.

The church, located in a transitional area that is half black and half white, was organized 20 months ago by Pinkston and 16 others meeting in his living room. They located the church building, which had been occupied by Presbyterians, and decided to buy.

"In seven days, our church members put $104,000 in cash on the altar to purchase the building," the minister said.

Professionals, including accountants, doctors and attorneys, are members of Good Shepherd's bi-racial congregation, he said.

"We also have what we call our 'soul members,' who are not as affluent as the others," Pinkston said. "But the spirit of mutual giving and sharing catches on."

11-foot pole available if you won't touch it with a 10-footer

DALLAS (AP) — For people faced with things so bad that they wouldn't touch them with a 10-foot pole, Neiman-Marcus' Christmas catalogue has the perfect gift: an 11-foot pole.

The collapsible aluminum pole sells for $50 complete with black leatherette carrying case. It's just one of the unusual gifts offered in the latest catalogue from the famous Dallas department store.

This year's edition shows Neiman's awareness of the energy crisis by offering his-and-her urban windmills to be used for energy.

"In an area with an average wind velocity of 12 m.p.h. (Boston, for example), her windmill would generate more than enough wattage to brew her morning coffee, Benedict an egg, heat her hair rollers, soothe her psyche with stereo, and give her bronze beauty while she relaxes under the sun lamp," the catalogue says.

His windmill supplies energy for more masculine activities, says the catalogue, which lists each gift at $16,000, before installation.

There are no photographs of the gifts, only a painting depicting two rather ordinary looking windmills.

"I don't know how we plan to show them," said Richard Marcus, vice chairman of Neiman-Marcus. "But they exist for real."

Marcus admitted, however, that the only time an item has not sold well "is when we didn't have an exhibit to show."

For just $30,000, a seven-day expedition "into the heart of Lincoln Land" is offered for a party of five.

The trip begins in Springfield, Ill., where the entourage will be met by Gov. James R. Thompson. Actor Richard Blake then escorts the group on a tour throughout Lincoln country ending with a campout on 40 acres 100 miles south of Springfield.

All proceeds of the trip will be contributed in the name of the purchaser to Lincoln College in Lincoln, Ill.

Anyone wanting a pair of Imperial yellow carved Peking glass vases from the Ching dynasty had better get in a check for $6,000 in a hurry. The catalogue says there is only one pair available.

And Neiman's does include an item for the person who has to visit construction sites in his work. For those missions, his head can be covered with a 24-karat gold-plated hard hat. The cost is a mere $175 that includes the name of the owner engraved in a plaque on the hat's bill.

For those families who would like something to hide, there's a "skeleton in a closet" — a four-foot sachet creature held together by ribbons — $25.

Joyce Brothers

Note of calculation

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: Two years ago I married a man who was much older than I. During the courtship he appeared to be all the things a woman could wish — gallant, considerate, ardent, generous. It took only a few days after the wedding for me to realize that all those qualities were sham, a facade. The man is impossible and I can't wait to get away from him. The problem is that he has a son who is my age and with whom I have formed a very close attachment. Since my marriage is ended in all but name, I don't feel that what we are doing is adulterous. Yet both my lover and I fear should his father, my husband, learn of the affair, he might cause all sorts of legal hassles about a divorce and even cut off his son from what will be a sizable estate. How can we get around this mess? — Y.P.

DEAR Y.P.: I detect more than a note of calculation in your concerns — first for the benefits you hoped to derive from an apparently loveless marriage and now for the expectations you foresee from your lover's eventual inheritance.

Despite your cries about the abrupt change in your husband's courtliness after the wedding, I would doubt that he is all to blame. We all engage in certain pretenses — putting our best feet forward, so to speak — when we meet someone new and are trying to impress them. I'm sure you too played this game during the courtship.

People's true nature cannot be masked that much, even when they are making an effort to impress. More likely your attitude has changed far more than your husband's with your dissatisfaction over settling down to the realities of marriage.

Perhaps you can find what you seek with your husband's son, but is the upset to all involved worth it? You need a new start, but not at the old surroundings. Stay away from your lover for a while, get your divorce and take a good long time to think things out before you continue on what could be a disaster course.

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: I am a highly successful businessman, hold responsible positions in community affairs and am regarded as a good husband and father to our young children. Therefore, I can't really consider that I am being immature in the attitude I have taken toward my wife. The problem is that she turns me off sexually. I have a strong sex urge, yet when I'm with her there is a definite lack of interest. I'm sure my wife has been aware of my waning desire. I'm just as sure that if I began to have an affair she would not be the type of woman who would tolerate being left alone. Though I feel the need for outside companionship, I can't imagine breaking up my home. — H.J.

DEAR H.J.: Attend to affairs in your home instead of having one outside.

There's often a transition period after parenthood when men feel that they are being ignored by their wives while all attention goes to the children. In such instances it is not improbable that the man "turns against" his wife. In his own mind his sexual negation of her is revenge of sorts for the supposed indifference.

This is also a time in a marriage when men, regarding their wives as mothers, identify with their own mothers. Under the circumstances, sex can take on an incestuous overtone subconsciously.

Try to think of your wife as lover and mistress. Attempt to recreate the mood of your courtship and early marriage, finding times to be alone, enjoying evenings, celebrating as if on a date. If you are to save your marriage, you'll have to be creative and reverse the imaginary concept your have allowed to develop about your wife. Her reaction might surprise you.

The Widows World War I, Inc., a non-sectarian, non-political, non-profit organization is intensifying a membership drive. Founded in 1946 in Washington, D.C., where it is headquartered for the purpose of securing better legislation for the widows of World War I veterans.

Many widows have income well below the poverty level, and because of their age and lack of training in the specialized field of today, are not able to work. Many were widows before Social Security came into law.

There are many chapters in cities throughout the country, including Pomona.

Any World War I widow who had not remarried was eligible, previously, but in 1971 a resolution was passed to accept any World War I widow who has remarried and her second husband passed away or who had divorced could revert back to her first husband's pension and become a member.

Guests will be greeted by Miss Helen Burrus and Mrs. Carolyn Colburn. Proceeds from the event will go to the association's scholarship fund and will be used to assist women preparing for the secretarial profession.

For further information call Mrs. Theresa Buechel, 629-5111, extension 8375.

Business Women's Week is national

The theme of the National Business Women's Week which is currently being observed is "Change, Challenge and Response."

Working women throughout the nation are being encouraged to change their image from good to great, to meet the challenge facing women today and to respond through positive action. Although more women today are receiving recognition today than ever before, it is a constant challenge to seek and receive recognition on the job and in society. President Jimmy Carter has designated this special period for the particular honoring of women's achievements as National Business Women's Week.

The celebration of the week, which is a nationwide observance, was organized by the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs in 1928 and has been celebrated annually since that time.

The Business and Professional Women's organization was founded in 1919 to promote the interests of all working women. Its 170,000 members extend to all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. Any woman who is actively engaged in a business or a profession is eligible for membership.

Mrs. Julia Arri, of Claremont, serves as First Vice President of the National Federation of BPW Clubs and as a trustee for the BPW Foundation. She is a member of the Pomona Club and has served in many capacities in the local club, district and as president of the State Federation previously to her becoming a national officer.

A National Women's Conference will be held in Houston, Texas Nov. 18 through 21 to provide a forum for America's women to express their viewpoints.

The idea for such a conference evolved during International Women's Year. A commission was appointed and Congress appropriated $5 million for it. It was mandated that state conferences be held throughout the country and then delegates would bring to Houston the resolutions suggested at the state conferences.

Because of the adverse publicity received by these state conferences and the subjects of resolutions being brought forth, in an unprecedented action, delegates at the recent BPW national convention, called for the women's movement to unify itself behind the Equal Rights Amendment and urged ERA supporters throughout the country to attend the Houston conference. The convention allocated $100,000 from a special ERA fund for a pro-ERA ratification assembly to establish a front of strength and solidarity.

Charity League party will aid scholarships

"A la Fiesta Otona" will be the theme for the annual couples' party which the Foothill Chapter of National Charity League has planned for Saturday. The proceeds from the event will go into the chapter's memorial scholarship fund.

The major philanthropic project of the Foothill Chapter is the memorial scholarship fund which was established a number of years ago to help young women attain higher educational goals by assisting them with loans to attend a college or university.

According to Mrs. George Graue, memorial scholarship fund chairman, four local girls presently are being assisted in attending Harvard Medical School and USC. Their majors include medicine, occupational therapy, music and library science.

Members of Mrs. Graue's committee include Mmes. James Cramer, J. T. Waller, Richard Hester and William Weber. Mrs. Joel Gillingwators is the representative from the NCL Juniors.

Women's panel set

An informal panel presentation by successful women in business and professions marks the first workshop presented by the new Re-entry Options for Women program Saturday at Cal State Fullerton.

"Conversations with Successful Women in Business and Professions" is set from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. in Commons II. The event is open to the public.

Members of the panel are Jane Armstrong, associate dean of instruction at Fullerton College; Marilyn Everest, management and training consultant for the firm of Management Enhancement; and Dr. Barbara A. Peterson, lecturer in special programs at Cal State Fullerton. The latter also coordinates a statewide program to end sex discrimination in California schools in compliance with federal law.

Re-entry Options for Women is a cooperative program to encourage and direct women toward non-traditional educational and career goals.

Funded by a federal grant, the project is sponsored jointly by the Office of Continuing Education and the Women's Center at Cal State Fullerton, Fullerton College's Women's Center, the North Orange County YWCA and the Santiago Library System.

The polka-dotted ladybird, or ladybug, is really a small beetle with a round body shaped like half a pea. The most familiar ladybirds are shiny red with black spots. But some are black with red spots. Still others are yellow with black or red spots.

These gaily colored insects live in orchards, gardens, and fields, where they eat great numbers of aphids and other plant-harming bugs.

In earlier times, farmers burning off their fields fretted about harming the helpful ladybird, giving rise to the children's verse: "Ladybird, ladybird, fly away home. Your house is on fire and your children are gone."

To "fly away home," a ladybird first raises its hard wing covers and then unfolds its flying wings.

The ladybird beetle got its name during the Middle Ages, when the insect was associated with the Virgin Mary by such names as creatures of Our Lady and animals of the Virgin.

Old gun show at fairgrounds

Don Bullock's California Gun & Collectors Show will be held at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Admission is $2, children under 12 75 cents.

Bullock and his wife, Alicia, are avid collectors, with wide interests. Their collection, assembled for more than 20 years, includes all sorts of guns, paintings, statues, American memorabilia and American Indian arts and crafts, many of the items going back 250 years or more. They will be showing some of their rarest weapons and an unusual lineup of fine Indian jewelry and other objects d'art.

Bulk of the displays will be provided by the scores of exhibitors who will bring Colt six-shooters (the guns that won the West); Remington and Winchester rifles, circa mid-1800s; the famous Kentucky long-guns; heavy flintlocks of the type carried by the Continentals in the Revolutionary War; blunderbuses from the Napoleonic era; pepper-guns; sword pistols; ceremonial swords worn by Union and Confederate officers in the Civil War, and many more firearms from the United States and abroad.

An expert gunsmith will be in attendance, ready to appraise all guns free of charge, or repair them if necessary. Bullock anticipates a great deal of bartering and trading will be going on at the show.

'Arrogant, aggressive and stubborn'

Maasai are Africa's problem tribe

By Richard Zimmerman

NAIROBI (NEA) — One of their representatives to the Kenyan parliament recently threatened to resign if, they, his constituents, didn't stop smearing themselves with red ochre and sauntering down the streets of Nairobi virtually naked.

"They" are the proud, slender, handsomely regal and vain Maasai, the famed lion-killing, cattle-rustling warriors of Kenya and Tanzania, whose tribal death knell was sounded 60 years ago in a now-classic study entitled "The Last of the Maasai."

Yet despite this pessimistically premature and moving epitaph and despite all the current political, social and economic pressures which often take the form of veiled racism on the part of Kenya's politically potent Kikuyu tribe, the Maasai stubbornly continue to exist today as one of the most visible and tourist-attracting tribes in all of East Africa.

Exist? Yes. But the Maasai nevertheless are still a growing embarrassment to their own political leaders, who the Maasai do not trust, and to the central Kenyan and Tanzanian governments, to which the Maasai pay as little attention as possible.

"They are arrogant, aggressive and ridiculously stubborn about accepting the fruits of economic development and enterprise — such as the plunder of wildlife on their well-stocked land," John Eames, who is writing a book on the Maasai, observes with bitter irony.

The piercing and progressive stretching of Maasai children's ear lobes has been labeled "disgraceful" by a Tanzanian official. The Maasai males' refusal often to wear much, if anything, under their traditional short, red cloaks has been termed "primitive" by official Kenyan government edict. And the Maasai "moran" — the young, unmarried warrior class — are considered to be a useless and pitiful anachronism in most of modern Africa.

Even older Maasai, after graduating from the moran class into settled married life during their middle 20s, refuse to breed and raise cattle for the greater good of the Kenyan economy, but rather as a measure of personal or clan wealth and prestige and for the mixture of curdled milk and fresh, whole blood which still serves as a staple of the Maasai diet.

Maasai cattle are as seldom slaughtered for meat as they are sold on the open market. And occasionally they are set to graze on the lawns of surprised and indignant Nairobi suburbanites when drought hits the vast and valuable lands set aside by treaty for the Maasai.

That Maasai elders control valuable land in a country hard pressed by a booming birth rate and a shortage of adequate grazing land for conventional herds is creating still another pressure on the Maasai. It is a pressure that the ambitious and sometimes avaricious Kikuyu, the tribe to which Kenya President Jomo Kenyatta belongs, are quite ready to take advantage of. Terrorized for centuries past by marauding Maasai warriers, whose ancient, complex and rigid traditions include the belief that all the cattle in the world are theirs to appropriate at will, the Kikuyu are not exactly agonizing over the prospect that Maasai culture may vanish from the face of Africa.

For some Kikuyu, "progress" means doing to the Maasai by edict what they were never able to do to them on the field of battle.

Recently, on the pretext that large numbers of cattle were being rustled, Kenyatta's elite internal security police, the General Services Unit, rounded up and arrested a large group of moran. The GSU, noted for respecting neither tribal traditions nor the niceties of Anglo-Saxon legal procedures, cut off the moran's elaborately braided hair, which had been carefully styled with animal fat and red ochre in a helmet-like fashion first described by the Greek historian Herodotus in the fifth century B.C.

To these and other insults and pressures the Maasai have reacted in a variety of ways, both noble and ignoble.

Unfortunately, most visitors observing Africa out of windows of tour buses see only the less noble aspects of what remains of Maasai culture. At the entrance to game parks and other tourist areas poorly dressed children, old Maasai women and even older Maasai men line the road, aggressively offering to pose for pictures (for a price, of course), selling beadwork made of gaudy plastic beads from Hong Kong rather than the traditional, softly hued, glass beads, or simply panhandling for a "shilingi" — a Kenyan shilling worth about 13 cents.

These sad, cardboard replicas of a proud people should remind tourists, especially Americans, of the unhappy fate of the American Indian.

But other serious researchers, such as Eames, have made the effort to travel deep into Maasailand to witness more authentic and wholesome vestiges of ancient Maasai culture, such as the "eunota," the joyous coming out of the moran into the state of junior elders. Like many Maasai traditions the eunota is not approved by the government, since so many Maasai ceremonies are equated with acts of civil disobedience such as cattle rustling or the killing of lions with only a spear and shield for protection.

Eames was both impressed and distressed by what he saw: impressed by what had been preserved, distressed by what had been lost.

"They (the soon-to-be-elders) wore the Roman chiton, but lengthened to cover bare buttocks and other embarrassments by order of the government," he later reported. "For this reason, the short-swords were not evident and sticks substituted for spears as the moran danced in thgir battle square formations."

Still, Eames found "it was an impressive military display . . . with battalions of moran stirring the dust with their undulating or high-jumping to the drumming cadence of a war chant."

Between these two extremes — the mendicant peddlers and the anachronistic moran — many young Maasai males (women are still treated as chattel) are struggling to strike a dignified balance between their heritage and the demands of an emerging Africa.

CHEESE DIPS, SPREADS 'N TIDBITS

Appealing variety with flair

Fried cheese, creamy 'nautical' appetizers

Serving a variety of appealing appetizers with flair is one of the quickest ways to transform an ordinary get-to-gether into a memorable event. Appetizers can be the frivolities of a meal or the meal itself. Either way, they are capable of setting a mood and readily adaptable to a variety of entertaining occasions from formal gourmet dinners to after-the-game buffets.

Unique flavor combinations and novel presentation are two secrets to uncommon party fare. When planning a menu for company, choose both "conventional" dishes — those containing ingredients universally liked — and "adventuresome" foods which are truly different.

Newsworthy because they fill both bills are these new recipes for hot and cold cheese appetizers from the Kraft Kitchens. Fried Cheese with jalapeno peppers and Parmesan Party Dip featuring a surprising blend of seasonings will please guests who appreciate a new Epicurean experience. And for friends who prefer familiar tastes, there's Nutty Fruit Spread, a new cheese ball variation featuring cheddar and cream cheeses, pineapple and pecans. Creamy Nautical appetizers and Cheddar Crunchies offer a flavorful texture contrast and round out the snack selection.

Almost as important as the food itself, is the way it's served. Bring your meat fondue pot or electric fryer to the table and let your guests pitch in and help make what they eat.

Consider a variety of serving containers. For example, use a wicker letter basket to hold "dippers." Simply line it first with foil or plastic wrap. Then create a garden with radish roses and broccoli florets in the bottom section. Arrange breadsticks and pretzels in the middle. And top it off by filling glasses with carrot and celery sticks.

Festive, but easy, these recipes and entertaining ideas can all be prepared or assembled ahead. So you can join the party too.

FRIED CHEESE

1 pkg., (8-oz.)monterey jack cheese with jalapeno peppers
1 cup dry bread crumbs
2 eggs, beaten
Vegetable oil

Cut cheese into bite-sized cubes. Dip each cheese cube in egg. Coat with crumbs; repeat. Fry in deep hot oil, 350 degrees, until lightly browned.

Variation: Substitute muenster, brick or monterey jack cheese, or sharp cheddar cheese for natural monterey jack cheese with jalapeno peppers.

Note: Cheese cubes may be coated and refrigerated until ready to cook.

CREAMY NAUTICAL APPETIZERS

1 pkg., (8-oz.) cream cheese
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1½ teaspoons chopped sweet pickle
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon prepared mustard
1 cup chopped, cooked shrimp
Pastry for 2-crust 9-inch pie
Vegetable oil

Combine softened cream cheese and lemon juice, mixing until well blended. Add onion, pickle, salt and mustard; mix well. Stir in shrimp. Roll out pastry on lightly floured surface to ⅛-inch thickness; cut into 3-inch circles. Place two level teaspoonfuls of shrimp mixture in the center or each circle. Moisten edges with cold water. Fold in half and seal edges. Fry in deep hot oil, 350 degrees, 2 to 3 minutes or until golden brown.

Approximately 3 dozen appetizers.

Variation: Substitute one 6½-oz. can tuna, drained, flaked, for shrimp. Omit salt.

MY FARMER ROLLS

An interesting recipe you won't find other places.

½ cup butter
2/3rds cup cultured sour cream
1½ cups flour
Filling, see below

In a heavy 1½-quart saucepan over low heat melt the butter; remove from heat. At once vigorously stir in the sour cream and then the flour until the dough comes away from the bottom and sides of the pan. Divide into 4 portions; turn out each onto a sheet of plastic wrap and flip wrap over; with fingers on wrap, pat each portion into a 3- or 4-inch square; wrap tightly and refrigerate overnight. On a prepared pastry cloth with a prepared stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll out one portion to an 8-inch square. Pile ¼ of the filling along one side, leaving a ½-inch space at edges; roll up tightly; pinch seam and turn up ends to seal well. Make 5 slashes, each almost the width of the roll, at equal intervals across the top. Treat remaining portions of dough the same way. Place well apart on a buttered jellyroll pan; bake in a preheated 375 degree oven until a pale gold — 30 minutes. Serve hot. Cut each roll in half through the center slash. Fill slashes, if you like, with strawberry preserves. Pass sour cream. Makes 4 rolls — 8 portions.

Filling: With a spoon beat together until blended an 8-ounce package of Farmer cheese and a 3-ounce package of cream cheese both at room temperature, 1 egg and ¼ cup sugar; chill overnight before using.

Is Your Food Bill Taking A Chunk Out of Your Budget?

Pollsters tell us that inflation is a shopper's #1 concern. On the heartening side, they go on to say that your answer to keeping prices down is "competition in the marketplace." We think you're right. So this ad is about what we're doing to fight inflation, and how we've tried to reduce your food bill, ever since 1963.

Lucky sets the record straight.

We make only 1.3% net profit. That's only 13¢ on every $10 you spend at our store . . . about the price of a pack of gum on your order. Doing business this way, we've grown to be the fourth largest supermarket chain in the United States*. Now, remember. We don't control wholesale prices. But we do control our own margin of profit, and we intend to keep that down. So, not only were we the first with discount pricing, we think you'll find we're still the leader with lower prices overall.

*According to Chain Store Age Magazine, July 1976.

Yes, we're satisfied with pennies:

Nearly 15 years ago, we decided that the thing we wanted most in the world was to stay in business a long, long time. We knew it would take a lot of satisfied customers to accomplish that feat. But shoppers were already pleased with the quality of our merchandise. We figured if they could also see a saving over other stores, they'd keep coming back to us, week after week. And that would keep us in business. Well, we've done it, folks. It's turned out the way we planned. We're doing a huge volume of business, keeping our profit low, instead of trying to get rich quick on our customers.

Your shopping list benefits.

Low prices is the name of our tune. And on top of the savings you'd expect from our way of doing business, our buyers usually arrange for a number of promotional allowances from manufacturers, that bring our shelf prices even lower. Look for the "Key Buy" tag when you shop. There's hundreds more than we can list here.

Cloud nine pie heavenly

Treat your family like guests — without over heating the kitchen. Try out no-bake dessert idea — Cloud Nine Pie.

Cool refreshment describes it best. Let the lemon-lime combination in the creamy filling be your coup. And you probably have practically all the ingredients at home.

To begin, you use bread crumbs to form the "crust" for this sweet-tart dessert. Use those dry slices that have been collecting in the bread box or refrigerator to make the bread crumbs. Store them in a covered jar until you have a few cups. They translate quickly into a terrific pie crust or casserole topping.

The filling for Cloud Nine Pie is just as super. Lemon-lime carbonated beverage thickened with unflavored gelatin and sweetened condensed milk blended with lemon and lime juices. That's all it takes!

Make it in the morning; forget about it until dinner. It adds an unforgetable, refreshing climax to any meal.

When you serve enriched bread to your family — the dried ends make enriched bread crumbs. And they're the best. Enrichment adds the B-vitamins — niacin, thiamin and riboflavin — plus the mineral, iron, to all breads and flours labeled "enriched."

CLOUD NINE PIE

CLOUD NINE PIE

2 cups enriched dry bread crumbs
½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
¾ cup melted butter
Cloud Nine Filling

Stir together bread crumbs and brown sugar. Pour melted butter over dry ingredients and stir to blend. Press mixture into 9-inch pie pan. Refrigerate until ready to fill. Fill with Cloud Nine Filling and refrigerate for at least 2 hours.

CLOUD NINE FILLING

1½ cups carbonated lemon-lime beverage
1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
1 can (14 oz.) sweetened condensed milk
3 tablespoons lemon juice
3 tablespoons lime juice
¼ teaspoon salt
2 to 3 drops green food coloring

Add ¾ cup carbonated beverage to small saucepan. Sprinkle gelatin over liquid. Heat mixture until gelatin is completely dissolved, stirring frequently. Add remainder of carbonated beverage and refrigerate until slightly jelled. Combine condensed milk, lemon and lime juices, and salt; stir until mixture thickens. Combine milk mixture, gelatin mixture and food coloring. Beat until smooth. Pour into pie shell.

PARMESAN PARTY DIP

1 pkg., (8-oz.) sour dressing
¼ cup milk
¼ cupgrated parmesan cheese
1 tablespoon instant minced onion
1 teaspoon poppy seed
¼ teaspoon salt

Combine sour dressing and milk, mixing until well blended. Stir in remaining ingredients. Chill. Serve with vegetable dippers or bread sticks. Makes 1¼ cups.

Salad news

Add the sweet tang of canned pineapple chunks to marinated artichoke hearts. Serve on crisp lettuce with a curl of pimiento and lemon wedge.

Savory ham slice different

When the fall schedule becomes hectic, many homemakers find it easiest to rely on tried and true recipes. But since variety is important to keep mealtime interest high, plan on occasionaly serving a diffeent entree — one that's quick and easy too!

For a flavorful dinner that's a snap to prepare serve a tasty sauce with a panbroiled ham slice, says Reba Staggs, National Live Stock and Meat Board home economist.

SAVORY HAM SLICE

1 "fully-cooked" smoked ham slice, cut ¾ to 1 inch thick
1 small onion, finely chopped
1 tablespoon sugar
¼ teaspoon thyme

Grease large frying-pan with ham fat. Panbroil ham slice slowly, turning occasionally, 15 to 20 minutes, until lightly browned and thoroughly heated through. Remove to hot platter and keep warm. Add onion to pan drippings and cook slowly 2 to 5 minutes. Add tomatoes and break into small pieces. Add sugar and thyme and cook slowly 10 to 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Serve sauce with ham slices. Makes 5 to 6 servings.

CREAM PUFFS WITH A FLAIR

Snappy cream 'puffs'

"It's the little things that count" . . . this simple slogan applies to cooking as well as life. Many times the addition of one ingredient makes all the difference. Mustard has that certain magic about it; a dash perks up many basically good recipes. For instance, take mayonnaise from the jar, add a teaspoon of mustard and some honey and the results are a zingy topping for fruit or vegetable salads. Add some cheese and mustard to basic cream puff dough and the baked results are an outstanding snack. Try a little mustard magic in your cooking.

SNAPPY CREAM PUFFS

1 cup water
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup flour
4 eggs
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
1 tablespoon spicy brown mustard

Bring water to boil in one quart saucepan. Add salt and butter. Turn heat to simmer, and allow butter to melt. Remove from heat; add flour, stir until ball is formed. Then add eggs one at a time. Stir vigorously after each egg is added. Batter should be smooth and satiny. Then add cheese and mustard; stir. Spoon with teaspoon on greased cookie sheet. Bake at 375 degrees oven for 20 minutes. Puncture sides of puffs with knife to let out steam. Return to oven for 3 to 5 minutes more. Remove; cool on cake rack. Eat "as is" for cocktail snack or insert small pieces of ham (1 x 2 inches). Makes 24 puffs.

MUSTARD FRUIT SALAD DRESSING

1¼ cups mayonnaise
2 teaspoons spicy brown mustard
1 tablespoon honey
2 tablespoons vinegar

Combine all ingredients. Serve over fruit or vegetable salad. Makes 1½ cups.

MEDITERRANEAN-STYLE FISH PORTIONS

Good cooked outdoors, or in

Mediterranean-style 'fish' portion sandwiches filling

Probably the most interesting and unusual sandwiches of the summer are Mediterranean Style Fish Portion Sandwiches. They're fashioned of frozen, convenient fish portions which are cooked in a hinged wire grill, then tucked into pita bread envelopes with lettuce, tomato slices, a sauce, and a green onion. If pita bread is not available, hamburger buns will do.

Fish portions, high in protein and low in saturated fats, are kept in the freezer until outdoor eating time. The appealing sandwiches may be cooked outdoors or in, easily, quickly, and without problems. The sauces, Dill Fish Sauce and Mediterranean Style Tartar Sauce, are combined in minutes. Both complement the portions nicely.

When pita bread is used, it becomes an envelope so it holds the lettuce, tomato, fish portion, and sauce without any spillage. The sandwich is both luscious and leakproof. When Mediterranean Style Fish Portion Sandwiches are encased in hamburger buns, more care must be taken.

To begin the meal, a cheese dip may be served with assorted raw vegetables. Then the sandwiches, either potato salad or rice pilaf is a delicious accompaniment. Probably the most unusual part of the entire meal is the pita bread, a flat bread used in Middle Eastern and North African countries for about 5,000 years. Some gourmet diners call it Syrian or Lebanese bread.

Both young people and adults like these sandwiches. The cook can select portions of various sizes, being as generous as he or she likes. For hungry outdoor picnickers, a dessert and beverage usually makes the meal complete. Chilled cantaloupe with fresh berries or fresh fruit would be a cooling close, along with iced tea or lemondade.

Luscious and leakproof fish portion sandwiches come to the picnic table on a summer evening and everyone approves. The fish portions are simply delectable and the pita bread is different, delightful and delicious.

Cheese spread

If you're turning to lighter foods such as broiled fish, dress broiled fish with this Deviled Cheese Spread: Mix 2 cups (8 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese with ¼ cup chili sauce, 2 tablespoons prepared mustard and 1 tablespoon prepared horseradish. Spread on broiled fish and broil an additional 1 to 2 minutes or until cheese melts. This makes 1 and 2/3 cups; may also be used for spreading bread or appetizers.

Spreads

Spread that cracker: first beat 2 cups (8 oz.) shredded Swiss cheese with ¼ cup dairy sour cream, 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion, 1 tablespoon chopped pimiento and 4 slices bacon, cooked, drained and crumbled. Place a tablespoon on a round cracker and broil until cheese starts to melt. Yield: 1 and 1/3 cups.

MEDITERRANEAN STYLE FISH PORTION SANDWICHES

12 frozen fried fish portions (3 oz. each)
¼ cup oil
Paprika
6 Pita Bread, defrosted and cut in half or 12 hamburger buns
Leaf lettuce
12 thin tomato slices
Dill Sauce or Mediterranean Style Tartar Sauce
12 green onions

For outdoor cooking brush fish portions lightly with oil, rinkle with paprika and place in a well-greased, hinged wire grill. Cook about 4 inches from moderately hot coals 6 to 8 minutes or until browned on first side; turn and cook 5 to 7 minutes on second side or until fish flakes easily when tsted with fork. While fish portions are heating, cut pita bread in half and wrap halves or hamburger buns in foil. Place at back of grill or in warming oven to heat. Fill each envelope of pita bread with a lettuce leaf, 1 slice of tomato, a fish portion, the sauce desired, and a green onion. Repeat process until all sandwiches have been prepared. If hamburger buns are used, assemble ingredients on bottom half of bun; cover with bun top. Makes 12 sandwiches, 6 servings.

For indoor cooking heat fish portions as directed on package label.

To heat Pita Bread Defrost frozen bread at room temperature 35 to 40 minutes and cut in half crosswise. Wrap bread in foil and heat slowly on back of grill. When preparing sandwiches indoors, warm bread slightly on a baking sheet in slow oven, 300 degrees F., about 5 minutes.

DILL FISH SAUCE

1 cup salad dressing
½ cup chopped dill pickle
½ cup catsup or chili sauce
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
1 tablespoon dill pickle juice

Combine ingredients; mix well. Makes about 1½ or 2 cups.

MEDITERRANEAN STYLE TARTAR SAUCE

1 cup salad dressing
1/3 cup coarsely chopped ripe olives
3 tablespoon chopped green onion
2 tablespoons drained sweet pickle relish
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Dash garlic powder
Dash cayenne

Combine ingredients; mix well. Makes about 1½ cups.

Nutrition 'balls' tangy, crunchy

Seven of 10 homemakers questioned in a national survey consider breakfast the most important, yet most difficult, meal to get family members to eat.

The study, conducted by National Family Opinion, Inc., questioned 1,000 homemakers and found lack of appetite, weight control and boredom with typical breakfast foods as the most common reasons for skipping breakfast.

But, according to nutritionists, the body is hungry for nutrients regardless of appetite after eight to 12 hours without food. Eating breakfast, they say, helps prevent mid to late-morning fatigue and overeating at lunch.

Breakfast should supply from one-fourth to one-third the nutrients recommended for daily consumption. The easiest way is to choose foods daily from each of the four food groups. The four food group system was developed by nutritionists with the U.S. Department of Agriculture to help consumers meet recommended dietary allowances established by the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Academy of Sciences. Groups include milk, meat, vegetables and fruits, and breads and cereals.

A typical breakfast of milk, egg, orange juice and toast is balanced. The egg, because of its protein content, is a meat group food.

But breakfast doesn't have to be traditional to be nutritious. A glass of tomato juice and a grilled ham and cheese sandwich is balanced nutritionally. So is a hamburger patty on a bun with tomato slices and a milk shake. Ice cream or yogurt with fresh fruit and a peanut butter sandwich is another balanced breakfast.

Ready-to-eat or speedy-to-fix foods can keep breakfast easy to prepare. Keep on hand foods like cold milk, ready-to-eat or quick cooking cereals, peanut butter, crackers, cheese or cheese spreads, instant pudding, hard cooked eggs, frozen waffles and pancakes, fresh fruits, and vegetable and fruit juices.

When you can't take time to sit and eat a leisurely breakfast, try having plenty of nutrition balls on hand. They're ideal for on-the-run breakfasts, nutritious snacks and special treats tucked into lunch bags.

The tangy, crunchy balls contain one food from each of the four food groups. Serve them with glasses of cold milk.

NUTRITION BALLS

- ¾ cup smooth or crunchy peanut butter
- 1¼ cup nonfat dry milk
- 1/3 cup granola or bran cereal
- 6 tablespoons frozen orange juice concentrate (thawed but not diluted)

Measure all ingredients into small mixing bowl. Mix well. Shape into 1-inch balls. No cooking is required. Wrap individually or in pairs in plastic wrap or place balls in covered storage container. Refrigerate or freeze. Makes 36 one-inch balls.

You'll love the home baked goodness and the low cost!

FLAVORFUL PORK CHOPS

Bavarian pork chop, kraut bake

Seasonal changes are reflected in food as well as foliage and autumn brings dozens of delicious pork cuts to the market. In the spirit of German "Oktoberfest," Americans celebrate their own harvest festival — "Porkfest." Since these festivals come at a time when the colorful fall fruits and vegetables that go so well with pork are plentiful, the timing is perfect to experiment with new flavor combinations or serve traditional favorites.

Bavarian Pork Chops and Kraut Bake is sure to satisfy larger fall appetites, says Reba Staggs, National Live Stock and Meat Board.

BAVARIAN PORK CHOP AND KRAUT BAKE

Brown 6 to 8 pork chops, cut ¾ to 1 inch thick, in 2 tablespoons lard or drippings in a large frying pan; season with 1 teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Combine 1 can (29 ounces) drained sauerkraut, 2 medium cored and chopped tart apples, 1 medium chopped onion, 1 tablespoon brown sugar and 1 teaspoon caraway seed and place in a 13 x 9-inch baking pan. Place chops on sauerkraut mixture. Cover tightly with foil and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 45 minutes. Uncover and continue baking 15 minutes, or until chops are done. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

MOLASSES BREAKFAST BARS

Molasses bars for breakfast

If yours is a family in perpetual motion, here is a great idea for instant breakfasts. These breakfast bars won't stay around the house long because they're rich and moist. Honey, molasses and mashed banana give them good flavor and nutrition. For extra nutrition, wheat germ, rolled oats and dates lend their goodness, and bananas double in this category too. Bananas contribute vitamins A, C, B1, B2, B6 and niacin as well as calcium, phosphorous and potassium. And they extend the keeping qualities of these bars, so you can make them on the weekend to enjoy during the busy week ahead.

Have a plateful of Old South 'Lasses Breakfast Bars on your table with a pitcher of milk at hand, and every on-the-run family member can easily "grab a bite" without forfeiting nutrition. It will be a tasty bite, too — and may lead to another! All the whole flavors of these nutritious ingredients blend together deliciously. With Old South 'Lasses Breakfast Bars, you can be sure you're getting a good breakfast, even if you don't have the time.

OLD SOUTH 'LASSES BREAKFAST BARS

1 cup butter, softened
1 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
2 eggs
⅓ cup honey
¼ cup dark molasses
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 large ripe bananas
2 cups white flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup wheat germ
¾ cup rolled oats
¾ cup chopped dates
Powdered sugar

In a large mixing bowl, cream together butter and sugar. Add eggs, beating until light and fluffy. Mix in honey, molasses and vanilla. Mash bananas and stir in. Blend together flour, baking powder and salt; add to banana mixture, blending well. Stir in wheat germ and rolled oats; then fold in chopped dates. Spread batter in a greased 13 by 9 inch baking dish. Bake in a 375 degree oven 35 to 40 minutes until pick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool slightly; sprinkle with powdered sugar. When cool, cut into bars. Makes 32 bars.

Lo-cal dessert

Place a can of sliced canned pineapple in freezer an hour to chill. Serve topped with frozen yogurt ice cream. Blueberry marble, strawberry or lemon are delicious with the pineapple.

Tasty 'tuna' pizza

Don't panic when the kids yell, "Hey Mom, may I invite a couple of friends to stay for supper?"

With the aid of a few basics from the cupboard and your refrigerator shelf, you can please the whole gang and satisfy their ravenous appetites, too.

Here's a pizza with a new touch — "Tasty Tuna Pizza. With biscuit mix, canned tuna, mayonnaise, cheese, and eggs on hand, you're all set to create this nutritional meal in minutes for lunch or supper. Extra zest to accent the tuna is provided by prepared yellow mustard.

To keep the children occupied while the pizza bakes, entertain them with a tray of whimsical vegetables characters. What a great time they'll have dismantling the vegetables and dipping them into the enticing "Dandy Dip" of cream cheese flavored with seasoning mix for sloppy joes. Vegetables were never so much fun.

TASTY TUNA PIZZA

4 cups biscuit baking mix
1 cup cold water
2 cans (7 ounces each) tuna, drained
1 tablespoon instant minced onion
2 tablespoons prepared yellow mustard
¾ cup mayonnaise
2 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
2 cups grated American cheese
Chopped tomatoes, green pepper, and olives, if desired

Mix together buscuit mix and water until dough holds together; knead dough 10 times. Divide dough in half and roll out two circles or pat to fit two medium-size pizza pans. Combine tuna, onion, mustard and mayonnaise; spread over pizza dough. Arrange egg slices and cheese on pizzas and sprinkle with chopped tomatoes, green pepper and/or olives, if desired. Bake in 425 degree oven 15 to 20 minutes. Makes 2 medium-size pizzas.

DANDY DIP FOR VEGETABLES

1 package (8 oz.) cream cheese, softened
1 envelope (1½ oz.) seasoning mix for sloppy joes
½ cup milk

Cut up raw vegetables such as radishes, carrots, cucumber, zucchini, celery

Combine cream cheese, contents of seasoning mix envelope, and milk; blend well and chill. Serve with cut up raw vegetables or create whimsical characters from vegetables pieces held together with food picks. Makes about 1½ cups dip.

Foiled chuck roast tasty

A pot roast without the pot? Why not use it for a cookout? Just because the fall is approaching doesn't mean you have to put away your grill. This pot roast, wrapped in foil, can be taken to a campsite or used for a backyard barbecue. It cooks right on the hot coals.

With that in mind, take advantage of this hearty fare: Foiled Pot Roast and Husk Roasted Corn with Home Style Butter will help satisfy ravenous appetites and break menu monotony while everyone enjoys the last of the nice weather.

Nothing could be easier, more economical or delicious than a chuck roast on the grill. The meat is a snap to prepare, with no browning necessary. Just add seasoning, provided by an envelope of sloppy joe seasoning mix, thick sliced onions, a little lemon juice, and meat tenderizer. Then wrap it in foil to seal in the juices and full-bodied aroma.

The ears of corn are also roasted right on the grill, in their husks. Don't forget the Home Sytle Butter. It brings out the tender-sweet flavor of fresh-picked corn on the cob. No one will guess the subtle flavor accent is provided by a touch of mustard and brown sugar blended into seasoned butter.

But never fear, if the weather should attempt to foil your cookout plans, Foiled Chuck Roast can be popped into the oven instead.

FOILED CHUCK ROAST

3½ to 4 pound chuck roast
Meat tenderizer
1 envelope (1½ oz.) sloppy joe seasoning mix
1 medium sized onion, cut in thick slices
½ cup water
Juice of one lemon

Tenderize chuck roast according to instructions on tenderizer bottle using ½ teaspoon tenderizer per pound of meat. Place roast on double thickness of two large sheets of heavy-duty aluminum foil. Sprinkle with contents of seasoning mix envelope and top with onion slices. Combine water and lemon juice; pour over meat. Wrap roast securely in foil so that juices will not escape during cooking. Place directly on ample bed of hot coals, building coals up around sides of package, and cook without turning 1 to 1½ hours depending on heat of fire. The roast may also be cooked in a 425 degree oven for 2 hours or until tender. Makes 6 to 7 servings.

HUSK ROASTED CORN

8 ears corn on the cob (do not remove husks)
Cold Water

Carefully lay back husks and remove corn silk. Smooth husks back into place and tie at tips. Soak ears one or more hours in cold water. Place corn directly on bed of hot coals and roast about fifteen minutes turning frequently to cook all sides. Strip off husks and serve with Home Style Butter Spread.

HOME STYLE BUTTER SPREAD

¼ pound (1 stick) butter or margarine, softened
2 tablespoons prepared mustard
1 teaspoon light brown sugar
1 teaspoon seasoned salt

Combine ingredients using electric mixer or fork. Spread on hot cooked ears of corn. Makes about ½ cup.

Fruit Puffs

For company gatherings or family dinners, these spectacular golden Walnut Fruit Puffs are a VIP dessert made easily. They're cream puffs brimming with a luscious fruited filling and crisp California Walnuts. Just delicately flavor whipped cream with honey or a little light molasses, then spice with nutmeg and ginger. Gently fold in sliced bananas or well drained canned Cling peache slices, along with chopped walnut kernels. Before serving, fill cream puff or eclair hollows with the mixture. Top each serving with a spoonful of filling and walnuts.

Super sandwich

For your own personal super sandwich, pair cheese with a favorite meat. Here are some conbinations you might like to try: Provolone with hard salami; Muenster with salami for beer; Colby with deviled ham; Swiss with smoked or boiled ham; or Colby with New England sausage.

Country omelet is a disguise

What to do with leftover ham and potatoes? Create a savory omelet for a hearty meal anytime of the day.

This "Open-Faced Country Omelet" is tasty, nutritious and a great way to cleverly disguise leftovers.

You can be flexible with this kind of omelet — using leftover cooked bacon, ham or sausage meat and as many cold boiled potatoes as you have on hand.

No matter how you make it, it always tastes good — whether it's breakfast after an active morning of jogging or biking, a Sunday company brunch or a quick dinner for two.

COUNTRY OMELET

2 cups cooked, peeled and sliced potatoes
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
1 tablespoon bacon drippings, butter or shortening
1 cup cooked and diced ham, bacon or sausage
7 large eggs
2 tablespoons milk
1 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
Dash nutmeg
Parsley

Over medium-high heat, brown potatoes and onions in bacon drippings using a 10-inch fry pan; turn occasionally to brown on all sides (about 15-20 minutes). Reduce heat to medium. Sprinkle ham on top. Beat together eggs, milk, salt, pepper, nutmeg; pour over potato mixture; cover. During cooking, occasionally remove cover; tilt pan; slip spatula around side of pan to allow uncooked egg mixture to flow to the bottom. Cook until eggs are set and omelet puffy around the edges (about 10 minutes). Serve from pan or gently slide onto serving plate. Garnish with sprigs of parsley. Cut in pie-shaped wedges. Makes six to eight servings.

Dress omelet

Lightly brown small strips of ham with finely chopped green pepper in a little butter. Add well drained canned pineapple chunks and heat briefly. Sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese and serve over a fluffy omelet.

CABBAGE STUFFED WITH CHICKEN

Stuffed cabbage rolls set

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Mention stuffed cabbage or cabbage rolls and most think of a ground meat filling. Next time your family yens for cabbage rolls try a new stuffing. Here is one that uses chicken or turkey, wheat germ and chopped mushrooms. This is an economical entree you'll want to add to your weekly menu. It has a rich tomato sauce that goes well on the platter with mashed potatoes or creamed corn.

You may want to double or triple the recipe for larger groups, especially for buffet serving.

WHEAT GERM STUFFED CABBAGE ROLLS

8 to 10 large cabbage leaves
¼ cup finely chopped onion
6 tablespoons butter
2 cups chopped cooked chicken or turkey
1 cup soft bread crumbs
½ cup vacuum packed regular wheat germ
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1 teaspoon rosemary
1 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
1 can (3 ounce) chopped mushrooms, undrained
1 can (8 ounce) tomato sauce
½ cup boiling water
Mushroom tomato sauce

Gently pull off 8 to 10 outer leaves on cabbage, loosening at stem end with knife to prevent tearing. Simmer uncovered in boiling water 3 minutes. Drain. Cut tough portion of stem from cabbage leaves. Saute onion in one-fourth cup butter until soft but not brown. Remove from heat. Add chicken, bread crumbs, wheat germ, parsley, seasonings, undrained mushrooms and all but one-third cup tomato sauce. Mix well. Place about one-third cup filling on each cabbage leaf. Fold in edges and roll up. Place in single layer, seam side down, in greased 13 x 9 x 2-inch pan. Add one-half cup boiling water and dot with remaining 2 tablespoons butter. Cover. Bake in 350 degree oven 1 hour. Serve with Mushroom Tomato Sauce. Makes 4 servings.

MUSHROOM TOMATO SAUCE: To reserved one-third cup tomato sauce add 1 (ten and one-half ounce) can condensed cream of mushroom soup and one-fourth cup milk. Heat slowly, stirring constantly until smooth and hot.

Pork steak, bean bake for mealtime 'imagination'

If you're looking for mealtime variety in the meat case, when your eye reaches pork steaks you need look no further.

By using your imagination and providing a little special attention, pork blade steaks are a candidate for many especially appetizing autumn meals, says Reba Staggs, National Live Stock and Meat Board home economist.

The recipe for Pork Steak and Bean Bake is a good example of how these tasty steaks can be used to enhance a savory bean casserole conveniently made from cupboard shelf ingredients.

PORK STEAK and BEAN BAKE

2 or 3 pork blade steaks, cut ½ to ¾ inch thick
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup catsup
2 tablespoons brown sugar
1 tablespoon vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
1 can (16 oz.) pork and beans
1 can (16 oz.) lima beans or butter beans, drained
1 can (15 oz.) kidney or red beans, drained

Brown steaks on both sides in large frying pan, remove and season with 1 teaspoon salt. Add catsup, brown sugar, vinegar and ½ teaspoon salt to pan drippings, stirring to combine. Lightly stir in pork and beans, lima or butter beans and kidney or red beans. Place bean mixture in a Dutch oven or an 11½ by 8-inch baking dish. Place steaks on top of beans, cover tightly and bake in slow oven (325 degrees) for 1 hour. Remove cover and continue baking 15 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

Prescription controls set

FDA requires warning with 'estrogen' drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government, saying estrogen drugs may cause cancer if taken to excess, is requiring that warning brochures be given with every estrogen prescription starting this week.

The Food and Drug Administration says women receiving the drugs must be told in plain language the risks of taking the female sex hormones.

The most serious risk is cancer of the lining of the uterus, FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy said Monday. The risk increases if estrogens are used "too frequently or too long," he said, and can be five to 10 times greater than for a woman who has never taken estrogens.

The odds of developing gall bladder disease requiring surgery are 2½ times as great, he warned.

Five million American women now take estrogen drugs during and after menopause, and Kennedy said he hopes the warning brochure will reduce that number "at least by half."

The drug industry and doctors' groups have opposed the FDA labeling requirement in court, but so far without success.

The FDA first proposed its estrogen warning program in July, with the brochure requirement to take effect Sept. 20. The effective date was pushed back because of the court challenges.

In other health news:

—The House voted overwhelmingly Monday to prevent the FDA from enforcing its proposed ban on saccharin for 18 months. The Senate also has voted for an 18-month postponement, but the two houses must reconcile differences on whether the artificial sweetener should be sold with a warning label.

—The Environmental Defense Fund asked the FDA on Monday to require a cancer warning label on permanent hair dyes that the group said are used by 25 million American women.

Kennedy said the FDA has asked the National Cancer Institute to expedite a study on two suspect chemicals in hair dye, and "we'll take regulatory action if necessary after the results are final." An institute spokeswoman said preliminary data show "the chemicals are positive cancer-causing agents in rats and mice."

—The Agriculture Department said it intends to ban the chemical used to cure bacon, ham and other lunch meats unless manufacturers can prove the substance doesn't cause cancer.

The department is ordering manufacturers to test the preservative, sodium nitrite, to see whether it acts with other substances to form a cancer-causing agent, nitrosamine.

In his news conference Monday, Kennedy called estrogens "valuable drugs with many beneficial purposes." But he said estrogens were not "essential therapy during the menopause, and certainly the least necessary use of estrogens is after menopause." He also said they do not keep skin soft or provide a feeling of youth.

Last year, the FDA instructed physicians to prescribe estrogens in the lowest possible doses for the shortest possible times, and to re-evaluate use of the drug every six months. The brochures for patients repeat that advice. They also warn that estrogens should never be used during pregnancy.

Estrogen drugs also are used to treat certain cancers and as an ingredient in contraceptive pills taken by eight million American women. Kennedy said there is no evidence linking the estrogen used in the pills to cancer.

Estrogens are female hormones produced by the ovaries. Women experience a decrease in their estrogen production during menopause, which usually occurs between the ages of 45 and 55.

Beer dogs and sauerkraut set

Hot dogs go great — any time, any place! There's a secret in a way of cooking and presentation of this seemingly ordinary food, a gastronomic trick which has built a world-wide reputation for the great European sausage makers. And do you know what the secret is? It's simply cooking the hot dogs, and sauerkraut if you like, in beer instead of water!

If that sounds too simple to be true, just try it and compare. You'll never use water again.

Sauerkraut is a standard favorite which responds like magic to a simmering infusion of the subtle herbs and hops and malt in beer. The longer you cook it, the better it gets, but it depends on how crisp or soft you like your sauerkraut.

For a party specialty touch, make your own hot dog buns from a hot roll mix built with beer. You'll never notice the beer flavor, incidentally, so it's safe to have several dishes cooked with beer. All that comes through the menu is the indefinable good taste which beer imparts.

BEER DOGS

Cover desired number of hot dogs with beer. Add 1 sliced onion. Let marinade for a few hours. Heat in beer just below boiling point for 5-8 minutes. Serve hot.

SAUERKRAUT

Place undrained sauerkraut in pan with 2 or 3 strips diced bacon. Cover with beer. Stir in 1 teaspoon sugar. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer uncovered until beer is absorbed.

HOT DOG ROLLS

1 package (13¾ oz.) hot roll mix
1 tablespoon instant minced onion
1 teaspoon paprika
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
¾ cup beer
1 egg

Remove yeast from mix. Place dry ingredients in bowl and mix in onion, paprika and grated cheese. Heat beer in pan until lukewarm. Remove from heat and add yeast. Stir until dissolved. Mix in egg. Add liquid all at once to dry ingredients and mix until stiff dough is formed. Cover and let rise until doubled. Punch down and knead lightly until smooth. Cut dough into 10 pieces. Roll each into 7-inch long rope. Place on cookie sheet and let rise until doubled. Bake at 400 degrees for 12 to 15 minutes. Yields 10 rolls.

Nutrition for public no miracle

By GAYNOR MADDOX

While it won't include a miracle diet or offer a panacea for all human ills, a book to be called "Nutrition for the public," to be published early in 1978 by the American Dietetic Association, will contribute to advancing knowledge about the part modern nutrition plays in the life of man.

The Association is a group of scientifically trained persons skilled in monitoring foods according to their specific function in the body. It is their duty to serve hospitals, schools, extension groups, universities and such. They decided to prepare such a book for the layman.

After screening possible editors, they selected a doctor of education from Columbia Teachers College who is currently associate specialist in Foods and Nutrition at Cook College, Rutgers University, in New Jersey. Editor Audrey Burkhart has had 10 years experience as an extension food specialist.

She is eager and informed. "I'll answer the questions most important to the layman — not what dieticians think are the most important."

The questions about fiber in the diet have indicated a growing fad. "We plan to explain what is known — not guessed at — about fiber.

"People ask about buying some food supplies in health food stores. We warn them against unchecked enthusiasm but do tell them about some of the changes that health food stores have made. Many intelligent people now buy some of their special items. Gone are many of the cranks and health faddists," she explains.

Vegetarianism is another question. "There are many favorable angles to this manner of eating. It is ages old. Except for the confusion it breeds in some households, it can be a thoroughly healthful way of eating.

"Information read by those who believe vitamins can increase energy output has to be debunked, but with patience. Also those who think vitamins will help you lose weight need more facts.

"The revival of home canning of food needs some nutritional warnings. We plan to urge women to follow only the newest rules, not grandma's way. Also, we plan to urge homemakers not to try to can fancy combinations but to buy them at the supermarket.

"We plan to answer questions about salt in the diet and also about sugars.

"There are countless other questions, of course. But one of the most frequently asked is how to lose weight. In general, I think the main cause of these questions is that women want to be slender for cosmetic reasons. But with today's emphasis by physicians and nutritionists on overweight as one of the contributing causes of heart disease and cancer, the desire to lose excess pounds has become more intense."

"Nutrition for the Public" will be published early in 1978 by Harper and Row. Dr. Burkhart is convinced it will be a friend to the puzzled layman.

Androgynous management

NEW YORK (AP) — Interviews with top executives of both sexes show that corporations will both do and look better if they promote women to key executive spots, say two professors in "Advanced Management Journal," a publication of the American Management Associations.

Studies by Suzanne H. Cook and Jack L. Mendelson, professors in the College of Business at Arizona State University, show male values in the business world to be those of "brute force," including "risk, competition and aggressiveness," while female attitudes are "humanitarian," involving concern for "social welfare, honor and loyalty."

New role: marathon eaters

Abundance of food is way of life in America

By GAYNOR MADDOX

Despite higher prices, not scarcity but abundance of food is the way of life in America today. To be explicit, it is for those with money. Our lives are saturated with the historical three squares a day, plus the inevitable coffee break and our passion for snack foods. We seem to have assumed the role of marathon eaters.

What most seem to forget is that once past 25, when you reach your optimum weight, you begin physiologically aging. That is a hard fact of life to accept. From then on, weight control becomes a complex problem. You need slightly less food each succeeding year, not more.

There are many things to do about maintaining your youthful figure. But today, let's discuss only two of them. Get out of your chair more often and nibble less.

Most of us eat too much. Many do not get enough physical exercise. We need to flex our muscles more, and to by-pass a few of those snacks. In brief: Calorie control and exercise, fueled by common sense and will power, are the basic forces in any long-term weight-control program. Neither one alone can do the trick. Any flexing of the muscles, great or little, is exercise, and burns up fuel, which is calories.

Restless, energetic people who seem never to stand still burn up more calories than relaxed, placid people. An impatient man who rushes across the room to switch TV channels, burns up several more calories than the fellow in the armchair, with remote control. The woman who drags her market cart home has a smaller amount of excess calories to handle than the woman who orders by phone.

Scientists have calculated that energetic people in the "white collar" brackets may burn up 66 calories an hour more than their "why not take it easy" brethren. Exercise also means activity that involves the whole body, such as walking, jogging, swimming, dancing, tennis, etc. Small overweight persons often complain that though they exercise as regularly as their larger overweight friends, they do not lose as fast as the bigger fellows. That is because in any activity involving the whole body, the calorie use varies with the size of your body.

In other words, the amount of freight aboard determines the amount of fuel (calories) needed to move it. Of course, a small person, desiring to burn up calories faster, could carry extra pounds in a bag when he goes walking. In fact, that has been done.

The main fact to remember is that all forms of physical activity have a calorie cost — the amount of calories used. The calorie cost varies depending on the activity and, to a degree, on the body weight of the person involved.

In National Sandwich Idea Contest

Dilly beef, turkey louise and ricotta regal sandwich winners

Danish born, Anders Jensen, of Oak Park, Illinois, won laurels today as creator of one of this year's "Top Three" in the National Sandwich Idea Contest. He was awarded $500 cash before a royal gathering at the 22nd annual Coronation Luncheon held at New York City's Regency Hotel, for his "Turkey Louise."

This year's grand prize winner is Wesley N. Pollock of Maryland Heights, Missouri, with his entry, "Dilly Beef." The finalist is Anthony Mangifesti, North Reading, Massachusetts, for his creation, "Ricotta Regal."

As the 1977 Sandwich King, Pollock receives a second $500 and a culinary tour for two anywhere in Europe he chooses.

Jensen, Executive Chef at Nielsen's Restaurant in nearby Elmwood Park, saw his first attempt to win the sandwich crown bid for top honors. His "Turkey Louise" was identified as the perfect sandwich to serve the day after Thanksgiving — or anytime you have the ingredients at hand — turkey, cranberry sauce and oranges. Although not on the menu yet at Nielsen's Jensen expects it to be added very soon.

Jensen began his training in Denmark at Copenhagen's Hotel and Restaurant School, where he received a degree in Food Service and Restaurant Management. He then worked as Sous Chef at the Langeline Pavillion and Assistant Chef at Den Gyldne Fortun Restaurant in Denmark.

About his current position with Nielsens, where he has been for the past four years, Jensen says, "This is a stepping stone to my ultimate goal — operating a restaurant chain."

Jensen participates in many extra curricular activities yielding added recognition. Among these are the Dale Carnegie Management Seminar; Certificate of Appreciation from Triton College, River Grove, Ill.; and a National Restaurant Association Certificate of Cost Control.

Jensen has his own firm — A.J. Consultants — where one of his major interests lies in the development of vegetable sculpture, ice carving and plaster sculptures.

All "Top 20" sandwich recipes are featured in a recipe leaflet distributed widely to both the food service industry and consumers.

The National Sandwich Idea Contest has been seeking out and rewarding creative food service professionals for the past 22 years. This year's sponsors are the National Live Stock and Meat Board, the International Natural Sausage Casing Association, the National Fisheries Institute, and the Wheat Flour Institute, in cooperation with the National Restaurant Association.

Pork Packers

Pork was the main product of America's first meat packer, William Pynchon; and barreled pork was the basis of much of the flourishing export trade with the West Indies from Worcester, Massachusetts, before 1700. Later, at the time the covered wagons moved westward, hogs went with them, foraging for their own food. When the westward moving pioneers became settlers, they used the abundant Indian corn as feed for hogs. This is how the pork industry, as we know it today, was born.

Cheese ABC's

One word definitions for the ABC's of cheese: A is for American type cheeses which include Cheddar. B is for Blue which is the color of the mold in Blue cheese. Mozzarella is the pizza cheese and the smoky-flavored cheese in Provolone. Swiss is the "hole" cheese.

Lime tea 'ice' cool, fruitful

There is nothing quite so refreshing on a hot day as an ice-cold summer drink made with limes. Luscious tropical fruits are well known for their natural, refreshing qualities. And limes, juicy and bursting with flavor, really help beat the heat of summer.

An endless list of cool summer beverages is possible with versatile limes. Limeade is one of the popular favorites. Or, try a lime blender drink by combining lime juice with cream and other fresh fruits. A splash of lime juice also gives new life to traditional summer beverages like ice tea and soft drinks. Lime juice is an especially nice enhancer to diet soft drinks, giving them an extra zip.

"Lime cubes" are a simple way to store fresh lime juice for future use. Simply squeeze lime juice into ice trays and freeze. Next time you're ready to serve a summer cooler, use one or two in place of ordinary ice cubes for a dynamic flavor enhancer.

Limes are generally available year round with peak supplies during the summer months. This year, though, due to last January's freeze in Florida, the '77 peak season has been slightly delayed. Fortunately, we're now enjoying an abundant supply at reasonable prices and the fresh cool taste seems better than ever after waiting.

Because limes are so heavy with juice, even a tiny squeeze will produce a surprising burst of sweet-tart liquid. To get every drop, apply gentle pressure to the lime by rolling it between the palm of your hand and the kitchen counter before you cut and squeeze it. One more bonus with limes — they're seedless? So forget about tedious straining and just squeeze fresh lime wedges directly into drinks, salads, entrees and desserts.

Lime Tea Ice is a summer treat that will bring back memories of childhood snow cones and slushes. This refreshing cooler or dessert combines the marvelous thirst-quenching qualities of tea with the superb flavor of fresh limes. The result is a tempting, icy snack that's a delicious low-calorie alternative to ice cream and sherbet. Attractive to serve and easy to prepare, Lime Tea Ice is a sensational addition to summer fun.

LIME TEA ICE

6 tea bags
3 cups boiling water
1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
¼ cup cold water
1½ cups sugar
6 to 8 limes

Steep tea in boiling water for 5 minutes. Meanwhile, soften gelatin in cold water. Remove tea bags. Stir softened gelatin and sugar into hot tea, until dissolved. Grate 1 lime; then juice enough limes to make 1 cup juice. Stir grated peel and juice into tea mixture. Pour into ice cube trays or shallow pan. Freeze until slushy; then put in mixing bowl and beat smooth. Refreeze until firm. Serve in dessert cups, garnished with wedges of lime. Makes about 1 quart.

Temptation too great

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — What 19-year-old mechanic wouldn't welcome a chance to take the police car he was working on out for a spin?

The Iowa Highway Patrol, however, didn't take kindly to the way Deon Luedtke did it.

Officers said Luedtke picked up a friend and drove the patrol car 25 miles over country highways with red lights flashing and siren blaring.

What's more, the transmission Luedtke had worked on leaked oil to an exhaust pipe and a fire started, but he managed to put it out.

He was arraigned on a charge of operating a motor vehicle without the owner's consent.

It's Reggie . . . Reggie . . . Reggie

Will Grimsley
Associated Press Special Correspondent

Reggie makes things happen

Okay, Reggie, you have proven your point. Let no man say otherwise. You are indeed the straw that stirs the drink. You are the eye of the storm. You are the spark that fires the ignition. You make things happen.

Let it be your monument in history: The ball player who never hit .300 in a regular season yet the man who could always reach back for that special kind of magic that turns paupers into kings.

Even your once-bitter rival, Thurman Munson, had to admit it.

"Without him," said Munson, "we wouldn't have won the pennant. Without him, we wouldn't have won the World Series."

Such is the story of the baseball life of Reginald Martinez Jackson, the Wyncote, Pa., tailor's son whose ability to produce under pressure sparked the Oakland A's to World Championships in 1972, 1973 and 1974.

Now you have done it for the proud and haughty New York Yankees, just as your boss and benefactor, George Steinbrenner III, said you would.

A record five home runs in the World Series, three in one game, four in four official at-bats, 10 runs scored, eight runs batted in, a .450 batting average — an individual performance on level with the immortals.

"The word superstar is overused — Ruth, DiMaggio, Mays, Clemente," you told reporters modestly. "But I can say I had one day like those guys."

Not easy

Indeed you did. But it wasn't easy. Remember all those lonely, frustrating moments during the summer.

You were the "Teacher's Pet." The boss took you in his limousine and showed you the town. He signed you to a $2.9-million contract.

This made you the most unpopular man in the Yankees clubhouse. Munson, the Most Valuable Player of the previous year, got mad when you told a magazine writer that you were "the straw that stirred the drink." You said Munson could only stir it bad.

It was an undiplomatic thing to say, but you are not diplomatic. You say what comes to your tongue. No subtleties. No deviousness. You take the consequences.

The consequences were costly.

Munson refused to shake your hand. Third baseman Graig Nettles made unhappy noises. Players with the same color of dark skin moved their lockers to the other side of the room.

There you sat, alone and brooding, on your locker stool— not liked by the manager and ignored by almost everyone but backup catcher Fran Healy, whose friendship never wavered.

The manager, accustomed to center stage, resented you. He wouldn't bat you cleanup. Once he yanked you in front of a national television audience and, when you objected to the indignity, the two of you almost came to blows in the dugout.

Yet it was you who interceded when the manager was about to be fired. You helped save his job.

Hostile press

It was an agonizing summer.

The fans were goaded by a hostile press. They booed you at every turn. Pressures, even with your princely salary, became almost unbearable. Your father quit coming up from Philadelphia to watch you play. Your mother wouldn't turn on the radio.

Remember how you sat in your loneliness and said to yourself, "Why do I have to take all of this stuff? I have a good job waiting for me outside."

Quitting would have been easy, but it was not your way. It was a word you didn't know. You owed too much to too many, so you stuck it out.

You were "Mister September" in the Yankees' fierce pennant drive. You closed your lips and tightened the grip on your bat. You became the Yankees' sparkplug, and everybody knew it. Your life changed.

And the climax came just before 11 p.m. on a chill Tuesday night when you propelled your third home run of the evening into the black-painted unoccupied bleachers in deep center field.

And out there in center field somewhere, the TV cameras zeroed in on a bronze plaque of the great Babe Ruth. The old Bambino seemed to wear a smile.

NEW YORK (AP) — Reggie Jackson, the man who stirred the drink, made it a champagne cocktail. With three magnificently dramatic home runs, he gift-wrapped the New York Yankees' 21st World Series championship.

"I am the straw that stirs the drink," Jackson said before he had ever batted for the Yankees in a major league game. "(Catcher and captain Thurman) Munson can only stir it bad."

Though that comment alienated Munson and touched off the Yankees' soap opera season of conflict and controversy, all was forgotten Tuesday night. Jackson powered New York to an 8-4 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers and gave the Yankees the World Series, four games to two.

"Ah, the taste of victory," Jackson said, swigging a bottle of champagne in the jubilant Yankees locker room. "This symbolizes victory and being champions."

One year after the Yankees suffered World Series disgrace, a four-game sweep by Cincinnati last October, the Yankees were No. 1—the only number acceptable to owner George Steinbrenner.

Steinbrenner, who bought the Yankees in 1973, is the architect of the Yankees' supremely successful season. It was Steinbrenner who spent $2.9 million to bring the free-agent Jackson to New York.

"The next morning, after we were beaten in four straight by Cincinnati, we began working on this year," Steinbrenner said. "I swore it was not gonna happen again.

"Now, we're on top and we're gonna stay there."

More than any other player, Jackson drove the Yankees to the top. The Series' Most Valuable Player with a record-breaking five homers and a Series-leading .450 batting average, Jackson stoked a hot bat in September to fire the Yankees to the American League East Division crown.

All his hitting heroics helped him overcome a season of mental pressure that would crumble a lesser man. First, there was the spring training remark that degraded Munson, the Most Valuable Player in the AL last year.

Soon after the remark appeared in a national magazine, Jackson had his celebrated run-in with Manager Billy Martin on national television. The two proud men argued and nearly came to blows in their dugout in Boston, and the TV cameras recorded every moment.

But Tuesday night was a time for the Yankees to bask in the thrill of their victory and the awe of witnessing Jackson's home runs — one of the most powerful and theatrical feats in World Series annals.

"He beat us single-handedly," said Dodger first baseman Steve Garvey. "I've never seen a performance like that in the World Series."

It was the sun and the moon of superstar performances.

"Guys throw around the word superstar a lot," said Jackson. "Guys like Ruth, DiMaggio, Mays, Clemente. But I can say I had one day like those guys."

What Jackson did was tie Babe Ruth's record of three homers in one Series game. It started as if Chris Chambliss would be the hitting hero as he had been last year in New York's playoff conquest of the Kansas City Royals. Burt Hooton walked Jackson on four straight pitches in the second inning, and saw him score on Chambliss' home run.

Then Jackson took matters into his own hands. He smashed a screaming line drive into the right field stands on Hooton's first pitch to him in the fourth. Then, in the fifth, he sent one from Elias Sosa on a similar fast trip into the right field seats.

"The balls were in. That's how they tried to pitch me all Series," said Jackson. "You can pitch me in, but don't knock on the door and announce it. Even a dummy will adjust and I adjusted."

Charlie Hough, a knuckleball pitcher, was hurling the eighth inning. He threw his first pitch down and over the plate, but the result was the same: a mammoth homer—this time to center field, an estimated 450 feet away.

"Nothing can top this," said Jackson. "Who the hell is going to hit three homers to decide a World Series? Hell, I'm not."

But he did.

In Game 5, Jackson homered on his last at-bat. So he ended up smashing home runs on each of his last four swings. Overall in the Series, Jackson broke records for most homers (5), most runs scored (10), most consecutive homers in two games (4) and most total bases (25).

The total base record for a six-game Series previously belonged to Martin, the former Yankee second baseman.

"That's fantastic that he broke my record," said Martin. "Reggie's a super guy. Next year will be a lot easier for him."

It should also be easier for Martin, given a big bonus earlier Tuesday by Steinbrenner, who was on the verge of firing his fiery manager several times this season.

"Doesn't it feel good?" Steinbrenner asked Martin, wrapping him in a bear hug. "I'm proud for you. This is just the start."

"I'm proud for you, too," said Martin, his eyes moist.

Martin was given a cash bonus, a luxury automobile and a rent-free apartment for bringing the Yankees a world championship and keeping the team together ... at least together enough to win.

"We didn't want winning or losing the Series as the reason for rewarding Billy for the good job he did," said Yankee President Gabe Paul.

"Even the guy who won a million dollars in the lottery can't be as happy as I am," Martin said. "Everything is worthwhile now."

The opposite emotion filled the Los Angeles locker room.

"Great game. You put on quite an exhibition," a somber Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda told Jackson, extending his hand.

So the Dodgers traveled to New York in vain. Their outfielders and relief pitchers in the bullpen were showered with garbage by hostile Yankee fans; Garvey and Dave Lopes received death threats Monday night.

But it still was a wonderful season for the happiness boys from Los Angeles. Their April boom crushed Cincinnati and kept the Reds from a shot at a third straight World Series crown.

"We lived by the long ball all season long and we died by the long ball in the Series," said Lasorda, whose club led the National League in homers and smacked a record-tying nine in the Series, including Reggie Smith's homer Tuesday night.

Smith's third-inning solo homer, his third of the Series, had coupled with Steve Garvey's two-run, first-inning triple to give Los Angeles a brief 3-2 lead. But that was buried under the explosion of Jackson's power; a ninth-inning Dodgers run served only to delay the Yankees' celebration.

"I'm proud of the way the guys battled all year long," said Lasorda, the rookie Dodgers manager.

Mike Torrez, the winning pitcher in the pivotal third game and again in the climactic sixth game, yielded nine hits Tuesday night.

"It was a struggling-type game," said he big right-hander, who, if he remains unsigned, will be eligible for the Nov. 4 re-entry draft. "Reggie was just beautiful. Out of sight."

Both Steinbrenner and Jackson said the world title proves the character of a team that gave itself every opportunity to fail, but refused to do so.

"All that controversial stuff made us stronger," said Steinbrenner, Jackson's biggest booster while Martin was one of Jackson's biggest critics.

"We showed what kind of men we are, what kind of human beings we are," said Jackson. "The Bible says a weak man is he who cannot stand adversity."

In this wacky, yet winning season for the Yankees, no one took adversity's punches and came up swinging better than Reginald Martinez Jackson.

"It's a great feeling," said Jackson, savoring the moment and the end of a long, hard season. "Now I know there's a God in heaven."

Dodgers die by long ball

NEW YORK (AP) — The "Big Dodger in the Sky" finally threw Tom Lasorda a curveball.

"Our pitchers just didn't put the ball where they were supposed to," said the Los Angeles manager, "and our hitters didn't hit the ball the way they were capable of."

Lasorda, who claims to bleed Dodger Blue because of his long emotional attachment to he Los Angeles Dodgers organization, was bleeding more than usual Tuesday night after watching the New York Yankees tear apart his reputable pitching staff.

"We lived by the long ball all season and we died by it in the World Series," said Lasorda after the Yankees hit four home runs, three by Reggie Jackson, to bury the Dodgers 8-4 and win the 1977 World Series four games to two.

"I kept hoping and praying that we could get something started ... but it just wasn't to be," said Lasorda, who in the past had whimsically invoked "the Big Dodger in the Sky" for supposedly supernatural help.

Actually, the only thing supernatural that happened Tuesday night appeared to be Jackson's performance. It was the talk of the stunned Dodger locker room.

"I think it was a night when he released a lot of his emotional tension," said Dodger first baseman Steve Garvey, referring to Jackson's season of controversy in New York. "It sure was some performance. I have never seen one like it in my life in a championship game situation."

Lasorda agreed.

"Let's put it this way," said Lasorda. "No one has hit three homers in one World Series game since 1928, so it has to be a hell of a performance. I have never seen any better in a World Series."

While impressed with Jackson and the Yankees as a whole, the Dodgers would not let the loss of a World Series overshadow their brilliant season.

"Nobody on the Dodgers should feel ashamed," said third baseman Ron Cey, "Nobody believed in us at the start of the year, but we proved we were a great ballclub. You have to give credit where credit is due, the Yankees were able to make all the right plays. Their pitchers made the good pitches, and their hitters got the big hits. I know we'll be back next year."

Garvey and Lasorda expressed similar pride in defeat.

"The thing was we never quit, even in the ninth and we were losing by five runs," said Garvey. "We continued to give 100 per cent. That's typical of this Dodger team."

"I'm very proud of this team and the things that it's accomplished this year," said Lasorda. "Whatever we did, we exemplified the character of a true Dodger team, and many people have told me that our players had a lot of class both on and off the field."

Garvey only wished that the script would have had a Hollywood ending for the Dodgers.

"It's an empty feeling," said Garvey. "It's like writing a book without a climax ... but we'll be back."

Loyal fans meet returning team

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More than 200 Dodger fans turned out in the early morning darkness today to sing "Yankee Doodle Dodgers" and greet the returning team.

Observers at Los Angeles International Airport said the team, which lost the World Series to the Yankees and Reggie Jackson Tuesday night, seemed to be cheered by the sight of the faithful fans.

The crowd treated the weary team to a song that sounded something like "Yankee Doodle Dodgers" when the plane landed at 3:45 a.m. PDT.

Kareem flattens Benson

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Kent Benson will remember his first National Basketball Association regular season game — that is, he may when teammates reconstruct it for him — as the night he took Kareem Abdul-Jabbar right out of the game.

However, Benson did it the hard way. Abdul-Jabbar, reacting to an elbow thrown hard to his midsection by Benson, floored the Milwaukee Bucks' rookie center with one wicked right cross to the eye 2:09 into play Tuesday night.

Abdul-Jabbar was ejected and Benson, who incurred a mild concussion, bruises and lacerations, was sent to Lutheran Hospital for X-rays of his badly swollen eye area. The Bucks, apparently missing Benson less than the Los Angeles Lakers missed the NBA's reigning Most Valuable Player, went on to a 117-112 season opening victory.

Brian Winters poured in 26 points for the Bucks, while rookie Marques Johnson threw in three spectacular baskets in a fourth quarter spurt as Milwaukee outscored the Lakers 9-2 for a 103-93 lead with 4:21 to play.

But, as exciting as Johnson was — the 6-foot-7 former UCLA All-American sank 10 of 17 field goal attempts, scored 21 points, snared 12 rebounds and blocked two shots — his exhibition and the Bucks' charge from a 10 point deficit late in the first half were anti-climactic after the Abdul-Jabbar vs. Benson scrap.

Films showed the 6-foot-11, 245-pound Benson, who had said Monday he planned to push and shove Abdul-Jabbar, hurt the brilliant Laker center by elbowing him in the midsection as they jockeyed for position near the Los Angeles basket.

Abdul-Jabbar, wincing, momentarily doubled up in pain and walked away from the area to catch his breath. Then he abruptly strode back toward Benson and lashed out. Benson collapsed to the floor as the capacity crowd of 10,938, angry and astonished, stood and loudly booed Abdul-Jabbar.

Benson staggered up to a sitting position after several seconds and was examined by Bucks' physicians. They helped him to his feet, but he almost immediately sagged back to the floor and sat in a daze for several minutes.

He eventually was escorted to the locker room, and spoke to reporters there late in the third quarter.

"Coming up the floor, Kareem was elbowing me," he said. "We got back down the floor and I elbowed him back. I tried to play defense, and the next thing I got was hit in the face. That's all I got to say."

It was expected that Benson, the first player chosen in the NBA college draft last June, would not play in the Bucks' game at Denver tonight.

The 7-foot-2, 235-pound Abdul-Jabbar hurriedly dressed and left the arena after his ejection.

"He (Benson) just hauled off and threw an elbow into my gut, right around the solar plexus. He just hauled off and hit me," Abdul-Jabbar said.

"I was thinking about the fact I can't let him do that," he said. "If it's an accident, that's one thing. But if someone deliberately tried to hurt you, that's something else. I've been played rough before by a lot of people. You've seen here what people get away with."

Knicks 120, Kings 113

Willis Reed's coaching debut was a success as Earl Monroe poured in 27 points on 12-for-16 shooting and the Knicks compiled a torrid .551 field goal percentage. Scott Wedman led Kansas City with 29.

Reed said after the game that he likes coaching.

"I feel good, I don't have any bruises, I'm not banged up, I'm not tired — at least not physically. But mentally, emotionally — that's something else," the new coach noted.

Bulls 91, Cavaliers 88

Artis Gilmore scored 34 points and Mickey Johnson added 22 points and 19 rebounds for the Bulls, who held off Cleveland comebacks which moved the Cavaliers within one point three times in the fourth period.

Walt Frazier scored 20 points in his Cleveland debut, one less than Campy Russell, the club's high scorer.

"I didn't like my team tonight," said Cleveland's candid coach, Bill Fitch. "We played like an old man's team, and I don't like that."

Pistons 110, Nets 93

Detroit took a 57-36 first-half lead and coasted past the Nets behind Ralph Simpson's 23 points and Bob Lanier's 22 points in 28 minutes. Bird Averitt had 23 for the Nets.

Suns 100, Warriors 83

Alvan Adams scored 12 of his 27 points in the first 10 minutes of the third quarter, when Phoenix moved out to a 19-point lead, and the Warriors never threatened. Rookie Walter Davis added 20 points for the Suns, who held Golden State star Rick Barry to just six points. Sonny Parker and Phil Smith were high for the Warriors with 18 each.

Wolfpack defense a balanced unit

By MIKE BROSSART
PB Staff Writer

Before the 1977 football season began, Claremont High coach Esper Keiser said his main concern was improvement on defense, the weak link in the Wolfpack's chain last year.

After five games, it appears that he can stop worrying about that aspect of the game.

The 'Pack defensive unit ranks as the best in the valley so far. Claremont has surrendered just 27 points for an average of 5.4 per game.

"That's sure a lot better than last year," said Keiser, "when we gave up 71 points in our first two games (against Bonita and Glendora).

"We're just playing very basic offense . . . nothing fancy. It's been a real pleasant surprise for us."

Keiser has trouble singling out a player or two who've contributed more than the rest.

"We have kind of a 'no-name' defense," said the coach. "It's just a situation where there's 11 of them and if you watch them on film everybody has a hand in it. Everybody's doing his job."

In fact, the Claremont coaches have chosen six different defensive players of the week so far.

Tackle Robert Villanueva was picked in the season-opening shutout over Bonita; safety Scott McBride and linebacker Fred Sawyers shared the honor in a 14-3 loss to Glendora, when no offensive player of the week was named; tackle Neil Andreson and end Elias Contreras were both named in a 7-6 loss to Ganesha; two offensive players were chosen in a 21-6 win over Pomona and, last week, defensive back Scott Kegans was judged outstanding in a shutout over Montclair.

According to Keiser, any one of his remaining five defensive starters — nose guard Mike Sevilla, end Gordon Descombes (only a sophomore), linebacker Rusty Harrison, back Jeff Mace and safety Steve Tipping — is liable to be the team's top defensive player in any future game.

Rogie Vachon stops 41 shots

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — A scoreless tie often can be a boring, uninteresting game.

It wasn't Tuesday night as the Los Angeles Kings and New York Islanders battled to a 0-0 deadlock in a National Hockey League contest.

When the hard-fought, close-checking game ended, the crowd of 12,254 at the Nassau Coliseum stood and applauded. Mostly, their praise was for goalies Rogie Vachon of the Kings and Glenn Resch of the Islanders.

Both had played well, particularly Vachon.

The pudgy Kings' netminder stopped 41 shots, and was especially brilliant during a four-minute stretch in the third period when Los Angeles played a man short.

"I felt very good in the warmup and went into the game realizing that I was sharp," the 5-foot-7, 165-pound Vachon said after registering his second shutout in three games this season and the 43rd of his NHL career.

"The Islanders came at me in a hurry and that got me into the game immediately," added the veteran Kings' goalie. "They didn't stop. They kept shooting the puck in. They were coming so quick, I was wondering if they had six or seven guys on the ice at one time."

After the Kings' Dave Hutchinson was given a double minor at 7:50 of the final period, the Islanders did have an extra skater for four minutes.

Then Vachon stopped New York's Clark Gillies on a three-foot thrust from the right side, the Islanders' Gerry Hart hit the goalpost with a shot and the Kings' goalie flopped on his back and made a kick save of a shot by J.P. Parise.

Resch, posting his first shutout of the season and the 15th of his NHL career, did not have nearly as difficult a time as Vachon, making only 28 saves.

Afterward, he admitted that he tries to pattern himself after Vachon. "I picked up some tips from him tonight," Resch confessed, without elaborating.

"He did some very unorthodox things. He was oblivious to all else — it was him against the puck. He seemed to know where the shots were coming from even before we got them off," added Resch.

"We did everything right except score."

New York Coach Al Arbour also praised Vachon. "He was fantastic," he said.

"This was a frustrating type of game," added Arbour.

In the only other NHL game, the Vancouver Canucks got goals from Ron Sedlbauer, Dennis Ververgaert and rookie Jere Gillis and edged the Detroit Red Wings 3-2. Dennis Polonich and Rick Bowness scored power-play goals for the Red Wings.

Hollypark chairman wins

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A bitter months-long proxy fight at Hollywood Park has ended with election of a slate led by Board Chairman Vernon O. Underwood and Mrs. Marjorie L. Everett, the racetrack's largest single shareholder.

The slate captured 58 per cent of the vote Tuesday to decisively beat a five-man board audit committee led by Charles B. "Tex" Thornton, who heads Litton Industries Inc. of Los Angeles, and Howard Keck, president of Superior Oil Co. of Houston.

An outside vote-tabulating firm, Corporation Trust Co., gave the Underwood-Everett slate 1,036,160 votes and the Thornton-Keck slate 749,498. The dissidents received roughly 42 per cent of the 1,785,658 votes declared valid.

Results were announced by Underwood at a meeting at the Inglewood race track attended by some 50 stockholders and track employes and the incoming board. There are about 5,000 shareholders.

Bid made for Caliente

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — The state of Baja California and a group of Mexican businessmen are negotiating to buy the privately owned Caliente Racetrack, says Baja California Governor-elect Roberto De la Madrid.

However, De la Madrid said, he will make no further statement on the situation until after his Nov. 1 inauguration in the Baja California capitol of Mexicali.

The horse and dog track is supervised by the Mexican government, which is involved in the talks, since it oversees the operations of all race tracks in Mexico, De la Madrid said.

The governor-elect denied that San Diego businessman John Alessio is involved in the negotiations. But De la Madrid declined to rule out Alessio as a possible manager of the track, a post he once held.

De la Madrid, former director of the National Lottery, said this year the lottery was negotiating to purchase the track as part of a bid to introduce legalized gambling in Mexico.

Duran, Esteban to fight

NEW YORK (AP) — Roberto Duran of Panama and Esteban de Jesus of Puerto Rico will fight in January to determine who is the true lightweight champion of the world, promoter Don King announced Tuesday.

Duran is recognized as champion by the World Boxing Association while De Jesus is considered champ by the Word Boxing Council.

A spokesman for King said the fight will be held Jan. 14 either at Las Vegas, Nev., or New Orleans and will be televised nationally by CBS.

It will be the third meeting between the two fighters.

De Jesus knocked Duran down in the first round and outpointed him in a 10-round nontitle fight in New York's Madison Square Garden in 1972, the year Duran won the championship by stopping Ken Buchanan of Scotland in 13 rounds. It was Duran's only loss against 60 pro victories, 50 of them by knockout.

'Pack defense has balance

"It's a real balanced crew — we don't have anybody making 40 tackles a game," Keiser said. "As long as they keep improving every week the way they have been we'll be all right.

"Our defense will be tested this week by Garey," the Claremont coach continued. The 'Pack will host the Vikings Friday night at Citrus College.

"Garey is overall the fastest team in the San Antonio League," said Keiser. "(Running back Morris) Cole and (wide receiver David) Forte are both track stars. (Doug) Brissette is mighty quick too and (Elijah) Turner is awfully fast for his size (215 pounds).

"It's hard to defend against that kind of speed because all you have to do is make one mistake and they hurt you."

The Vikings are defending co-champions of the league but another loss would probably knock them out of the title picture this year. Garey is 1-2 in SAL play, but the losses were to co-leaders Chino and Damien.

Other SAL games Friday night will find Pomona at Chino, Upland at Damien and Ganesha at Montclair.

Fortunately, two players who looked as though they might have been inured seriously in last week's games are doing fine.

Pomona's John Bullock and Montclair's Todd Dahl were each removed from the field by stretcher and then ambulance. Bullock had the wind knocked out of him and was unable to breath for a moment, but should be able to play Friday. Dahl suffered a jammed neck but is also expected to be back in action this week.

Gladstone is big surprise

By RAY NELSON
PB Correspondent

A current comparison of this week's Hacienda League standings with the pre-season outlook would show little, if any, correlation.

Whereas Walnut and Royal Oak were expected to be the top two contenders for the league crown, only the former has shown any signs of living up to its forecast. Instead of Royal Oak, a surprising Gladstone team shares the Hacienda top spot with the Mustangs with an identical 3-0 league record.

The Mustangs have utilized a balanced offense and a staunch defense to sweep through the first five weeks of the 1977 campaign with an unblemished 5-0 overall slate.

Steve Green, the senior quarterback who most recently engineered Walnut's 77-0 annihilation of Sierra Vista, has provided the Mustangs with a strong passing game.

Gladstone has swept by such Hacienda foes as Sierra Vista and Ontario, before upsetting Royal Oak last weekend.

The Gladiators are paced by signal-caller Jeff Wirth's throwing arm and the rushing skills of Don Sanderlin.

Ontario and Royal Oak currently share the second spot in the Hacienda, both at 2-1. The Romans, however, hold a 2-3 overall slate while the Jaguars are 4-1.

Hacienda

	League w	l	pf	pa	Overall w	l
Gladstone	3	0	68	20	3	2
Walnut	3	0	139	14	5	0
Ontario	2	1	43	48	4	1
Royal Oak	2	1	45	22	2	3
Alta Loma	1	2	36	48	2	3
San Dimas	1	2	40	64	1	4
Bonita	0	3	7	49	0	5
Sierra Vista	0	3	18	131	0	5

Last week's results
Walnut 77, Sierra Vista 0
Ontario 12, Alta Loma 7
San Dimas 13, Bonita 0
Gladstone 7, Royal Oak 2

Friday's games
Walnut vs. Alta Loma at Chaffey College, 7:30 p.m.
Bonita at Sierra Vista, 7:30 p.m.
Gladstone vs. San Dimas at Bonita High, 7:30 p.m.
Royal Oak vs. Ontario at Chaffey High, 7:30 p.m.

The Jags, while scoring only 43 points this season and giving up 48, have also been somewhat of a surprise. A lack of numbers on the Ontario roster was expected to be the Jaguar's downfall this year.

However, mainly due to the running combination of Tommy Jefferson and Albert Newman, in addition to QB Sonny Medina, they stayed at the top of the league before being stopped by Gladstone.

Jefferson, despite being stymied the last two weeks, has gained 615 yards in 1977 on 102 carries. The junior rusher gained only 90 yards in both of his last two contests combined, seeing action only in the first quarter against the Jags' last opponent, Alta Loma, because of a sprained ankle.

Bringing up the rear of the league are San Dimas, Alta Loma, Bonita, and Sierra Vista.

With the burden of having only two starters returning from last season's championship team in Perry Aris and Mike Nunley, the Saints were expected to have few bright hopes.

However, Don Warhurst's squad has shown improvement and registered their first triumph last week by blanking Bonita.

Quarterback Von Suchanek has been, according to the Saints' head coach, the most pleasant surprise. His passing arm has provided San Dimas with a balanced offensive attack.

Suchanek's favorite receiver this season has been Tom Lloyd, who has garnered 24 receptions for 280 yards and two touchdowns.

Alta Loma, despite getting the services of quarterback Jeff Holloday back, has seen its record fall to 1-2 in league and 2-3 overall.

Bonita (0-5), while holding opponents to just 49 points on the year, has had trouble scoring. Bobby Clark's three-yard run in the fourth quarter against Royal Oak (in the Bearcats' fourth game of the season) has been the only score Bonita has been able to muster.

The Bearcats will be looking to escape the Hacienda cellar Friday night when they travel to Sierra Vista, which also sports an 0-5 overall mark.

'Pack netters still perfect

The Claremont High girls tennis squad kept its perfect San Antonio League record intact Tuesday with an easy 16-2 win over visiting Garey High.

The CHS netters are now 5-0 in SAL matches. The Claremont J.V. squad is also 5-0 after having bumped off Garey 6-0.

The Wolfpack's number one singles player, Karen Claussen, won all three of her matches to pace CHS past Garey. The Claremont number one doubles team of Shanna and Diane O'Brien also won all three of their matches.

Claremont will continue SAL play on Thursday as it will host Chino.

Chaffey, five others in running for JRB

LOS ANGELES — With the football season at the halfway point six California teams and a quartet of out-of-state elevens still boast perfect records in their quest for a bid to the Jr. Rose Bowl Game Dec. 10 in Pasadena.

Fullerton has a 6-0 record and has been ranked number one on the nation most of the season. A pair of Metro Conference giants, Pasadena and Long Beach, also are unbeaten, as is Southern Cal Conference entry Santa Monica. Mission Conference entry Chaffey and Taft, which plays a free-lance schedule.

The out-of-state contention found Jones, Miss. edging Gulf Coast 7-6 last week to up its record to 7-0. Navarro of Texas also won last weekend to move to a 6-0 record, while Minnesota powerhouses Rochester and Golden Valley also are unbeaten.

Mesa Community College of Arizona is also unbeaten, but has been tied once.

Tickets for the 23rd renewal of the Junior Rose Bowl Game are now on sale at most southland community colleges, and also at all Mutual and Ticketron Agencies and at the Pasadena Jaycee office at 181 S. Los Robles.

Hall of Fame pitcher Robin Roberts is the all-time "gopher ball" king with 502 home runs deliveries.

3 racquetball duos win club's first tourneys

Claremont Tennis Club has its first racquetball doubles champions in three events.

Bruce Heimlich and Mark Schaffner teamed to win the men's title in the club's recent first annual doubles championships, defeating finals opponents Larry Ryals and Remi Tremblay, 21-16, 21-13.

Ryals was bidding for his second club crown, having won the singles championship earlier this year.

In the women's competition, Billie Oglesby and Doreen Ramsey finished at the top with a 21-18, 21-16 triumph over Bylle Whedbee and Sheryl Matlock.

Jim and Robin Borden earned the mixed doubles title by dropping Jim McJoynt and Billie Oglesby, 21-14, 21-18.

DRIVE THE 1978 RABBIT.

It's just a wonderful car.
We had an advantage: we started with a wonderful car and made it even better.
Over a million people all over the world have been impressed enough to buy them.
What's so impressive?
Easy. If you trade up to a Rabbit from a Mercedes-Benz 280E, believe it or not you'll get better acceleration.†
If you trade up to a Rabbit from a Cadillac Seville, you'll get more trunk space. And there are 32 cars you can trade up to a Rabbit for more people space.*
The '78 Rabbits look better than ever, too. Handsome metallic colors. Touches of chrome here and there to make them even snappier.

The biggest news of all for '78 can't be seen. And barely heard. We've refined the Rabbit's fuel-injected engine to make it quieter and more efficient.
Once we were famous for making a car that looked ridiculous.
Now we make one that makes the others look ridiculous.

Trojans, Irish gear for traditional rivalry

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Sure, we're going to be nervous going into South Bend to play Notre Dame," said Southern California Coach John Robinson. "But so will they, 'cause they've got to play us."

Robinson is a coach who enjoys the big games, and, if Saturday's nationally televised renewal of the tradition-steeped rivalry between the Trojans and Irish is typical, it will be a war.

"The football games between these two schools have been some of the greatest of all time," Robinson said. "The rivalry and all the outside excitement makes it special, then you add to that the fact that this game has players like Ross Browner, Willie Fry and Luther Bradley going against Charles White, Rob Hertel and Randy Simmrin.

"If the game were played in parking lot P lit up by automobile headlights, it would be a great one," Robinson said.

"It's going to be the most physical game in the country. It's a meeting of two big, fast clubs with the same physical philosophy," the USC coach continued.

"Kaboom! A lot of kaboom, a lot of big guys running into each other."

The game will pit fifth-ranked USC's varied and explosive offense — spearheaded by tailback White, quarterback Hertel and wide receiver Simmrin — against 11th-rated Notre Dame's rugged and veteran defensive corps. Outland Trophy winner Ross Browner and Willie Fry rank as the top defensive end duo in the nation, and cornerback Luther Bradley is also one of the country's best.

The Irish defense has been particularly successful against the rush this fall, allowing no touchdowns and a total of just 390 yards as Notre Dame has posted a 4-1 mark.

Southern Cal, 5-1, also has a good defense, led by tackle Walt Underwood and safety Dennis Thurman.

The game being played in South Bend might give Notre Dame a slight edge, but Robinson said the vocal Irish fans aren't what he's worried about.

"What makes it so tough in South Bend," Robinson said, "is not the stadium or the atmosphere or the gremlin dancing on the sidelines.

"It's the Notre Dame football players. They're pretty doggone good."

The weather in South Bend is expected to be some 30 degrees colder than what the Trojans are accustomed to, but Robinson said that shouldn't make much difference.

"I don't really expect it to be all that cold," Robinson said. "But we'll do the best we can to protect ourselves and prepare...and then forget it, because if it's cold for us, it'll be just as cold for them."

Namath must get used to sidelines

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The starting days as quarterback for the great Joe Namath most probably are at an end.

He'll be on the sidelines when the Los Angeles Rams battle the Minnesota Vikings in the nationally televised National Football League game Monday night, just as he was last Sunday.

There is a big difference.

Young Pat Haden, the starter for the Rams in the latter part of 1976, was the starter against New Orleans reportedly because of a swollen Namath knee that kept him out of a couple of practice sessions.

This week Namath can practice all the way, but the 24-year-old Rhodes Scholar Haden still gets the call and will do the play calling. Namath is the backup man.

Asked about switching to Haden after the 34-year-old Namath started the first four regular NFL games, Coach Chuck Knox told newsmen Tuesday that last week Namath had a sore knee that kept him from some practice and also "We felt we needed a little change."

As for this week, Knox said, "Haden is starting because he played well Sunday" when Los Angeles downed New Orleans 14-7.

The Rams, winners of the NFC West division title the past four seasons, currently are 3-2. In the last start by Namath, who became a free agent for this season after 12 campaigns with the New York Jets, the Rams were upset by the Chicago Bears 24-23. Haden came into that one in the final minute and directed a touchdown drive.

Namath said he was all right physically to start against New Orleans and personally felt the coaching staff just wanted to make a change. He had shared the quarterback job with Haden in the preseason and was the choice to start the regular campaign.

With Broadway Joe at the helm, the Rams were 2-2, losing to Atlanta and the Bears while beating San Francisco and Philadelphia.

In those four, Namath hit 50 of 107 pass attempts for a 46.7 percentage, 606 yards and had five interceptions — four by Chicago.

Haden is 12-of-22 for 235 yards, a 54.5 percentage with one interception.

The former University of Southern California Rose Bowl star also gives more mobility at the quarterback position since he can run where Namath cannot because of gimpy knees that have undergone five operations

So it appears that unless Haden is hurt, the blond scholar will be operating the offense. And Knox indicated that the plan of having the quarterback call his own signals will continue. The men on the field called the plays in the preseason but Knox had the coaches calling them in the regular season opener against Atlanta. He returned the duty to Namath in the second game.

For the past three seasons, the plays had been sent in from the bench.

Haden operates on Monday against the team that faced him a year ago in his first NFL start. With James Harris and Ron Jaworski both injured, the job went to Haden in last year's regular season battle against the Vikings. In overtime it was a 10-10 tie. He also started the NFC championship game won by Minnesota 24-13.

In addition to naming Haden, Knox announced that middle linebacker Jack Reynolds would be activated for the Minnesota game. A regular last year, Reynolds has had contract difficulties and was traded. But NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle negated the trade and returned the defensive star to the Rams. With contract difficulties settled, Reynolds has rejoined the club.

Jim Youngblood will start at the middle linebacker spot, as he has all this season, but to make room for Reynolds, the Rams released Rick Kay, a four-year veteran.

Paterno wins big in life

DANVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Joe Paterno has a reputation for winning the big ones — the Orange Bowl, the Cotton Bowl. But the Penn State coach's greatest victory came this week when his 11-year-old son opened his eyes and smiled.

Paterno, one of the nation's foremost college football coaches, was not there last Saturday when his 10th-ranked Nittany Lions beat Syracuse. He was anxiously pacing the halls of the Geisinger Medical Center here, where his son David lay near death.

Inside the intensive care ward, doctors worked frantically to save his son. Outside, Paterno prayed, comforted his wife, Sue, and reaffirmed his commitment to family over football.

"It took a maximum effort to save him," said Dr. Henry Hood, chief of the medical center's neurosurgery department. "It took all the skills, techniques and equipment, but he responded."

David Paterno, a sixth grader, fractured his skull after falling from a trampoline at school Friday, the day before his father's team faced the game at Syracuse.

The oldest of five Paterno children, David remained in serious condition Tuesday, but he regained consciousness and smiled at his parents. The boy's prognosis is good, but it could be weeks before the full extent of his injuries are known.

The accident created a personal and professional dilemma for Paterno. National rankings were at stake and a post-season bowl bid might be in the balance.

But Paterno knew he could not be in Syracuse. Even the crowds, the excitement, and a chance for his 106th career win could not sway him from what he values most — his family.

The Nittany Lions escaped with a 31-24 win. It was the first time in 12 years as head coach that Paterno was not roaming the sidelines on game day.

Paterno returned to Penn State Tuesday, shortly after his son came out of a coma. He spent most of the day with his coaches and players, preparing for Saturday's game against West Virginia.

The Paternos value their privacy and refused to discuss their son's condition.

"He has always assigned the highest priority to his wife and family," Hood said.

Something's got to give in Claremont leagues

IT'S CROWDED AT THE TOP in all five of the Claremont city tennis leagues. There are two-way deadlocks for first place in the men's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles leagues, a three-way tie heads the women's doubles ladder and five women's singles players entered the week in a dead heat for the lead.

John Moore and Dennis Robbie have perfect 56-point totals after four weeks of men's singles action and will square off this Saturday to break their standoff. Behind them in the standings are Bob Shamah and Ralph Spaulding, tied at 48 each, and George Morgan and Bob Roser, 46 each.

The men's doubles leaders are the unbeaten teams of Dave Waldman-Bill Grist and Phil Banks-John Rutter, and they'll clash for sole possession of first place Saturday. Behind the leaders' 56 points are Bill and Ed Wojtkowski, 53; Jack Verheyden and Bruce Manheim, 50; and Steve Stires and Wes Davis, 48.

In mixed doubles Rick Pawley and Pat Turner will have a Saturday engagement with their co-frontrunners, Jim and Lynne Oros. With a perfect 56 points, these duos are trailed by Herb and Kate Hoskins, 53; Bob and Sylvia Connolly, 50; and Jerry Baker and Florence Adams, 49.

Topping the women's A doubles standings after three weeks are the teams of Audrey Bates and Mary Lane, Helen Mayne and Geri Johannsen and Ann Baker and Penny Maag, all unbeaten with 42 points. Sue Reed and Nancy Conger rate fourth with 39 and Roxie Hanseth and Wanda Cunningham have 39.

Moving into the third week of Tuesday women's singles competition, five players had won their first two matches: Joyce Schaffer, Sylvia Connolly, Irene Himes, Debbie Spaulding and Phyllis Douglas.

THE DEFENDING CHAMPS have advanced to the semi-finals of this year's doubles championships at the Claremont Tennis Club but two other prominent tandems are out of the running. Perennial winners Stan Clark and Chuck Anderson posted a straight-set conquest of Kurt Dietel and Gerry Gollin last weekend to gain their place in the semis action scheduled for Saturday. But upsets stunned the Jim Lucke-Charles Zetterberg and Dave Click-Ray Reinhard duos, as Rick Roper and Jack Smith edged Lucke and Zetterberg, 7-6, 3-6, 6-3, and Mike Gozansky and Al Bertram ousted Click and Reinhard, 7-6, 6-7, 6-2.

Roper and Smith will oppose Clark and Anderson in the round of four while Gozansky and Bertram face a quarterfinals test against Paul and Carl Skvarna. Another quarters encounter matches Straight Clark and Geoff Clark against Pete Pollock and Dr. C. Balakrishnan. Both semi-final contests are scheduled for 11 a.m. Saturday and the finals will be played at 11 a.m. Sunday.

CITRUS COLLEGE will stage two two-day tournaments for C players on the successive weekends of Oct. 29-30 and Nov. 5-6. Events will include men's singles and doubles, women's singles and doubles and mixed doubles.

Entry deadline is Thursday and the fees are $6 for singles and $8 per doubles team. The college's physical education department, 18824 E. Foothill Blvd., Azusa, will provide entry forms. Tournament director is Citrus tennis Coach Mike Meissenburg.

LEA ANTONOPLIS this week is back in England, the scene of perhaps the major triumph in her young career. Early last summer, she won the Wimbledon junior girls championship over an international field. Now, the hard-hitting 18-year-old from Glendora is in London as part of a five-member team of U.S. girls competing against a counterpart British group which includes Sue Barker. The annual competition is for women 21-and-under. Lea took time out from her freshman classwork at USC to make the trip.

WORLD TEAM TENNIS, its latest controversy and its prospects came under scrutiny in a survey conducted by It's a Racquet during the Island Holidays Pro Tennis Classic at the Royal Lahaina Tennis Ranch on the Hawaiian island of Maui.

The controversial issue was supplied during the U.S. Open at Forest Hills by Bjorn Borg's mentor, Lennart Bergelin. He claimed that the rigors of playing a WTT schedule were responsible for Borg's shoulder injury that forced him to default in the Open.

"Funny," Tom Gorman, player-coach with the Sea-Port Cascades this year, responded in Hawaii, "Bergelin didn't say anything about team tennis when Borg won Wimbledon earlier in the summer. And he didn't say anything about the time Borg was injured in a tournament before Wimbledon two years ago when he wasn't even playing team tennis.

"It's sour grapes, that's what it is. Injuries happen, whether it's team tennis or a tournament."

Gorman, whose team will play as the Seattle Cascades entirely in that city next year, says WTT can have a brighter future only by recruiting the top men players, including Connors and Guillermo Vilas.

"We're talking about maybe six players," Gorman said. "Look, what it really comes down to is money. The owners are going to have to put it up to get the players."

But Cleveland Nets player-coach Marty Riessen doesn't think it will happen and, in fact, doubts his own team will be able to retain star player Borg. "I don't know whether he's going to sign for another year or not, but I don't think he is."

As for Bergelin's statement, Riessen fumed aloud, "He was wrong. It wasn't team tennis that caused the injury at all. I like Lennart very much, but he made a terrible mistake. He never wanted Borg to play team tennis."

Still another viewpoint on the stress of WTT vs. tournament tennis was advanced by Vijay Amritraj, a former Los Angeles Strings player who skipped WTT this past season. "It depends on the player," said the affable veteran from India. "If he's a good player who usually gets into the semi-finals of a tournament, then tournament tennis would be more of a strain than team tennis. But if he's the kind of player who doesn't get past the first or second round, then obviously team tennis is more of a strain."

As for his own attitude toward WTT, Amritraj was all smiles. "I like team tennis, I really do, even though I didn't play this past season. I may play it next year."

JIMMY CONNORS' victory in the Island Holidays tournament boosted the 1976 world's champ into a solid position among contenders for places in the Colgate Masters in January. The eight players heading the Grand Prix points standings qualify for the big event at New York's Madison Square Garden and Connors now ranks sixth, thanks to the 100 points he picked up in Hawaii.

If he ends up in the Masters, as he apparently hopes to do, he'll likely have another shot at Guillermo Vilas and Bjorn Borg, the players who derailed him in the finals of the year's two biggest tournaments, Vilas winning at Forest Hills and Borg at Wimbledon. Vilas ranks first on the Grand Prix list, and Borg is third, with Brian Gottfried second. Below the top three is a tightly bunched group, Raul Ramirez, Manuel Orantes, Connors, Roscoe Tanner, Harold Solomon, Phil Dent and Eddie Dibbs, vying for the final five places.

THE WOMEN'S PHASE of Colgate-sponsored action will have its climactic fling in Southern California Nov. 1-6. The Mission Hills Country Club at Palm Desert will be the site of the Colgate Series Championships, which, like the site of the Masters, will be contested among eight point leaders.

Chris Evert is far ahead of this field, and the next three players in line, Virginia Wade, Martina Navratilova and Betty Stove, also are assured of qualifying for the final $250,000 event. Kerry Reid, Dianne Fromholtz, Sue Barker, Mima Jausovec, Wendy Turnbull, Billie Jean King and Laura DuPont are in a close skirmish for the other four spots.

Rangers drop PCSL game

The Foothills United Rangers dropped a 4-2 decision to the visiting South Bay Vikings recently in Pacific Coast Soccer League Division 4 action.

James Altherr and Aaron Priscock scored the Rangers goals, with assists by Danny Freitas and Jimmy Kennelly.

This weekend the Rangers have a bye. They will resume PCSL action on Saturday, Oct. 29 with a match in Palos Verdes vs. the Palos Verdes Ajax.

Bonita nabs tennis win

The Bonita High girls tennis team ran its Hacienda League record to 5-2 and its season record to 9-2 with a 14-4 win over host San Dimas Tuesday afternoon.

Bonita also took the J.V. match with S.D. by a 18-0 score.

The Bearkittens will continue H.L. net action on Thursday by traveling to Gladstone. That match will start at 3:15 p.m.

The first time Lee Trevino played golf he used a broomstick for a club.

Kickers, Astros vie

The Diamond Bar Kickers risk their hold of first place in the Pacific Soccer League Division III standings this Saturday when they play the second-place Upland Astros in a 3 p.m. match at Simons Junior High in Pomona.

Diamond Bar moved into first place by blanking the South Bay Gunners, 3-0, on goals by Mike Brocki, Jeff Ratajczak and Tony de la Rambelje.

The Kickers were led on defense by fullbacks Mike Spurrier, Jay Mace and Dave Ryan plus midfielders Art Davis, Rocky Crisp and Ratajczak. Goalie Dave Price had several 'point blank' saves.

Saints rally for win

The Diamond Bar-Walnut Saints hold a solid position in second place in the Pacific Soccer League Division IV standings after rallying to beat the Palos Verdes Ajax, 3-1, last Saturday.

Randy Lack, Caleb Suri and Alex Solomon scored the three second half goals which enabled the Saints to rally from an 1-0 halftime deficit.

The Saints' defense, led by fullbacks Harvey Watson, Brian Berrie and Kevin Kaufman, allowed only seven shots on goals which made things easier for goalies Matt Worley and Matt Stone. Midfielders Shawn Hanks, Jeff Robinson and Robbie Cook helped control the play in the second half.

Coach Larry Hanks was especially happy with the way his team bounced back after seeing an apparent tying goal nullified by an offsides penalty early in the second half.

The Saints return to action at noon Saturday against the Palos Verdes Raiders at Chaparral Intermediate School in Diamond Bar.

Mike Stuart faces Chavez

LOS ANGELES — Mike Stuart, 11-2 with five knockouts, will fight Mexico's Mario Chavez, 12-5 with six knockouts, in the featured 10-round main event at the Olympic Auditorium Thursday night.

Lancers play to 2-2 draw

Chris Ayala and Gilbert Davila scored goals for the Pomona Lancers in a 2-2 tie against the Palos Verdes Panthers last Saturday in Pacific Soccer League Division III action.

The Lancers return to action Saturday in an 1 p.m. game against the Manhattan Beach Hurricanes at Simons Junior High in Pomona followed by a 3 p.m. match between the first-place Diamond Bar Kickers and second-place Upland Astros.

Market activity

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks headed lower in fairly active trading Wednesday as investors waited for the government's third-quarter gross national product report.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal said the "marked slowing in the rate of economic growth" expected in the GNP report to be released during the afternoon "shouldn't make us forget our generally excellent economic performance" since March 1975.

Blumenthal, in a speech prepared for delivery in Houston, also said the GNP report should not "obscure the underlying strength and health of the U.S. economy."

Against this background, the Dow Jones industrial average was off 1.12 points to 819.39 shortly before noon EDT. The closely watched average is off more than 180 points for the year.

Declines outnumbered advances, 554 to 444, among the 1,520 issues crossing the tape. The 522 unchanged issues reflected some investor uncertainty.

New York Stock Exchange volume at the two-hour mark amounted to about 8,700 000 shares, compared with 8,090,000 traded during the same period Tuesday.

Rorer Group was the most active NYSE issue, up 1 to 145⅛. Eastern Gas & Fuel was second, off ⅜ to 18⅝.

Jim Walter was third, up ¼ to 28⅜. Jim Walter preferred D stock was fourth, off ⅛ to 30⅝.

Xerox was off ¾. The company reported third-quarter earnings of $1.32 a share, compared with $1.19 a year ago.

Memorex was off 1¼ following sharp losses in the previous two sessions. Analysts were disappointed with the firm's earnings.

Inxeco Oil was off after reporting its third-quarter earnings fell to 29 cents a share from 38 cents a year ago.

Flintkote, which reported higher third-quarter earnings, was ahead ½. The company raised its quarterly dividend payment and declared a threeecent extra payout.

Prices were mixed in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange issues. Houston Oil & Minerals was the most active Amex issue, off 1⅝ to 29⅛. Hycel was second, up ½ to 4⅝. Adobe Gas & Oil was third, up ¾ to 18½.

Sales of waterbeds rising

LOS ANGELES (BW) — The 1977 national retail sales volume of waterbeds is projected at $234,800,000 according to Ike Fogel, president of the Waterbed Manufacturers Association.

"That figure represents a 50 percent increase over the year of 1976," Fogel said. He made the projection following an Orlando, Fla. meeting of eastern waterbed manufacturers concluded earlier.

The increase, Fogel said, is due primarily to increased consumer recognition that flotation sleep systems offer a better night's rest. "The image of waterbeds is changing rapidly as people see what the waterbed retailer is offering them," Fogel said. He said that in the early days of the industry's development, people thought of a waterbed as "a sack of water on the floor with a hippie on it."

Broker merger slated

NEW YORK (LENS) — The American securities industry this week became more concentrated. Dean Witter and Reynolds Securities announced plans for the largest merger in Wall Street history.

If the deal goes through, the merged firm will be second only to Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith in revenues ($279 million). In capital ($166 million) it would rank third, after Merrill Lynch and Salomon Brothers.

The new firm will be well placed when listed securities are traded in the over-the-counter market, since this needs substantial capital. The official deadline is Jan. 1, 1978, though the broking community is lobbying for a delay.

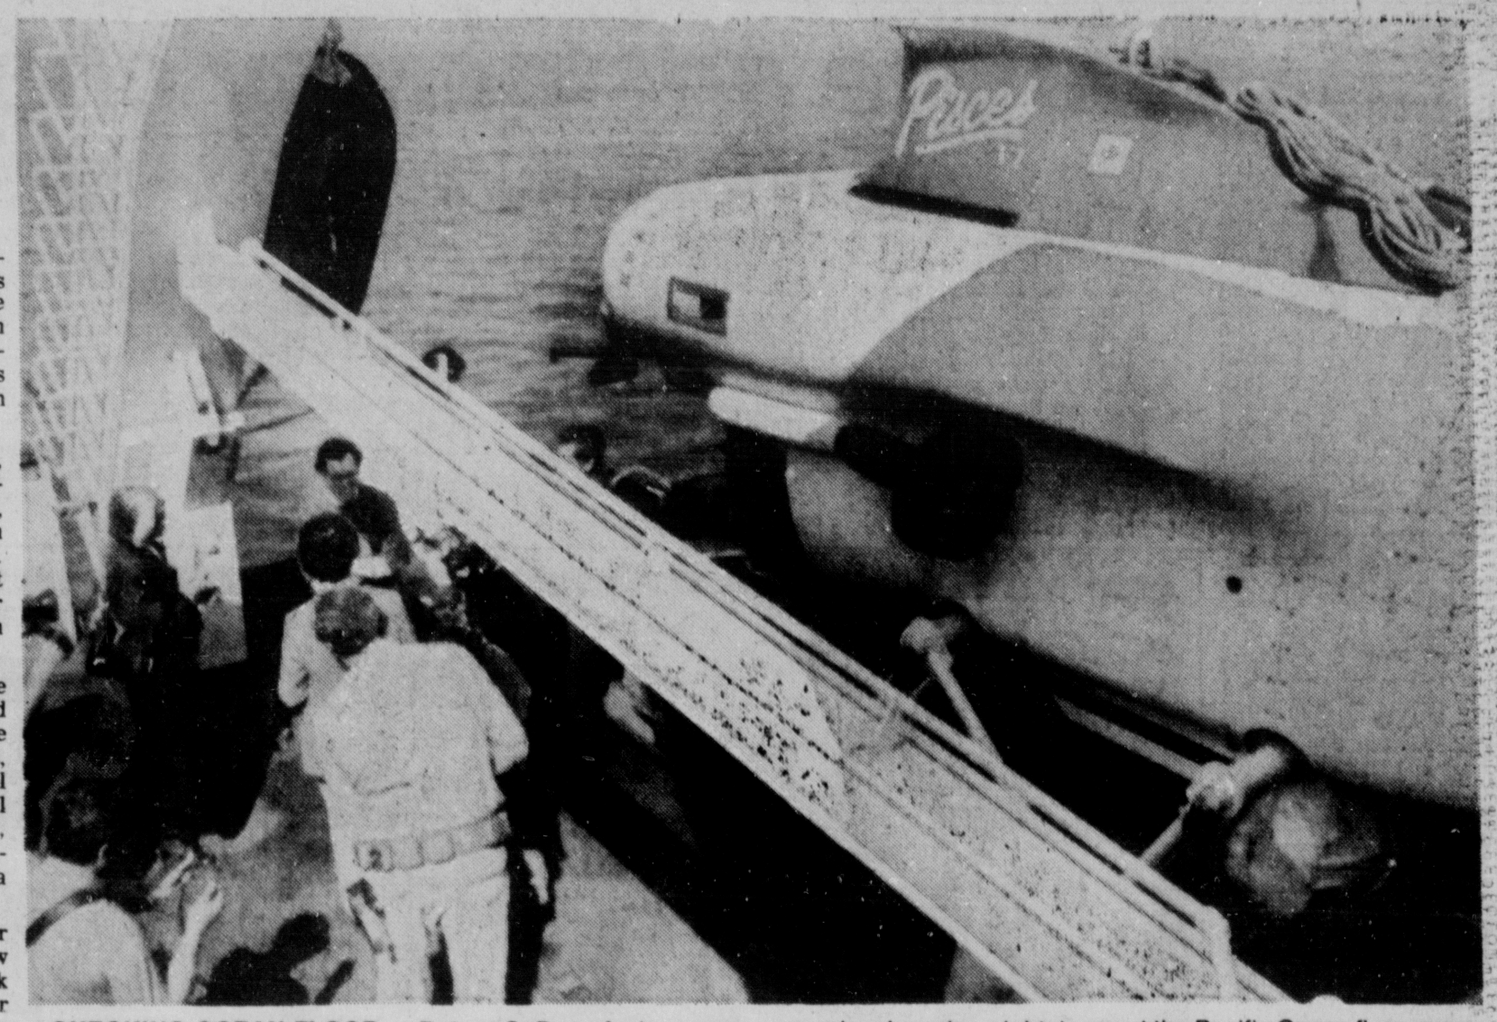
The deal makes sense for both brokers. It will allow them to combine stock orders in one computer operation, thus lowering unit costs — a big saving when the stock market is weak and trading volume low. Dean Witter is well represented in the far West, where it is based. Reynolds is strong along the Eastern seaboard. There is scope for rationalizing outlets in 33 cities. Salesmen and research analysts in many branch offices are looking nervously at their jobs.

The merger especially favors Reynolds, which has lagged behind the profit performance of other retail brokerage firms. Dean Witter will bring rich investment banking clients and underwriting business to the combination. The exchange of shares will dilute the 17 per cent stake in Reynolds held by Compagnie Arabe et Internationale d'Investissement (50 per cent owned by Arab financial interests) into a less imposing 6 per cent of the combined group.

The deal hurries the recent drive towards concentration on Wall Street, where the 25 largest brokers now have 64.5 per cent of the capital, 56.4 per cent of the commission business and 63.9 per cent of the revenue. Firms like Shearson, Hayden Stone; Paine Webber, and Drexel Burnham Lambert, which have been adding branches, must again get out their slide rules to see if they should get bigger.

A fierce bear market would trigger further concentration. Before the merger with Reynolds was mooted, Dean Witter was having talks with Rauscher Pierce, one of the largest firms in the Southwest. These talks could yet be revived.

Mergeritis has revived the argument over whether the freedom of many brokers to negotiate commissions leads to the survival of the fewer, fatter and oligopolistic brokers — and thus in the end to a reduction of competition.



CHECKING OCEAN FLOOR — Robert S. Dyer, facing camera, talks with news people in San Francisco shortly before scientists went out to sea where they will use the small research submarine, right, to scout the Pacific Ocean floor near a radioactive waste dumpsite to gauge the extent of the contamination from leaking drums.

Datsun price for 1978 up 3.3 percent

CARSON (BW) — Nissan USA announced prices for six of its 1978 model passenger car and truck lines which will go on public sale in late October and November.

Robert O. Link, vice president and general manager of sales, said the prices represent a sales-weighted increase of 3.3 percent, or $148 per vehicle, over the equivalent 1977 models.

Link attributed the boost in the suggested retail prices to higher costs for material, labor and shipping. "We still consider our cars and pickup trucks to be competitively priced in the marketplace and an outstanding value in quality and economy of operation," Link said.

The lowest-priced Datsun for 1978 is the standard two-door sedan version of the B-210, with a suggested retail sticker of $3,148.

The four-model B-210 line, two front-wheel drive F-10 models, the 200-SX sports coupe and two Z sports cars will be introduced in more than 1,000 Datsun showrooms later this month.

The 1978 version of two 810 models and three pickup trucks will reach dealerships in mid or late November.

Link also said that prices for an all-new mid-sized line to replace the 710 series will be announced shortly.

Following is a list of Datsun's 1978 prices in comparison with 1977 figures:

The suggested price includes vehicle preparation charges, but not destination and handling charges, or state and local taxes, if any.

Due to special emission controls in California, 1978 models sold in that state are $74 higher, except for the fuel-injected 810 and 280-Z which are $84 higher.

Steelmakers resent government attitude

PITTSBURGH (AP) — If domestic steelmakers practiced the same below-cost pricing used by foreign exporters to the American market "it wouldn't take 60 days to throw them in jail," said Edgar B. Speer, U.S. Steel Corp. chairman.

The Clayton Act (of 1914) outlawed the pricing of goods below cost in order to drive competition out of business, and the Trade Act of 1974 restated it, said Speer, reading the latter act's statement of purposes.

Paragraph 4 of the statement declares as one of the aims "to provide adequate procedures to safeguard American industry and labor against unfair or injurious import competition." Section 301 authorizes the President to impose quotas.

But, he said, when foreign producers sell at below production costs "we think it's lovely" instead of enforcing promptly the legislation on the books. The 20 million tons of imported steel, he indicated, is the equivalent of 100,000 domestic jobs.

Eager to point out the implications of steel's difficulties for the local and national economies, the chairman contrasted the $30-a-ton discount obtained by the American buyer of foreign steel with what he said were much higher costs in unemployment compensation and lost domestic production.

In a blunt interview Oct. 12, the day before he and other steel company executives met at the White House, Speer expressed resentment over what he felt was a failure of Washington to respond to the industry's difficulties.

Since 1974, he said, steel producers have tried without success to win the ear of federal officials about imports. "Now we're invited down in 1977." He paused. "Invited," he said again, drawing out the pronunciation. "In 1977 ... big deal."

Speer said the industry finally won attention to its problems — imports, environmental regulations, capital shortage — only when they became social problems, with plants closing and "60,000 people hitting the bricks."

He was said to be more optimistic after the meeting with President Jimmy Carter, encouraged by the likelihood of limits on "dumped" imports as well as possible relief from strict enforcement of environmental regulations.

Commenting on a wide range of steel-related subjects, Speer referred to what he claimed was the illogical administration of environmental regulations and interference by government in pricing.

"We're in 100 per cent agreement with the objectives" of the environmental effort, he said, but he questioned the "uneconomic" applications of the regulations.

It is unrealistic to expect companies to spend millions of dollars refitting plants that soon will be phased out, he said, advocating instead that newly built plants only be held to "standards that meet the best known technology."

Chairman also of the American Iron and Steel Institute, and thus a chief industry spokesman, Speer said some of the industry's problems were compounded by Washington's attitude toward pricing. In effect, steel is a regulated industry, he said.

"It is not formally regulated, but informally it is just as tightly regulated as other basic industries," he said, naming among them natural gas, oil and transportation.

In shirtsleeves, speaking tartly, Speer observed that "every industry the government puts under control is in trouble." Leaning forward, he snapped that the government couldn't operate a house of ill repute at a profit.

Too often, he suggested, the industry's complaints that it and its workers are being hurt by subsidized imports have drawn the reaction that the problems arise from the cyclical nature of the industry or from mismanagement.

How to become top management

LOS ANGELES (BW) — If you want to be a member of top management earning at least $30,000 a year, you statistically stand the best chance of moving up the corporate ladder with a background in marketing and sales and a degree in business administration, a national executive recruiting firm said.

But, according to Los Angeles-based Hergenrather & Co., a financial background is likely to get you a bigger salary . . . while a general staff background — or one in finance — may get you to the top just a little sooner.

Those are among the findings of a computerized survey of background data on nearly 3,000 top executives in all industries and professional fields conducted by Hergenrather, which pioneered executive recruiting on the West Coast 23 years ago.

The survey covered executives with backgrounds in five basic job functions — marketing, manufacturing, finance, engineering and research, and general staff (including positions in management information systems, legal and medical specialists, and college and public administrators).

According to the Hergenrather survey:

—Nearly 50 percent of all executives studied had held positions in marketing before they entered executive management.

—But the highest paid executives come from finance backgrounds: some 75 percent of these executives earn above $40,000 a year, compared with 50 percent of the executives with financial backgrounds (8.5 percent).

—The largest number of young executives — age 36 and under — reached top management from general staff backgrounds (8.6 percent of those reporting) followed closely by executives with financial backgrounds (8.5 percent).

—By contrast, executives with manufacturing backgrounds tend to reach general management later than those from any other categories studied — by 43 years of age, on the average.

—The average executive works for four different companies before he gets to a top management post, with those from engineering and research backgrounds making the most changes — five.

The Hergenrather study also found that business administration was the major subject of study in college for 54 percent of all the executives surveyed, and for at least half of the executives from every function except engineering and manufacturing.

Executives with marketing backgrounds, however, had fewer graduate degrees than executives from any other function. The greatest number of doctorates are held by executives with engineering and research backgrounds — and 55 percent of these executives earn over $40,000 a year, the second highest percentage after finance.

Champagne aristocracy challenged by reds

REIMS, France (AP) — A new Communist mayor in this capital of French champagne has turned the opulent city hall from a select gentlemen's club into a center for leftist politicking.

Mayor Claude Lamblin and his Communist-Socialist city council have made few concrete changes in their six months in office. But their new, frankly political style has profoundly troubled the "champagne aristocracy" that used to administer Reims like a private business.

The leftist victory here in last March's municipal elections was part of a sweep that catapulted the Socialist-Communist alliance into control of 70 per cent of French cities with more than 30,000 inhabitants.

Lamblin's triumph in a middle-class provincial capital, and his administration since then, illustrate political shifts across the country that have given the leftist alliance an edge in crucial national elections next March.

The upset win, by about 1,500 votes in a city of 200,000, closed an 18-year era of traditional government presided by Mayor Jean Taittinger, scion of the region's best known champagne family and a supporter of President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

Since then, the former city fathers have criticized Lamblin's team for everything from inertia to economic naivete to sinister political manipulation — to wearing sandals and turtleneck sweaters around city hall.

"This can't last; it can't last," said Dominique Hanrot, president of the Chamber of Commerce and Industry headquartered in a former 18th century baron's mansion. "The Communist party is trying to put its grip on everything."

In an effort to extend municipal control, city hall has installed envoys on governing bodies of a number of private charities that traditionally have handled social needs such as child care centers or sports fields.

It has set up neighborhood committees to discuss city policies — and, critics say, prepare for the national elections next March.

Plans are under way to expand the 1,500-strong municipal work force to take over services such as garbage pickup, park maintenance and street lighting traditionally farmed out on contract to private companies.

"It's the setting up of the Communist apparatus in Reims," said Jean-Louis Schneiter, former assistant mayor and centrist candidate for the National Assembly poll in March. "What was administration of the city for the last 20 years has become political action in the optic of the legislative elections."

Lamblin, true to form in a salmon-colored turtleneck sweater, tells a visitor that his city hall work fits "into the perspective of making profound changes in the country."

"Changes on the municipal level are important," adds the 40-year-old former school teacher in his lush Renaissance-style office. "But only after changes on the national level can they really bear fruit."

An unemployed Reims laborer who wrote to Lamblin asking for work as a truck driver on the city payroll got a similar campaign speech instead of a job.

"The only satisfactory solution is a change in policies on the national level," responded Michel Delaitre, Lamblin's top assistant, in an Aug. 5 letter. "As for us, we support the proposals of the left. (Their) application is the only real way out of the crisis."

Despite being locked into a budget voted by the outgoing administration, the Lamblin city hall has made several gestures to its Socialist-Communist image.

It increased by about 300 the number of children getting cutrate or free school lunches, but had to cancel free tennis lessons in a workers' neighborhood to do it.

It also gave civil service job protection to 176 more municipal employes and promised to add another 75 to the rosters. Labor union subsidies went up about $5,000.

These measures were designed to appeal to residents of the new suburban neighborhoods that increasingly ring Reims and cities across France, providing a growing electorate for Socialist and Communist candidates. Lamblin himself lives in the biggest such quarter in Reims, called the Red Cross.

"I voted for our mayor because he ... took care of us pretty well," said a middleaged woman waiting for a bus in the Red Cross area. "I've always voted left. I think they take care of the workers a lot better."

The ultramodern Red Cross complex houses 26,000 persons. Like many such recent developments, it seems vaguely hostile to families arriving from surrounding villages for jobs in Reims factories.

The influx has boosted the Reims population from about 135,000 when Taittinger took over in 1958 to 167,000 10 years later to the more than 200,000 now.

"I used to tell Mr. Taittinger, these new neighborhoods are going to beat you," said Jean Falala, a rightist parliament member who lost to Lamblin after Taittinger declined to run again.

Nose hair remover

WARREN, Ohio (AP) — The father-son team of James E. and James F. Ciortan set out to build a better mouse trap. Or, to be more precise, a better way for people to rid themselves of nose hairs.

Tweezers seemed too cumbersome to the Ciortans, so they invented the electric nose hair remover.

Like tweezers, the nose hair remover is small enough to be carried in a pocket. It plugs into household electrical sockets. And there's a tiny rotary blade up front that snips hair but never pulls it, the inventors say.

They have applied for patents in the U.S. and Canada. When it goes into production, the nose hair remover is expected to cost "under $10," the elder Ciortan says.

Confident of their product's success? Of course the men say.

"Have you ever stood next to someone with nose hairs sticking out? Why, it's just vulgar," the senior Ciortan said.
